Oshawa Men Wait Martin In Next Move

Mayor Claims Union Chief Has Approved Settlement Proposals

C.I.O. RANKS WEAKENING

Organizer's Claim Of 100 P.C. Backing Is Foolish Hall States

OSHAWA, Ont., April 21.—(CP).—Conference talk was in the air again to-day as union leaders in the General Motors strike awaited the arrival of Homer Martin, President of the United Automobile Workers from Washington.

The company's attitude on the talkes of conference was not known as the 14th day of the strike began. Union heads indicated they would seek a mid-morning meeting with General Motors officials. What connection, if any, Martin's arrival would have with negotiations was not known.

The union chief, in Washington yesterday, said the executive board of the U.A.W.A. had voted financial support for the Oshawa strikers, no sum was named. He did not reveal the outcome of discussions regarding possibility of a sympathy strike by General Motors workers in the United States.

A proposed conference with General Motors yesterday did not materialize. Hugh Thompson, organizer for the Committee for Industrial Organization with which the U.A.W.A. is allied said the union requested a postponement.

Says Martin Approves

Martin, expected to address a meeting of the strikers to-night, is claimed by Mayor Alex Hall as having approved settlement proposals the men rejected Monday night.

The Mayor said heiphoned Martin at Washington after receiving the company's offer and was congratulated by the union president "on the terms of settlement I had obtained."

Thompson last night said both he and Martin recommended the proposals that went before the meeting but did not approve them. He maintained the strikers did not actually turn down the proposals, but "the method of presenting them," and that the men wanted a signed agreement before going back to work.

The union organizer indicated he was not disturbed by reports of de-

UNION TAKES HOLD

Independent Union of Longshoremen Start Work on Montreal Docks.

MONTREAL, April 21.—(CP). — Longshoremen boarded two Cunard-White Star Liners, the Andania and Aniania, immediately after they docked here to-day and began unloading cargoes.

The dock workers are members of the National Independent Union of Longshoremen which holds a contract with the Shipping Federation of Canada to handle all ships in Montreal harbor this year.

Threat of a boycott of all Federation ships docking on the Eastern United States seaboard was heard a week ago by Joseph B. Ryan, President of the International Longshoremen's Association, unless the contract was awarded to the I.L.A., endeavoring to obtain control of the harbor labor situation here.

Miss Marian Coon Tells Members Of Her Work In The Far East

GREAT CHANGES IN CHINA

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAVAN, April 20 — On Sunday morning, in Cavan United church, the W.M.S. held their special missionary service, with Miss Marian Coon, missionary on furlough from West China, as guest speaker.

In a very pleasing, interesting manner Miss Coon told of her work in that country, where much progress has been made in missionary work. She says there is a new spirit of friendliness very encouraging to the missionaries. The work carried on in the schools is now showing in the lives of the people. Young people educated in Christian schools have returned to their homes filled with the ambition to lead Christian lives and influence their friends in the right way.

Great Changes in China

Great changes are seen in China. The Generalissimo, who is the idol of his people, is a Christian and co-operates with the missionaries. Roads have been built for automobile travelling, planes are in common use, hospitals and schools have been improved, the Gospel of Public Health is preached, consequently the homes are cleaner and disease less prevalent. There is a new type of father and mother and the people are coming to church to hear and know.

The Cavan congregation were pleased to welcome Miss Coon, not only for the splendid message so well given, but because her father, the Rev. C. Coon, had been a popular pastor of Cavan Circuit and she had spent four years of her school days on this circuit. A thankoffering was placed upon the collection plates for W.M.S. work.

A baptismal service was held when Paul Douglas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eldred Snider, Leonora Catharine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milford Byers, and Hazel Doreen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melville Carr, were baptised.

Personals

Mr. Gordon Staples of the O.A.C., Guelph, is home after completing his fourth year on his degree course.

Mrs. Mary Nill has returned to her home in Cavan, after spending the winter with her sister, Mrs. Eagleson, Plainville.

ROBERTA SEMPLE DISRUPTS COURT

Resents Charge She Is Tool In Hands Of Former Temple Lawyer

LOS ANGELES, April 21.—(A An assertion "Roberta Semple is a tool in the hands of Jacob Moidel," brought an outcry from the daughter of Aimee Semple McPherson yesterday which threatened momentarily to upset the orderly trial of her $150,000 slander suit against her mother's lawyer, Willeid Andrews.

The statement Moidel, former Angelus Temple lawyer, dominated Roberta was made by Joseph Scott, defence counsel.

"We take the position that Roberta Semple is and was a tool in the hands of Jacob Moidel, he tells her what to do and she does it. He dominates her. The best evidence of this is that Moidel told Roberta to get her clothes and leave the temple."

The tiny, demure daughter of Mrs. McPherson leaped to her feet, her blue eyes flashing.

"And did I?" she screamed.

Miss Semple's two lawyers pulled her down into her chair. Aimee, sitting beside Scott, opened her mouth to reply but Judge Clarence Kincaid reprimanded Roberta before anyone else could speak and the incident was over.

Miss Semple was expelled from Angelus Temple last October. In the slander suit she accused Andrews of saying the expulsion resulted from her alleged efforts to "intimidate, coerce and blackmail" her evangelist mother.

When Roberta left the temple, Mrs. McPherson has testified, it was at the behest of Moidel who had just engaged in a serious argument with Mrs. McPherson.

Aimee said Moidel grabbed Roberta by the hand, pulled her out the door, and shaking his fist at the Temple cried: "You've gone in that place for the last time."

Farmer Flags Train And Prevents Wreck

ITUNA, Sask., April 21 (C.P.)—John Machuiak, farmer who once was a section hand, stood in the path of a Canadian National Railways trans-continental passenger train yesterday and flagged it to a stop as it bore down on a broken rail near this town 60 miles north-east of Regina.

Machuiak noticed the broken rail at a switch point. He started toward the station to inform the agent when the fast Winnipeg-bound train appeared.

Standing in the centre of the track Machuiak used his knowledge of railway signals, gained when employed as a section worker, to flag the train to a stop.

BILLION AND HALF FOR RELIEF IN U.S.

Another Year Of No New Taxes To See Spending In Excess Of Income

WASHINGTON, April 21 (AP)—Sticking to a no-new-taxes fiscal program, the United States Government projected today another year of spending in excess of income.

President Roosevelt's revised budget, ready for submission to Congress today, was reported by Senator Robinson (D., Ark.), to call for a $1,500,000,000 relief appropriation for the year beginning July 1.

Robinson, the Democratic leader, said after a White House conference attended last night by congressional and administration leaders:

"Some members (of Congress) believe the relief appropriation might have been reduced to $1,000,000,000."

Robinson said the conference developed strong sentiment that "every practical effort should be made to limit expenditures and appropriations so as to close as soon as possible the gap between income and outgo." He added, however:

"It is thought ways may be found without increasing taxes to bring the deficit to a narrow margin."

The Senate leader joined with Chairman Doughton (D., N.C.) of the House Ways and Means Committee in saying that no new taxes were contemplated at this session.

CANADIAN COURT PURSUES COURSE OF EVEN TRENDS

Dominion's Highest Tribunal Not Subject To Criticisms Or Attacks

UPHEAVAL IN U.S.A.

OTTAWA, April 21 (CP)—While the Supreme Court of the United States is the centre of a political fight over merits and demerits of President Roosevelt's plan to increase the number of its members and to establish a compulsory retirement age, the Canadian Supreme Court treads the same serene path along which it has progressed for 69 years.

The Canadian bench has been increased twice in its history and a retirement age established in 1927 but each time the change was made by parliament without political furore.

There are several reasons for the lack of political attacks on the Canadian court. First is the compulsory retirement of judges at 75. Secondly, it would be almost impossible for any decision of the Canadian tribunal to be dragged into the political arena.

The Canadian court was established in 1875, 12 years after Confederation. Like the American court, it handles routine appeals and references on constitutional matters—but in a different way.

In any country where legislative fields conflict under a federal system of government, there must be some referee to settle differences of opinion arising from the split sovereignty. It is the duty of both American and Canadian courts to act in this capacity.

The difference lies in this fact—the Canadian court, when passing on the constitutionality of a law goes no farther than the law itself. The American Supreme Court tests the law from the angle of necessity, the angle of propriety or the angle of public welfare, and thereby holds a sort of veto over Congress.

Difference In Selection

Canadian Supreme Court judges are appointed by the federal government and generally are selected from provincial high court benches. In that respect, they resemble all federal judges in the United States but, unlike them, their appointments need not be ratified by parliament. The basic difference between the two judicial systems is that Canada's judges are appointed and American judges are elected. It is theoretically possible for a Canadian lawyer to advance, by appointment from a police magistrate to a Supreme Court judge.

There are six judges and a chief justice on the Canadian Supreme bench, in contrast to a chief justice and eight judges on the American court. The Canadian chief justice is paid $13,000 a year, the American chief justice, $20,500. Canadian judges are paid $12,000 a year, American judges, $20,000. When American judges retire they are paid a full salary for life. When Canadian Supreme Court judges retire, either through incapacity or through age, their pension is two-thirds of their salary.

On the Canadian bench, two judges are appointed from Quebec, two from Ontario and one each from the Maritimes, the prairies and British Columbia. When the court first was established, there were only five judges but the bench was enlarged to six in 1890 to seven in 1924. The reason for each increase was pressure of business and difficulties developing before the compulsory retirement age was established. The changes were made by parliament without undue political repercussions and without charges of packing the court to the advantage of any party.

All judges in Canada are appointed by the federal government and it has been the practice of parties to select men of their own political stripe for the jobs. But the greatest care has been exercised by all parties to select qualified judges for the Supreme Court, recognizing the highest tribunal in the land should attract the keenest minds.

The average age of the present judges is 61.4 years, compared to 71.3 for the American court. The Canadian judges and their ages are as follows: Chief Justice Sir Lyman Duff, 86; Justices Thibaudeau Rinfret, 66; L. A. Cannon, 60; O. S. Crocket, 69; H. H. Davis, 52; Patrick Kerwin, 49; A. B. Hdson, 63.

The oldest man on the American bench is Justice Louis D. Brandeis, 81 and the youngest, Benjamin N. Cardozo, 60; Chief Justice C. E. Hughes is 75; Willis Van Devanter, 78; J. C. McReynolds, 75; George Sutherland, 75; Pierce Butler, 61; H. F. Stone, 65 and O. J. Roberts, 62.

Only two former Supreme Court judges are living on petsion as a result of Canada's compulsory retirement plan, P. B. Mignault and Robert Smith. The retirement age was set by the Mackenzie King government because it was felt a judge could not give sustained consideration to delicate legal subjects when over 75.

FILM STARS WIELD GREAT INFLUENCE

Greater Than That of Religious Leaders, According To Chaplin

LONDON, April 21— (CP) — A conversation in which Charlie Chaplin agreed that film stars had more influence in the world than archbishops was related here recently by Viscount Elsdale at a meeting presided over by the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Lord Elsdale explained the conversation took place some years ago when he was the guest of the famous movie comedian at Hollywood. Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks were also present.

The viscount had said: "I suppose you people have more influence in the world than even our most eminent archbishops?" and Chaplin replied: "Haven't I said so, Doug beforee?"

When the viscount asked them what they were doing to improve the tone of films, Chaplin answered: "You cannot supply the public with what the public does not want. However, what we want more than anything else is an improved demand and better taste on the part of our customers."

Association Executive Protests To Corporation Over Wilton's Program

DEFENDED AS FARCE

LONDON, April 21 —(CP)— Just where the line for the English sense of humor should be drawn is the subject of a controversy between the Magistrates' Association, representing 20,000 justices of the peace, and the British Broadcasting Corporation.

Letters of protest from the executive of the association decrying Robb Wilton's program "Mr. Muddlecombe J.P. in the court of not-so-common please" have been received by the BBC.

The letters objected particularly to dialogue which culminated in newspaper reporters and magistrates becoming the worse for drink.

Sir John Reith, BBC's director-general, replied that the corporation had no desire to ridicule the administration of justice and pointed out the program was so farcical in nature that it could not be regarded as a reflection on magistrates' courts.

Commenting on the complaints, the London Star declared:

"We doubt if all the 20,000 magistrates in this country have so uncertain a sense of humor that they feel outraged by Robb Wilton's amiable fooolery, but we should like to remind their worships that they are not the only traditional source of innocent merriment.

"If their protest succeeds and Mr. Wilton is gagged, what is there to prevent the automobile association from suppressing Harry Tate for his gross libels on motorists, the mayors of England from taking George Robey's poetic license away from him, and the House of Lords holding a mass meeting in Trafalgar Square with banners inscribed: 'Down with Gilbert and Sullivan.'

"No corporate body should resent being made a subject of mirth, for, in this matter, we all live by taking in each other's washing."

ARTISTS 'TOPS' AS SPAIN FIGHTS

Life And Customs In War-Torn Country Undergo Many Changes

VALENCIA, April 21 — (C.P. Reuter's.—There are some people who are enjoying the war in Spain. They are the artists.

War posters are everywhere. Many of them, illustrating raiding bombers, huge guns manned by workers and defending soldiers 'At the ready,' are works of art that would not be out of place in a London or Paris salon.

The artists are men who before the civil war were unable to get into the public eye. Now they are famous, and at a premium. The war has not only transformed buildings but also habits.

Senorita has abandoned the pre-war beret or tam o'shanter and now goes hatless. A hat has, in fact, become so conspicuous on a girl that people stop and look round at her. The men are more conservative. They have clung to their berets. The popularity of the beret may even be said to have increased, as foreigners and journalists speedily succumb to its "all round" appeal.

The Spaniard, formerly very "up conscious," has now become aware of his dignity. Neither porters nor waiters will accept "the crumbs from the rich man's table." "Equality for all" is the slogan and "Camarada" the universal greeting. It is the first word uttered when men meet and "adios Camarada" is the good-bye.

Only two things seem conspicuously lacking to the foreigners in Republican Valencia; they are peace and good military bands.

Artists On Strike In 7 Toronto Firms

Toronto, April 21—(CP)

COMMERCIAL artists in seven large firms and about a dozen small studios went on strike today in Toronto.

About 250 are involved and they seek a minimum weekly salary of $40, a 40-hour week, time-and-half for overtime, union recognition, the apprentice system, and two weeks holidays each year with pay.

The strike was called by the Artists' Union when a conference failed to bring agreement with employers.

DRAW COSMETICS FROM LOWLY HOG

Gall Stones Of Steer May Give Products For Dressing Table

OTTAWA, April 21.—(CP)—Perfume on the debutante's dressing table, the tiny charms on her bracelet or necklace, or the sweet incense burning in the home may have sprung from such lowly sources as the gall stones of a steer, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Such by-products of cattle and pigs have increased from practically waste material to now being worth millions of dollars to the livestock producer. The beautifying cosmetics for women's use may have had their beginning in the fat of the hog.

The curled hair on the brightly-colored wigs that have become the rogue this year may have been fashioned by various processes from the skin of the same animal, as also gloves, belts and many other things. The steer contributes to the home with furniture upholstering, mattress stuffing and felt covering.

Among the "fancy meats" obtained from the hog are found the pork tail, cured, and creating only a small demand in Canada, but considered a great delicacy in the West Indies. Tongues, hearts, livers and kidneys are sold in quantities here. The snout and ears are boxed and shipped to outside markets and boneless pigs feet are in great demand, fresh and pickled and often put up in attractive glass containers.

Pharmaceutical by-products of both the hog and steer are obtained from the glands, and it requires hundreds and in the case of some glands, thousands of hogs to provide one pound of finished product. Blood serum, insulin and liver extract are the products of the glands of the steer.

The potent cause lies in the hurried life we lead, in the extreme nervous tension and fever heat with which we follow in the pursuit of wealth, position and pleasure.

Late hours, want of necessary rest, excessive mental or physical exertion all put a strain on the system it is unable to withstand. No wonder then you pass restless nights and get up in the morning with no ambition to go about your daily tasks.

Take Milburn's H. & N. Pills and see what they will do for you.

There was much talk about unfits and misfits, but in many cases people were misfits because they had never been trained to be anything else.

The speaker sketched the responsibilities of a Children's Aid Society under such legislation as the Adoption Act, the Unmarried Parents' Act and similar measures and particularly emphasized the part the Society should pay in giving leadership to the community in the matter of child welfare.

A hearty vote of thanks was passed to the guest speaker on motion of Father Kelly and Mrs. Lawrence.

In commenting on the address Chief Constable Newnall remarked that for years prevention work had been carried on in Peterborough and he paid a tribute to the efforts of Superintendent Edgar in that field. The forty-one investigations mentioned in the official report, Chief Newhall remarked, took no notice of the number of times Mr. Edgar was called out by the police to deal with children whose parents had neglected them while they themselves were visiting the beer parlors or otherwise enjoying themselves.

It was decided that the next meeting should be held at the call of the president.

of Ald. Stocker and congratulations extended to Mr. and Mrs. McMillan upon the manner in which the Shelter was being managed. Chairman Dr. Barr remarked that the institution was one of the best-conducted places of its kind in the country.

The Guest Speaker.

Miss Nora Lee, of the Toronto Children's Aid Society, reviewed the duties and responsibilities of a Children's Aid Society in a very interesting address in which she particularly stressed the problem of the border line cases and the importance of building up the home life in such cases so that it would not become necessary to take children away from their parents. She pointed out that the logical place to take care of children was in their own home and the logical people to look after them were their parents. It was desirable therefore that every effort should be made to improve conditions in the home, in this way rendering it unnecessary for the Society to step in and assume charge of the youngsters. Miss Lee also laid emphasis upon the wisdom of giving children who came under the control of the Society the proper kind of education so that they could take care of themselves when they grew up.

PAINS ALL OVER HIS BODY

Kruschen Made Him Feel a New Man.

Read the experience of this man who had rheumatism so badly that at times he was prevented from working:—

"About 10 months ago," he writes, "I suffered terribly with rheumatism and neuritis. The pains were all over my body and some days I could not even get up from bed to go to work. A friend visited me and suggested that I should try Kruschen Salts. I did so, the result being that the pains seemed to gradually disappear. I have been going to work ever since without a break, thanks to Kruschen Salts, and I feel a new man."—A.R.

Celebration Of Golden Anniversary.

Showered with flowers and gifts and messages of congratulation from relatives and friends at home and abroad, the Golden Jubilee of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Evans of 56 George Street North was a very happy event of Tuesday. They were at home to their friends all yesterday afternoon and evening, and scores of people availed themselves of the opportunity of calling upon the genial hosts of the day, to felicitate them on the attainment of half a century of happy wedded life.

Mr. and Mrs. Evans completed their fiftieth anniversary with what might be termed a perfect circle of family life. Their children are all living and all were with them for the celebration, on Monday evening, of a happy family dinner held at their home. Their five sons and four daughters were present with their wives and husbands: Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Evans, all of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Evans and Douglas Evans, of Oshawa; Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Ross of Oshawa; Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Lees of Owen Sound, and Mr. and Mrs. I. R. Rattenbury of Bolivar Street, Peterborough.

At the dinner on Monday night, half a dozen of the associates of Mr. Evans during his thirty years of service to the city as Street Commissioner paid him a surprise visit and presented Mr. and Mrs. Evans with gold salt and pepper shakers, the presentation being made by J. W. Thirnbeck.

On Tuesday, many visitors arrived to pay their respects to the Jubilarians, who were married in Peterborough at St. Andrew's Church (then Presbyterian) by the Rev. Alexander Bell, and have lived here ever since. Mrs. Evans was of Scotch parentage, coming as a child with her parents from Glasgow, and Mr. Evans hailed from Holland's Landing, Newmarket. Among those present at the celebration yesterday was the groomsman at the wedding, Alex. Gibson of Stewart Street, also several of the guests at the original ceremony.

The rooms were filled with a profusion of beautiful roses and other flowers, and the table from which refreshments were served glowed with golden-pink Talisman roses and gold candles. Tea was poured by the hosts' sister-in-law, Mrs. George Evans, assisted by two daughters of the house, Mrs. Ross of Oshawa and Mrs. Rattenbury of Peterborough.

Among the many gifts presented to Mr. and Mrs. Evans were a studio couch and large basket of roses from the family, a bridge set from Hamilton in Royal Winton china, silver and gold table pieces and a beautiful vase from Toronto, as well as quantities of gorgeous flowers and messages from out of town.

Just Between Us Women

A Daily Chat With Examiner Neighbors, Conducted by Roberta.

WHO has not seemed to see it all as clear as daylight, that not by the sharpening of the intellect to supernatural acuteness, but by the submission of the nature to its true authority, man was able at last to conquer truth; that not by agonizing struggles over the contradictory evidence, but by the harmony with Him in whom the answers to all our doubts are folded, a harmony with Him brought by obedience to Him, our doubts must be enlightened.

Phillips Brooks.

Dear Friends:

Don't you think we sometimes struggle too much? We cannot see how our faith can be justified, when day after day the things we counted on go in a contrary manner, and yet if we would learn to submit ourselves to Him and not struggle as we do, the solution would present itself.

We have all a tendency to try and mould our circumstances, and that is quite alright, but where we fall down is in trying to do the same for our friends, not realizing that he or she can never live after our pattern in every respect.

I personally am a very impatient, (altho' I have been called very patient by my friends) but when things go wrong I feel impelled to put my shoulder to the wheel and get things running as they should again, and it isn't always a good idea, for maybe if I had let others get themselves to rights by themselves instead of being so darned helpful, it would have done them a lot of good, and saved my own strength.

I told you before about the way we have of trying to do our own job, the other fellows' and even the job that God alone can do, and when you look at it like that, you can see you are biting off more than you can chew. And I also told you that when you are in doubt about what you should do, it is a good plan to do nothing.

Leave it to God, and submit your judgement to His. I know it is hard when you are of a helpful nature, but you were not meant to carry the load of the world on your shoulders. We are told, as I also said before to "bear one anothers' burdens," but if sometimes no one is bearing yours, it would be a good idea to lean over and lift your own and do the best you can with it.

There has to be harmony, but there must also be some disharmony, else life would become sugar-sweet, and nauseate us. If everything around us was all white, it would be very tiresome, but when we have all the colors of the spectrum right through to black, then we get variety.

Haven't you heard some couples say, "yes dear," and "No dear" even altho' it was evident that one of them could wring the other's neck? They were behaving in an unnatural way, for it is natural for us to resent certain things, and had they acted as they should instead of showing a false agreement, doing their own part and leaving it with God if the other did not do theirs, there would have been more true harmony between them.

I know how hard it is to learn submission, and if I can learn it, so can anybody. Just recently I learned it all over again. I had to make a momentous decision and I began to look and see what I could do after I had done so, to better things all round.

But I submitted myself to God. I had done my part, so I waited for Him to do His, and now there is harmony where likely there would have been discord or anxiety. Yet previous to this, I had been in a state of nerves, of pushing myself forward mentally, trying to find out what the result of my decision would be.

One friend said, "but what will you DO, if things go haywire?" But I knew they were that way already, and I went on and did what must be done, leaving the other part alone, and now I have peace until the next problem turns up, and I hope I have enough sense to do the same with it. That it would be Your Friend,

ROBERTA.

COMMUNITY HEALTH

A Column Conducted by the Department of Public Health, Peterborough, in the Interests of Peterborough Citizens.

IT DOESN'T "JUST HAPPEN"

People used to nail horseshoes over their doorways to keep bad luck away and to catch the good luck which fell from the heavens. A hundred horseshoes filled to the brim with good luck will not keep tuberculosis out of a household. We used to think it struck by chance, but now we know there are good reasons why it attacks some persons and passes others by.

How Tuberculosis Spreads

Tuberculosis comes only from tuberculosis, just as weeds spring only from other weeds. The real cause of the disease is a germ. If a few tuberculosis germs get into a healthy body, they usually do no harm because the body fights back. But if many germs get in, and if the person's resistance is weakened, they may grow in numbers. They are like the weed seeds which, if given a chance, destroy the garden.

These germs are so small that dozens may ride on a speck of dust or on a droplet of sputum. They can be passed from one person to another by kissing and coughing, or by using the same glass, spoon, or towel. In a home where there is a tuberculosis patient whose habits are careless, children may get germs in their mouths in many ways.

Tuberculosis is frequently spread by someone who does not know he has it. When one person in a family is found to have tuberculosis, all others should be examined, especially those who are supposed to be suffering with bronchitis or asthma. The microscope, the X-ray, and the tuberculin test all help to find the disease in its early forms.

Trace Every Case

If every known case of tuberculosis could be traced back to the case that caused it, we should soon stop the spread of the disease. Searching out the source of tuberculosis requires skill. The doctor, the health officer, and the public health nurse know them. If ever there is a case of tuberculosis in your family, place no obstacle in the way of having it reported to the Health Department. The days of hiding away in fear and despair have gone by. A tuberculosis patient is no longer a social outcast shunned like a leper. He has a great chance of getting entirely well and can associate with his family and friends in perfect safety, provided only, however, that his case is discovered soon, and that he follows instructions with great care.

BOBCAYGEON GIRL LANDS BIG MARLIN

Miss Grace Reed Catches 125-Pound Fish In Gulf Of Mexico

There is an old saying about carry coals to Newcastle but Miss Grace Reed of Bobcaygeon, who has been holidaying in Florida has been to all intents and purposes reversing that process, according to the following interesting item from the Miami Daily News:

Stories of Florida's wonderful Gulf Stream flailing intrigued Miss Grace Reed of Bobcaygeon, Ontario, into forsaking her favorite sport of bass and lunge, fishing in landlocked lakes of the Dominion of Canada to come to the wide open spaces of the southland where the aerial-minded sailfish holds sway.

Equipped with fishing tackle as per instructions of friends having fished local waters this young miss boarded the cruiser "O Sis," at pier 6 for a day's sport in the Gulf Stream. Several fish were encountered during the morning run over stream and reefs but the much desired sailfish strike was wanting.

During the waning hours of the afternoon when hope of securing a sailfish was about to be cast into the shuffle, her great ambition was realized. Came the savage strike, running off line and setting of the hook. Into the air went a great fish that was presumed to be the wanted sailfish. After an hour's thrilling battle accompanied by underwater sulking and many aerial leaps, with scarred hands and bruised parts of her anatomy, came to boat, not the sailfish but a beautiful 125-pound white marlin, measuring eight feet in length.

Needless to say this much prized gamester was a satisfactory substitute for the sailfish and will adorn the walls of her Canadian home as a memento of Florida's tropical gamesters as this was her first attempt in the tropical waters of the Gulf Stream.

Mayor Hall, maintaining there was "double-crossing" at the closed meeting of strikers when settlement offers were rejected, said last night he had been approached by dozens of strikers and their wives asking when the strike would end.

Far From 100 P.C. Backing.

"If Thompson thinks he has the strikers 100 per cent. behind him now, he is foolish," the Mayor said, adding that the rejection came about "seemingly by a well organized minority."

Hall claimed Thompson promised to tell the strikers to accept the proposals, but as the meeting began reported that the stewards were "balking" and "there might be some trouble getting the proposals through."

The Mayor said men were "strategically placed" to show opposition to the proposals and that his suggestion for a ballot instead of a show of hands was not acted upon.

'BLOODY' CENTURY

First Quarter of 20th Century 'Bloodiest' Period in World's History.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., April 21.—(AP).—The first quarter of the 20th century was "the bloodiest period in all history," Dr. Pitirim A. Sorokin, chairman of the Department of Sociology at Harvard University, reported to-day.

Analysis of 902 wars and 1,615 internal disturbances during the past 2,500 years showed, Dr. Sorokin added, that "for the 20th century the war index reaches a total eight times greater than all the preceding centuries."

The popular belief of the disappearance of war with the progress of civilization is not supported by facts, he added.

He branded the C.I.O. a "Fascist dictatorship from outside our own country" yesterday when he discussed charges in some quarters that he had introduced Fascist methods.

After conferring in his office with a dozen Oshawa strikers the Premier said last night he expected an early move toward a settlement of the Oshawa strike. He said some further move would be made today by the group of employees who said they were out of sympathy with their union and wished to return to work.

The delegation said many of their number were unionists and that they represented from 1,000 to 1,900 of the strikers who were ready to accept General Motors' terms of settlement. They discussed the strike with the Premier for an hour and may return today.

Most Would Go Back.

"They said most of the strikers want to go back to work but can't get a secret ballot on the question," Mr. Hepburn reported. "They realized they had been hoodwinked by these American agitators and led up a blind alley."

Reports of a postponed meeting between strikers and company officials in Oshawa yesterday were described by the Premier as "merely propaganda for one side." He said he would be in any conference and there would be no negotiations with the C.I.O.

The Premier told newspapermen that if the automobile company reopened its plant and invited the workers to return to work he would guarantee to maintain law and order. The Province had the right to step in and take over policing of a municipality when it considered it necessary without the request of the municipality.

Clergymen, labor leaders and members of parliament took part in a mass meeting at Queen's park last night which endorsed the C.I.O. supported the striking Oshawa workers. Premier Hepburn was accused of adopting Fascist methods against labor by the eight speakers who addressed a crowd of between 4,000 and 5,000.

MADRIGAL SINGERS SCORE GREAT HIT

diminuendo that formed a background for a beautiful orchestral accompaniment, with strongly marked pizzicati strings, a muted bass viol and a rippling piano. Repeated applause followed these selections.

Ultra-Modernism In Music

Introduced by the director, Mrs. Park, as a radical departure from the Singers' ordinary mode, the selection "Angel Spirits of Sleep," by the modernist, Gustav Holst, commended itself to this reviewer as an example of utter simplicity in treatment and form. It was unembellished, coldly modulated tone that set the words forth with the severity of a cameo, with a sudden variation in key that clothed the selection with an atmosphere of constant surprise.

Elgar's "Snow," sung many times by this choir in the past, and always invested with a new charm, was picturesque melody, the words, with their recurrent softly hissing affiliants, combining with thready violin accompaniment, to give the impression of snowflakes falling—and fading away into silence. As always, this composition charmed the ear.

There was not not so much scope for rounded, melodious tone, but plenty of interest, in the three Italian airs arranged by Deems Taylor: "Danza, Danza," "Amarilli, mia Bella," (softly shaded music with portamento cadences), and "Se Florindo E Fedele," the last a lilting thing of vivacious atmosphere. Apparently, a foreign tongue has no fears for these versatile singers. The Italian words tripped as lightly from their lips as did the English syllables, and they went through the entire program without a note for reference, as usual.

Chamber Music

Chamber music, "musica di camera," as it was known long ago, gives one "a sense of perfect proportion and completeness, combined with matchless melodic expression." It is satisfying music that, played as it was last night, holds the listeners in a spell broken only by the dying away of the final notes.

In the opening composition, "Concerto Grosso," by Francesco Geminiani, there was a slight rivalry among the violins, owing possibly to a nervous desire to give of their best, that disappeared later, when the group played as one—the ideal of this type of musical expression.

It was (in defiance of its title) a miniature concerto with brief movements that progressed skilfully through brief adagio and allegro treatment.

The second appearance of the orchestra gave the flavor of their versatile quality, the perfection of their technique, thedelicacy of a pianissimo tone that was as soft as thistledown in many sections.

They played a Minuet from a Schubert Fantasia for Piano in G-Major, lightly-touched, humorous melody, embroidering a simple theme. The second number was also by Schubert, the well-known "Moment Musical," with a rush of swift happiness softening to delicate sweetness. And the third, Mozart's Finale-Presto, was for all the world like the cheerful conversation of a group of happy people at carnival time, with swift and volatile changes in tempo, tone and mood. It was carried out in a happy excitement by flying bows, and brought a burst of enthusiastic applause.

Charming Group

There was "Valse Triste," by Jean Sibelius, opening with isolated notes that submerged themselves later in little eddies of swift melody. This was fascinating stuff, the muted violins echoing against the full voice of the deep bass viol in the manner of music heard in a dream.

For Arcady-Dubensky's "Gossips" bows were abandoned. Plucking their airings with swift fingers, the group described in sound the tie-less voices of busy whispers, and drew a round of applause for the saucy title bit. Claude Debussy's "Claire de Lune" had moon magic in its shimmering strains, fine-spun melody as fragile as glass. And the piano came into its own in Percy Grainger's composition, "Handel in the Strand." Its rippling, pure tone was paramount above the rhythmical lilt of the dancing strings with their swift, vibrant tingle.

As an encore for repeated applause, at the close of this group, the orchestra played the Boccherini "Minuet," with muted strings.

A variation in the ordinary routine of these Madrigal Singers' concerts was provided in a chorus ballet, "The Sleeping Beauty," being similar with musical background, to the major portion of last season's Y.W.C.A. Pageant. The dances and tableaux were arranged by Miss Caroline Littlefield and were skilfully presented.

In its story-book atmosphere, this was a distinct contrast to the superb vocal and instrumental music that had gone before.

The Madrigal Singers sang the choruses and the story of the ballet was enacted by a clever group of young women and girls, in very pretty costumes. The theme, as outlined in last year's Pageant, has to do with the adventures of a lovely princess (Mrs. Frank Gray), whose parents, the King and Queen (Miss Olga Westbye and Miss Isabel Duthie) preside over a court which assembles to honor the princess, who, later, falls under the spell of a witch (Mrs. J. Forbes) and slumbers for a hundred years, until the arrival of the Prince (Miss Rose Puddick), who saves the day in true romantic fashion.

Other parts are taken by Miss Hazel Bradley ("a Good Fairy"); Miss Beverley Hughes (Puss-in-Boots); Miss Iris Forbes (White Cat); and the Flower Fairies: Catharine Turner, Louise Spriggs and Dorothy Boyle.

With the visiting orchestra providing accompaniment in the pit, Mrs. Park also occupied a position beneath the stage level, to direct.

Lovely Frocks

The Singers, for this presentation, appeared in the lovely pastel-tinted satin gowns of period type worn by them some years ago for their concerts. For the program proper, they wore evening gowns of white and soft, light hues that harmonized beautifully with the gorgeous new curtains and drapes on the big stage, where the Coronation colors make a lovely setting for sch enterainments. In the gold back-drop, the upper drops and side wings of soft blue, and the proscenium curtains of rich red.

Mrs. Park was in black, a filmy gown of embroidered net over taffeta, with wing-like epaulettes over short elbow sleeves and a pink flower corsage.

In the Madrigal Singers' group directed by Mrs. Park are the following: Mesdames L. M. Brooks, G. Batley, A. B. Burrows, C. H. Crowe, G. H. Cutmore, J. Johnston, E. Kitney, J. Matthews, E. V. Morphet, L. R. Mitchell, L. Picard, G. A. Richmond, L. Spriggs, R. C. Searles, F. Turner, C. Telford, R. Williamson, S. Whitehouse; the Misses Freda Allison, Alma Blanchard, Geraldine Collins, Jean Cameron, Musa Cox, Isabel Connolly, Margaret Dickson, Jean Dickenson (Port Hope), Ethelwyn Dix, Florence Glenney, Mary Jory, Helen Lytle, Mignon Mayneord, Jessie Maconomy, Trucie Pearson, Marion Ralston, Margaret Wolstenholm.

Expect Youth, 19 Grow Over 9 Feet

ST. LOUIS, April 21.—(AP).—Robert Wadlow, 19, the 8-foot 5-inches, almost quarter-ton boy of Alton, Ill., was declared to-day to be a normal individual in many respects, differing from other people primarily in the over-activity of his pituitary gland.

In the first of a group of clinics presented for members of the American College of Physicians, Dr. Louis H. Behrens of Barnes Hospital, St. Louis, where young Wadlow has been examined frequently, termed him an ideal subject for study of the growth hormone secreted by the pituitary, which in his case apparently got out of control.

Indications are the boy will be a big man, the physician added. "We surmise that his growth may continue for several years and he may or may not reach 9 feet or over."

Photograph Of Ald. Stocker Is Presented City Council By Horticultural Society

TESTIMONIAL DINNER

Civic officials and other citizens associated themselves with directors and members of the Peterborough Horticultural Society in a graceful and well earned tribute to Alderman Walter Stocker at a dinner in Coleman's Paragon Hall Tuesday night.

They presented to Mayor Macdonald a framed and inscribed photograph of Alderman Stocker with the request that it be placed in the city council chamber as a permanent record of public appreciation of his service in the horticultural beautification of Peterborough as chairman of the Parks Committee of the council for twelve years.

The presentation of the photograph was made by Dr. J. E. Middleton, a former president of the society, and Mrs. Stocker, who also was a guest, received a bouquet of red roses from Dr. A. J. Madill.

John A. Smith, president of the Horticultural Society, was the dinner chairman.

"We all realize that Alderman Stocker is one of the best known men in Peterborough," Dr. Middleton said in proposing a toast to him. "As proof of that an Examiner reporter yesterday asked the first fifteen men he met if they knew Alderman Stocker, and all but one said they did, and the fifteenth man apologized that he had been a resident of the city for only a short time. Walter Stocker came out from Yorkshire in 1888. Apart from his work he has had two fine hobbies, flowers and music. A local jurist recently said that our guest has a fine eye for beauty and sense of proportion, and he put both these qualities to work in the parks and streets of this city. With the hearty support of the council during the years when Mr. Denne was mayor, he brought about a great change in Confederation Square. I know that the Parks Committee was never allotted a great deal of money in the estimates, because usually when something extra was asked for we were told that it wasn't in the estimates.

Moderate Expenditure

"I don't know how so much was accomplished during the years of the depression, but we are all proud that they found some way of doing it. We have seen also a splendid change in the grounds of the Children's Shelter and King Edward Park which is bound to be an inspiration for good to the children. At the east end of the Hunter Street bridge there was a little plot of ground which most of us might overlook, but it also has become a beauty spot. In the planting of trees and shrubs on many boulevards throughout the city, in the improvement of Inverlea Park and the creation of a long flower strip on Water Street we have seen other evidences of Alderman Stocker's work. Some of it must have brought him a lot of grief, complaints that this shrub or tree had died, or perhaps the grass was burning up in front of some citizen's house. We can't say all the things about Walter Stocker he has deserved, and also about the encouragement he received from his wife, but we are trying to express to him our appreciation of the time and thought he has given to the beautification of Peterborough, and of the results which we all can see."

Accepted by Mayor

Mayor Macdonald said it was a pleasure for him to accept on behalf of the citizens the picture of Alderman Stocker.

"And speaking for the city council I assure you that it will be given a prominent place." His Worship continued. "Those who are privileged to work with Alderman Stocker appreciate him very much. We may not agree with him in everything, but we know that he is sincere in what he says, and also that he will do what he says. As Dr. Middleton has stated, many places in Peterborough have been beautified, and I wish to assure this gathering of citizens that the money has been well spent. Alderman Stocker has never tried to get increased appropriations for his committee, especially during those recent years when we were trying to keep the tax rate down. No doubt he would have liked to have more money to spend on the streets and parks, but he was always ready to say that his estimates could be reduced. And in spite of those conditions his work has never been diminished during that time. I am very happy to have the opportunity of extending to Alderman Stocker, and also to Mrs. Stocker, our appreciation of the work he has done, and to hope that he will be spared for many years to carry on this work he loves so well."

Grateful to Hosts

"We are very grateful that so many have come here tonight to show that there is real appreciation somewhere," Alderman Stocker said in replying to Dr. Middleton, Mayor Macdonald and Dr. Madill. "I might say that I have been in public life for twenty years, beginning as a member of the Patriotic League executive of which our dear friend Frank Dobbin was secretary. We used to meet night after night, and believe me there were times when we took some abuse. Then I sold my business and was elected to the council. I was chairman of the Board of Works, the Fire, Water and Light committee, and I have been chairman of the Parks committee for twelve or thirteen years. Reference has been made to Confederation Square. The east side was a junk pile of weeds and limestone chips from the armouries. Nothing would grow in that kind of ground, so we dug it all up and replaced it with good soil.

"If the citizens generally would only get more civic consciousness, and feel like the man who saw a woman break off a flower in a flower bed in the south end. He protested to her, and she told him it was none of his business. He replied that it was his business because he was a ratepayer, and was paying his share of the cost of the parks and the flowers. This woman then said she had not thought of it in that way, and apologized for taking the flower.

"We used to pay $6.50 for Schwedler maples, but we buy them today for $120 a hundred. Nobody makes a cent coming or going although I have been charged with making a commission and getting a car and gasoline and things like that.

"It is fine encouragement to know that citizens are interested in this work. What a difference it is compared with the acts of those who walk on a flower bed and destroy it. I thank you again for your kindness and I wish you all every happiness."

Others present included Aldermen Hamilton Dutton, Glover, and Jury; Roland Denne of the Utilities Commission; Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe of the Murray Street Baptist Church; Tom Brown, president of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition; Morley E. Shaver, city treasurer, and his predecessor in that office, Frank Adams; Ross L. Dobbin, and E. A. Guiram, assistant city clerk.

Supplementary Praise

Brief encomiums of Ald. Stocker were expressed by G. A. Gillespie, Ald. Hamilton, Al Sharpe, Mr. Brown, Mr. Armstrong, Mr. Adams, E. B. Fowler, Harry Beall, Mr. Dobbin, Mr. Runions.

City Clerk Armstrong said it might seem from Alderman Stocker's interest in the cemetery that he was a candidate for the job, but he was not. He asked the Examiner to give him a few more particulars regarding Chandos township and its tax rate. He has purchased some lake front property there and intends to erect a log cabin where he can spend his summers with members of his family.

FROST IN GROUND.

A telephone pole was being removed on the south side of Simcoe street yesterday, and the workman, in answer to a question by an Examiner reporter, said the frost was not yet out of the ground at that spot. He struck into frost ground about 18 inches from the surface, probably because the pole had been standing in the shadow of a building where the sun had got much opportunity of doing its work.

JUNIOR FARMERS ARE ORGANIZING FOR FALL FAIRS

Members Are Now Being Recruited For Various Club Activities

ACTIVE SEASON

Members are now being recruited for the three junior farmer clubs which are to function in Peterborough County this season in connection with the Lakefield, Norwood and Peterborough fairs and exhibitions. Prospects for an active season in all three clubs are good, Agricultural Representative A. D. Runions reported to-day.

If enough members are obtained, the Boys' Pony Club will this year be divided into two sections for Percherons and Clydesdales. The club will again show at the Lakefield fair. Last season twenty members participated.

The boys' Holstein Heifer Calf Club will this year go into its fourth season. Again it will show at the Norwood fair. Eighteen boys followed the club program through last year.

Only the boys who obtained seed through the Peterborough Rotary Club assistance in 1935 will be eligible for the White Winter Wheat Club this year. Of the 42 boys who started in 1936, it is expected about 38 will be active this year. The club will again show at the Peterborough Exhibition.

The Shorthorn Calf Club is being temporarily abandoned this season. With the exception of the Foal Club, age limits are 12 to 20 years. Boys joining the Foal Club must be 14 or over.

GAFFING PICKEREL DRAWS $10 FINES

Magistrate Warns That Any Others Will Be Fined $15.00

The activities of Game Warden Lyons were responsible for the appearance of three men in Police Court before Magistrate Gee this (Wednesday) morning charged with gaffing pickerel in the Otonabee River below the Peterborough Lock.

Jesse Airries pleaded guilty to the charge, the offence taking place on April 19.

"I've got to live," he told the Magistrate. "I have done no work since November, and I'm not on relief."

He explained to the court that he sold bait during the summer season.

Airries had faced a similar charge two years ago, on which occasion he was fined $15, and costs, amounting to $2.75.

Inspector Lyons remarked that taking pickerel at this time of the year was a serious offence, because not only one fish but millions were cut off as a result.

Similarly charged, Alf. Lefave explained that he had gone looking for suckers, but admitted that in the process he had caught a pickerel.

"It was only a little one," he told the court.

"So I suppose you want me to give you a little fine," said Magistrate Gee, smilingly.

Lefave was fined $10.00, and $2.25 costs, and the same fine was inflicted on E. B. Corrigan, who also pleaded guilty to gaffing pickerel.

"It is your first offence?" queried the court. "At least, it is the first time you have been charged with it in court?"

"I would like to give warning," said Magistrate Gee, "that if I am sitting on the bench when any more of these cases are heard, the fine is going to be $15."

OPERATION BRINGS SUIT FOR DOCTOR

Millhaven Couple Charge Kingston Surgeon Left Sponge Or Gauze In Wound

KINGSTON, Ont., April 21 (CP)—Action by Gertrude McCumber and Byard McCumber, of Millhaven, for damages for malpractice against Dr. I. G. Bogart and the Hotel Dieu Hospital, continued in Supreme Court here today before Justice Chevrier. The amount in the claim was not stated.

The claim is based on alleged malpractice when Mrs. McCumber, was a patient in the hospital under treatment by Dr. Bogart. It is alleged that following an operation on her a sponge or gauze was left in the wound and caused the plaintiff great pain and suffering.

Mrs. McCumber, only witness heard so far, said his wife was ill in 1934, and went to see Dr. Mabee of Odessa. Later she went to Dr. Munro and afterwards visited Dr. Burleigh of Bath. Some tablets were given and later she was brought to the city and Dr. Bogart was consulted. Some time afterwards an operation was performed.

He saw his wife several times in the hospital and she appeared to be getting worse. Mr. McCumber said that after several complaints he had Dr. Shaver, a house doctor, examine Mrs. McCumber. The doctor, he said, used a pair of tweezers and pulled something from the incision about four inches long, a sponge or piece of gauze. Another operation was performed and Mrs. McCumber improved.

He told of seeing Dr. Bogart after the second operation and that Dr. Bogart said there would be no charges by the hospital or by himself. McCumber said that he saw Dr. Bogart again two or three days later when he came to his farm with his insurance agent and according to Mr. McCumber Dr. Bogart said, "Your wife has a bad disorder and I will publish it and I will tell it to Cunningham (solicitor for the plaintiff)."

Damage estimated at $100 was done by a fire which threatened to destroy a box car on the C.P.R. siding just east of the Canal at noon to-day. The blaze was controlled by a detachment from the Fire Department.

Grass was being burned by workmen in the vicinity, and it is believed the flames ignited a pile of ties beside the tracks. The fire spread to the box car standing nearby, but had gained little headway before being checked. Firemen used a chemical line.

Firemen were called to the Higgins Hardware Store on Hunter Street shortly after 11 o'clock when a blaze threatened. The blaze was started by a painter using a blow torch to remove old paint. Little damage was done.

THE STARS SAY . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Thursday, April 22

Particularly lively and progressive conditions are foreseen from this day's lunar and mutual aspects. The mind and energies will be pitched to high peaks of adventure and ambition, with important projects under great stimuli. But there are also signs of frustration and impediment as well as annoyances and troubles born of impulses and tumult. Safer progress depends on the diplomatic restrained or strategic manipulation of contingencies. Strive for high goals; influential friends will lend ready support.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves confronted by events and prospects of importance during the year, with the spirit of initiative under keen edge and the faculties and mental equipment spurred to contend with existing obstacles and frustrations. Tact, diplomacy and strategem will succeed in difficult places, with the support of powerful friends assured. All pertaining to writings as well as investments, friends and public affairs should flourish.

A child born on this day may be conspicuously talented and versatile, enterprising and ambitious. It will succeed, probably reaching public position, by its endowments and the preferment of those in power.

GIRL DISCLOSES CULTIST AFFAIR

Really Thought She Was To Be New "Virgin Mary"—Sues Father Divine's Cohort

LOS ANGELES, April 21—(AP)—Seventeen-year-old Delight Jewell of Denver was called to-day to testify before the Federal Grand Jury concerning her altered betrayal by John West Hunt. Hunt, white follower of the negro cultist, Father Devine, has been charged with transporting Miss Jewett from Colorado to his Beverly Hills home for immoral purposes.

Hunt planned to tour the United States preaching for Father Divine, she said. Among his other ambitious plans she told federal agents, was for her to travel to a desert island and become the mother of a new savior. She went to New York instead.

"I really believed I was to be a new 'Virgin Mary,'" she said.

In her story to Federal agents who arraigned for her to answer against Hunt, Miss Jewett related she fell under Hunt's spell last year at Christmas. She left home with him. At hotels, she said, they registered as "Jesus the Christ and the Virgin Mary."

On other occasions Hunt has styled himself, "John the Revelator". He now is at liberty on $10,000 bail pending Grand Jury action.

THREE TRAPPERS FINED IN COURT

Pleaded Guilty To Trapping Muskrats Without Having Licenses

Three young members of the Otonabee Reserve were charged before Magistrate Gee this (Wednesday) morning with trapping in Rice Lake without licenses, the information having been laid by Game Warden Lyons.

W. J. A. Fair, who appeared for the trio, told the court that the men had not taken out licenses earlier because the conditions had been so backward that trapping had been almost impossible. On the day of the offence they had been looking over the prospects and they had secured licenses later on the same day. None of them had ever been in trouble before in connection with any breach of the fish and game regulations, and he suggested that the charges be dropped or that the one member of the trio who was in possession of traps should alone be charged.

Inspector Lyons said that he could have confiscated the traps used by the men, but he had not done so on condition that they came into Peterborough at once to secure trapping licenses. If they did not propose to plead guilty, he would like to have a week's remand to produce evidence.

Finally, however, the three pleaded guilty to an infringement of the trapping regulations and were fined $5.00 and 73 cents costs, each.

Norman Watkins, charged with trapping without a license, was remanded for a week.

Pirates Should Be Dangerous Three New Players Are Added

Brandt Will Be a Big Help To Club—Needed Good Southpaw

LLOYD WANER ILL

By BILL BRAUCHER
Central Press Canadian Sports Writer.

PITTSBURG, April 21.—Three new men will make the Pittsburg Pirates one of the hardest clubs in the National League to beat, and one that should be in the pennant race right down to the wire.

The newcomers are Ed Brandt, southpaw hinger obtained from Brooklyn in a deal; Lee Handley, second-baseman, who was paid $20,000 as a bonus for signing after he had been declared a free agent by Judge Landis, and John Dickshot, young flyenaser from Buffalo.

Brandt Big Help.

Brandt is 32 years old, but he won 11 games for Brooklyn last year, and a pitcher who can win that many contests for the club Brooklyn was last year ought to gather 20 or more with the hard-hitting Pirates behind him. The Pirates have needed a lefthander for years, and Brandt only has to pitch as well as he did last year to make a great difference in the National League race. Only two teams in the league were able to beat the Pirates last year—the Giants and Cardinals—and Brandt should be poison to both.

Young Lee Handley, at second, will improve an infield composed of Gus Suhr, another iron man, at first; Arky Vaughan, hard-hitting shortstop, and Bill Brubaker at third. The rise of Brubaker has been particularly satisfying in view of the fact that the years have slowed Manager Pie Traynor, once the greatest third-sacker in the game, to a decided walk. Pie wishes it known, however, that he will be available.

Dickshot is the boy from Waukegan, who hit .359 in the International League last year, and he has been one of the trailing camp standouts, hitting almost on a par with Arky Vaughan. The rookie's display of hitting has been the most impressive any newcomer has put on in a Pirate training camp in 20 years.

Lloyd Waner Ill.

Dickshot's abuse of the ball is particularly timely in view of the defection of Lloyd Waner, who has been sent to Brawley, Cal., for a rest. Lloyd became ill at the San Bernardino camp, just missing pneumonia, and is reported to be in a seriously weakened condition. Shortly after Lloyd departed, his brother, Paul, signed up after a prolonged holdout.

Arrival of Dickshot gives the Pirates an immediate outfield composed of Paul Waner, Fred Schulte, Foorest Jensen, Dan Hafey and possibly Earle Browne, former pitcher, who socked 35 home runs in the American Association last year. That gives Traynor another problem, but Waner, Schulte and Jensen are likely as starters.

Hope For Better Blanton.

Cy Blanton, who fell away slightly in 1936, after a great first year, is figured to become one of the mainstays of a staff made up of Red Lucas, Jim Weaver, Bill Swift, Brandt and Mace Brown. A young southpaw named Kenneth Heintzelman, who won 30 games for Selman, winner of 30 games for Jeannette last year, is the only rookie pitcher in the small squad. This young man wears the moniker of "Cannon Ball", and I'm told that's what he flings up there. The 19-year old Missourian helped Jeannette to win the Penn State association championship last summer, and he won three games in the playoff with Greensburg.

One more word before you go. The Pirates have a flock of spirit this year. Chief Traynor has pointed out to his men that only eight games separated the club from the pennant-winning Giants at the close of the season, and if this year's potentialities work out as expected, the Pirates should cop.

Well, you can look out for them. They'll be up there all the way.

Lawn Bowling

By HERB MARTIN

For another year, the board of directors of The Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club have asked us to act as chairman of the publicity committee of the club—whether or not, in the past, we have made a success of it.

It is our duty to keep the boys informed as to the activities of our club, report tournaments, schedule games, etc., but we believe that there is another responsibility equally as important, and that to the general public—the idea of selling lawn bowling to them.

There are many things pertaining to lawn bowling that we believe would be of no interest to many people, but to those who love outdoor summer sports we would draw your attention to the following: Lawn bowling is played out in the open, where there is plenty of fresh air and sunlight—it is also played during the evenings, under favorable conditions, long after other sports have retired for the day. It is not confined to any special number of contestants.

It is a game that knows no class distinction—no creed segregation—all men on the greens are of equal rank—it has no political aspirations.

It is not run by a group of expicliters—no one receives a ridiculous sum of money to put a "show" on for an hour or so—all revenue goes for the upkeep of the grounds and the club-house—it is played by gentlemen, with gentlemen, for gentlemen.

The Lawn Bowling Club was built by money subscribed by men from every walk of life — it costs very little to belong to what we believe is one of the best outdoor summer sports.

The committee has set May 1st as the zero hour for receiving members, and we would suggest to anyone who is interested in joining our club to get in touch with any member of the club, or George Glimblett, chairman of the membership committee, and we feel sure that when you join our club you will agree with us that—

Lawn bowling is a science, the study of a life-time.

In which you may exhaust yourself, but never your subject.

It is a contest calling for courage, skill, strategy and self-control.

It is a test of temper, a trial of honor, and a reveeler of character.

A sweeping away of menial cobwebs, and genuine recreation.

It includes companionship with friends, social intercourse, opportunity for courtesy and generosity to an opponent.

Winnipeg Monarchs Are Worthy Representatives Of Western Canada

Displaying a spectacular brand of hockey Winnipeg Monarchs, junior champions of western Canada, completely outpassed and outscored Copper Cliff Redmen in the fourth game of the Memorial cup series at Toronto to take the Junior Championshi three games to one. Although they seemed evenly matched for the first few games the Monarchs went out and passed the puck around in the final game until the Redmen were practically at a standstill. The first string line of Alf. Pike, Johnny McCreedy and Dick Kowcinak were a big factor in the Monarch's victories in the series. Here is a layout on the western champions. TOP LEFT shows from LEFT to RIGHT: Alf Pike, centre; Remi Vandaele, left defence; Johnny McCreedy, left wing and Dick Kowcinak, left wing. TOP RIGHT pictures Denny Robinson, left wing; Lucien Martell, left wing; Jack Fox, left defence, and Ted Dent, right wing from LEFT to RIGHT. Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two LADIES' BASKETBALL League will hold its annual banquet and presentation of trophies this Friday evening at 6.30 in the Y.W.C.A., with a dance following. Players, coaches and some special guests should swell the gathering to maybe 75 people. A. R. Kennedy will be guest speaker. Westelox won the senior section of the gals' cage loop this past season, whilst C.G.E. took junior honors. It was a good circuit and the playoffs were humdingers. Lot of fans still can't figure how come C.G.E. Seniors lost out to the Clockmakers—and it does sort of look like the latter bunch have the Indian sign on C.G.E. in the hoop sport. Anyway, the season will wind up with a nifty spread.

HAD A chat yesterday with a couple of guys from Lindsay who are directly interested in girls' softball there. They said it was impossible to have representatives at our meeting here the other eve but they felt Lindsay would enter a team in this loop, if it was okay by the other teams. But some arrangements would have to be made, they stated, regarding the long jumps to Cobourg. If Omemee and Lindsay climbed aboard, we'd have a good six-team circuit—provided, of course, Keene, C.G.E., Westclox and Cobourg were satisfied. The matter will require some thought before action is taken when the squads go into their next huddle on April 30th here.

HOPE ON the men's City softball League meeting last night is in elsewhere. A good slate of officers was elected as follows: President, Dave Leether; vice-prexy, Pat Hayden; secretary-treasurer, Walter Curtis; executive, Bob Simmons, Fred Gandy, Jim Gillespie and Harley Weir. Quaker Oats expect to enter a team and Westclox will be back again. "Moon" Ridley stated he was pretty sure of getting backing for a squad and the league is thinking of sponsoring a junior O.A.S.A. entry in this circuit. Omemee and Bridgenorth are other possibilities. Closing date for entries is next Tuesday, April 27th, when all must be in. A meeting will be called that p.m. to clean up further business and set a date for the opening of the schedule.

DOWN AT Duffus' this week, a handicap five-pin bowling tourney is being run off with a flock of local and outside teams rolling in singles and doubles. The outside squads will see action Saturday. About a dozen are expected from Toronto, as well as Belleville, Trenton, Kingston, Port Hope, Cobourg, Sulphide, Tweed and 16 from Peterborough. Some excellent high prizes are offered. Water Firth of Brintons was sure bowling 'em over on Monday night. The powerful Canada Alloy Steel Co. team of Toronto will be here with these bowlers and their averages: W. Barrett 257, C. Goodfellow 250, T. Sutcliffe 247, F. Desislet 245, A. Munroe 239 and R. Murray.

LOCAL LACROSSE prospects are asked by the club to drop around to the new field, opposite the George St. wharf, Saturday afternoon to get in some pre-seasonal exercises. They intend to start 'em off with some pretty stiff drilling—and will call a spade a spade in this early workout. Work is going ahead rapidly with the organization of the club and the plans for the new box. As a former manager of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club—never mind for how long!—we predict a big season locally in lacrosse. The group meeting is in Port Hope on Friday and a strong circuit is sure to be lined up. The Petes will not be the weakest team in it, either.

NORVOCS OF Toronto booted the old dope bucket farther than gold mining stocks have fallen lately when they took a 12-3 win over Barrie in Midland last eve. It gives the Toronto team the junior "B" puck title for Ontario by a round score of 18 to 9. Without their star, Hank Goldup, they played inspired hockey up front while a powerful defence stopped Barrie cold. A lot of the defensive credit goes to Jack Hood—whose brother works in Peterborough — as he bashed 'em right and left and also scored a goal. Back in February we picked Norvocs to win, but had since swung over to Barrie, who ousted our Colts by a single goal—a single disputed goal. And so the long, long trail winds up for the junior "B" lads till next winter.

A CLIPPING from the Niagara Falls' sheet: "Belleville, once the stronghold of ball in Eastern Ontario, holds a dismal outlook for 1937. Recent reports indicate that no senior nine will function there and it also seems dubious about intermediate representation. For a number of years, Belleville Nationals were serious threats for Provincial honors and in 1919 and 1926; O.B.A.A. titles were captured by this club. Three of the greatest pitchers ever developed in Ontario, Freddy Goyer, Chief Williams and Root Gibson, worked on Belleville mounds, and Peeney Mills, catcher there for 16 years, had no superiors among amateur receivers. Other star performers graced the nines of that area, and the present condition is hard to explain. Perhaps, C.O.B.I. officers will resurrect some activity from the spot but right now this possibility seems remote." As remote as an Eskimo igloo.

EARL WHITEHILL, veteran southpaw—and brother of the Petes' leading twirler last season—is performing for Cleveland Indians now. His wife, who was a visitor here early this Spring, is mentioned in this item from Bud Shaver's column in the Detroit Times: "Mrs. Vi Whitehill, once the Sunshine Raisin gal, is here to see her husband, Earl, perform for his new boss, Steve O'Neill. That angel child under her wing is Earlinda, heiress to the Whitehill fortune and good looks." Earl is looking for a big season with the Indians. The Gunner, by the way, not only topped local Beavers last season but left the C.O.B.I. flingers, including Lefty Biddle.

PICKING 'EM off the grapevine: Edmonton Grads began defence of their international cage title by knocking off Cleveland, 55-24, in the first of a five-game serial . . . . Sudbury took the Hershey Bars, 3-2, yester gloaming in Toronto—after making a fast jaunt of 2,300 miles from Calgary . . . . No further word on the C.O.B.I. meeting here this Saturday . . . . None of the Toronto Leafs could make it as guest speaker for the local Church Puck Loop banquet next week . . . . Lot of gym work has cbed the avordupois off Pete King this winter and he hopes for a good lacrosse season . . . . Foxx of the Sox collects $22,000 a summer for first-basing it . . . . Work will be started soon to fix up the Bowl diamond for the gal softballers . . . . Lefty Hickson, who tossed 'em in for Omemee damsels last summer, is in Lindsay now . . . . Big Russ Kitchen is rounding into shape and that nifty curve may again bother Central Loop batters plenty this summer . . . . The Petes workout tonight at the "Y" and on Friday eve . . . . Edmonton Grads Win First Game

EDMONTON, April 21 (CP)—Edmonton Commercial Grads started defense of their International Women's Basketball Championship and the Underwood Trophy auspiciously last night, trouncing Cleveland Fisher Foods, 50-24 in the first game of a best-of-five series.

The Edmonton sharpshooters were in fine form as they more than doubled the score on the taller, but slower Cleveland players. Helen Northup paced the Grads with 14 points.

Whether goats should be kept or not is to be decided by a nationwide vote in Bulgaria where they are damaging trees so badly that reforestation is said to be impossible.

Leaf Veteran

ADAM COMOROSKY

One of the veterans on Ike Howley's Toronto Maple Leaf ball club is Adam Comorosky. He is one of three veteran outfielders Howley will depend upon to uphold the duties beyond the game. Comorosky was with Toronto last year but did not come up to expectations due to illness. This year he is ready and anxious to go and should have a banner year.

THURSDAY OPENER IN INTERNATIONAL

With Jersey City Back And Toronto, Syracuse Reorganized Great Year Looms

NEW YORK, April 21 (AP)—The second-oldest baseball league is set for the opening of its 54th and perhaps its most successful season tomorrow.

Only the National League antedates the International, oldest of the minors, in continuous operation since 1884. This year, with Jersey City back in the league and boasting the largest stadium in the circuit, Toronto and Syracuse reorganized and strengthened and the other five clubs working hard to keep pace, a big years is forecast.

The return of minor league baseball to Jersey City, one of the most enthusiastic of baseball towns with a new stadium to take care of the customers and the New York Giants to provide support and playing talent, is the main factor in the prosperity that is expected.

With fair weather tomorrow, a crowd of 35,000 is expected to turn out at Roosevelt Stadium to see the Jersey Giants open against the Rochester Red Wings. The present league attendance record is 19,304, set in 1931 when Jersey City played a double-header at Newark while Newark and Rochester established the opening day record of 19,006.

Another 19,000 throng is expected at Newark to see the Bears and the Montreal Royals start the season. The Buffalo Bisons and Syracuse Chiefs, neighborly rivals, look for 10,000 customers at Syracuse, while an 8,000 crowd is expected at Baltimore when the Orioles, pre-season pennant favorites because of their power, try out their bludgeons against the Toronto Maple Leafs.

OTTAWA GRADS BEATEN 31-30

BACKVILLE, N.B., April 21 (CP)—Mount Allison University's garnet and gold squad was ready today for Toronto Elizabetha and the Canadian intermediate basketball finals.

A 31-30 decfat of Ottawa Grads shot the university team into the finals. Grads had won the first game by the record low score of 13-12, but the single point lead soon was wiped out last night.

DOUBLE HEART VICTIMS.

NOBLESTOWN, Pa., April 21.—(CP)—Archie Johnson, 27, farmer, ate dinner and then trudged back to a field he was plowing. He found his horse dead. As he attempted to remove the harness he himself collapsed and died.

A physician said both apparently were victims of heart disease.

VOCATIONALS RIP BARRIE JUNIORS 12-3 FOR TITLE

HARD BUMPING DOES IT

MIDLAND, April 21. — Magnificent is the only word to describe the display of Toronto's Northern Vocational Juniors here last night as they ripped the great little Barrie machine to pieces, buried them under a 12-3 avalanche, and breezed to the O.H.A. Junior B championship.

No one gave the Toronto kids a chance after they dropped the first game on their own ice, 6-4. Way, without Goldup, and playing on the small ice surface here, they didn't have a ghostly. Even the Toronto rooters were a little glum at the thought, and there was a twinkle in the eyes of the Barrie fans as they gave you 3-1 odds and hurried away for more "suckers."

That's how the situation stood from a Norvoc angle. It looked hopeless, a seemingly impossible task, but not to those gallant Toronto kids. Cold determination gripped every player's heart as he skated out on the ice, a determination that grew into a raging obsession as the Barrie squad shot home the opening goal and made the task even more discouraging.

Started to Function.

They started to function, every lad out there was a man possessed. It was check, check, check, a dash in on the net, a constant watching and waiting for the breaks, and taking advantage of them when they came. Despite the fact they drew three of first four penalties Norvocs were ahead 4 to 3 at the end of the first period and were looking good, but not impressive enough to make one dream they were going to astound a crowd of 2,500 in the next two periods.

The break came in the second period. Barrie began to slacken under the terrific bodying of Hogan, Hood and Cowan on the Toronto rearguard, and worry at their inability to dodge their checks, and the phenomenal playing of Herbie Carnegie, colored centre ice star. It was Carnegie who started the Toronto march to victory in that middle session. He was breaking up play after play in mid-ice and sweeping through, only to be outlucked at the net. But he finally swooped in on a sensational solo dash, leaving a weaving path of Barrie checkers in the background, went right in on top of Goring, and flipped the puck into the net to make the score 5 to 3 on the game, and deadlocked the round.

That was just the start. He was back again, 30 seconds later, with Hogan, sifted through the defence, whipped a pass across to his husky mate, and Hogan made no mistake. Northern were a goal up on the round. Their supporters were frenzied, Barrie rooters sat back in amazed silence. It was unbelievable. But not to Norvocs. Inspired by their success, they continued their steam-roller offensive, weathered a stiff session while Hood was serving time, and went two goals up on the round when Cowan flashed through on a lone sortie to score as he went flying over the diving Goring, one second from the end of the period.

Cannot Fathom Defence.

The great little Barrie machine, trying to recover its composure and confidence, came out for the third period fighting mad. They attacked desperately, but couldn't fathom the Toronto defence, and when Dyte was given the gate, Barrie's hopes for the title went with him. The sensational Carnegie popped in Norvoc's eighth goal seconds later on a pass from Welsman.

Dyte came back, another mass attempt to crash the herculean Toronto rearguard failed to produce results, and when Taylor flipped in Hogan's pass at the seven-minute mark, the Colts crumpled completely. Northern had command of the situation, and Mann and Nicholson added two more markers at the 14-minute mark the goals coming 47 seconds apart, and Taylor scored the 12th and final goal less than two minutes from the end.

You couldn't single out the individual stars of the Toronto team without placing dusky Herbie Carnegie head and shoulders above the crowd. He was superb. He poke-checked, back-checked, fore-checked, stole the puck from the Barrie attackers from every possible angle and in every section of the rink, and was a constant, offensive threat that nearly drove the Colts frantic. He scored two goals and assisted in four others — a great performance by a great little player.

While Carnegie was the shining light offensively, he was given remarkable assistance by Williams, Cowan, Mann, Nicholson, Welsman and Cowan. Constantly chasing the puck from the opening bell, these lads never let up, didn't tire in the heavy going, took their wallops and came up smiling, working like a unit in the desire to win.

Johnny Taylor played like his former self, showing a burst of speed and no inclination to sidestep anyone, and back-checking in great style. He rapped in four goals to lead the scoring parade.

Defencemen Star.

But back on the defence, where Jack Hogan, Jock Hood, Andy Cowan and Spanner were serving out the body checks, lies most of the credit for the Toronto team's remarkable comeback. Almost impenetrable, a barrier that wouldn't crumble, these four lads hit the incoming Colts with everything they had, hit them honestly and with resounding wallops. Such treatment sapped the strength of the Barrie boys and, during the latter stages of the game, they were shooting the puck from centre ice and trying to crash in. Steve Finlay, in the net, played a stellar game and proved another vital cog in the winning machine.

Monarchs Score In Final Memorial Game

Displaying a sensational passing attack Winnipeg Monarchs proved themselves worthy representatives of western Canada, when they defeated Copper Cliff Redmen three games to one to take the Memorial cup emblematic of junior hockey supremacy of Canada. Here is an action photo of the final game which Monarchs won 7-0. Alf. Pike, star centre of the westerners, is seen beside the nets just after he had passed to Johnny McCreedy, No. 7 (RIGHT), who scored the goal. The Copper Cliff players seen in the picture are Alf Webster, No. 4; Pat McReavy, No. 16 and Roy Heximer, No. 6. Goalie Mel Albright of the Redmen is seen in the nets.

Remember When—

Max Schemling, regarded then as boxing's next human sacrifice to the slashing fists of Joe Louis, arrived in New York one year ago today to prepare for his June 16 heavyweight bout with the Detroit negro. The German exposed critics with a smashing win and became foremost—though now sidetracked —challenger to Champion Jimmy Braddock.

4 FADING HURLERS WIN NEW LAURELS IN OPENING GAMES

DETROIT 4, CLEVELAND 3

NEW YORK, April 21.—(AP)—Four pitchers, all of whom had more or less fallen from glory in the past two years, were back on top to-day as the result of yesterday's opening games of the 1937 baseball season.

These four, Darrell Elijah (Cy) Blanton of Pittsburgh, Hal Schumacher of the New York Giants, Elden Auker of the Detroit Tigers and Monte Weaver of the Washington Senators, turned in some of the most sparkling feats on the six-game program which attracted a total of 181,016 cash customers.

The seventh game on the general opening slate, which followed Monday's previews in two cities, was rained out. Chicago's White Sox and the St. Louis Browns, weather permitting, will make their debuts to-day.

Blanton came up from Albany two years ago with a tricky sinker and a lot of confidence. He won 19 and lost 13 in that year and had the boys talking about what he'd do with a little experience. He suffered last season from the second-season letdown that afflicts many star rookies and won 9 and lost 9 two seasons back. But he almost threw his arm out of joint on every pitch and last year the trouble that the old-timers had predicted from him came along. Although "Prince Hal" couldn't remember having hurt his arm, he complained that his right elbow bothered him and kept the doctors busy tinkering with it.

Schumacher Regains Control.

Even during the 1936 world series, Schumacher didn't have his old control. But it was there for the 1937 opener and Hal limited the Dodgers to five hits as the inter-borough rivalry was renewed before 32,387 fans. In addition he drove in the ninth-inning run that brought the Giants a 4 to 3 victory. Auker, No. 3 on the list, also was at his best in 1936 when he won 18 and lost only 7, but slumped last year when it was thought his "submarine" delivery had taken its toll on his arm. He got his comeback chance because both Schoolboy Rowe and Tommy Bridges were ill, limited Cleveland to nine blows and won 4-3 when Gerald Walker thrilled 36,500 customers with a terrific closing show.

Weaver, a star in 1932, slid clear back to Albany three years later. He returned to the Senators last year and showed so much improvement he was named to oppose the Yankees before the 40,000 crowd that turned out for New York's opener. He subdued the world champions in all but one inning and came through with a 3-2 decision when Al Simmons, making something of a comeback himself, nicked Lefty Gomez for three hits, including a home run.

Dean Touched For 13.

One of the largest crowds in the history of Cincinnati's Crosley Field, 34,374, saw Dizzy Dean, touched for 13 hits, blank the Reds for 10 innings and emerge with a 2 to 0 decision when Joe Medwick and Johnny Mize connected for successive doubles off Ray (Peaches) Davis. Lippy Leo Durocher singled and Catcher Bruce Ogrodowski dropped a long fly into the outfield.

The Philadelphia Athletics, who led the American League for one day, came back to normal when three pitchers failed to check the attack of the Boston Red Sox and the Cold-Platers won 11 to 5.

ALLAN, MEMORIAL CUP PLAYDOWNS LINE C.A.H.A. CHEST

ELECT OFFICERS TODAY

TORONTO, April 21.—The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association appeared to-day to have rounded the corner and caught up with prosperity. Delegates to the association's annual meeting here heard yesterday a "happy days" report from the Financial Committee on the outcome of the finals for the Allan and Memorial Cups.

A report presented by Chairman of the Finance Committee, C. C. Robinson of Winnipeg, told of a net profit from the two series of $34,423, bringing new blood to the reserve fund which had shrunk during the past few years to $6,-569.

The West's Allan Cup and Memorial Cup playdowns and finals contributed $18,471 and the East brought $15,902.

Approximate figures for the finals revealed the junior tussle between Copper Cliff Redmen and Winnipeg Monarchs in Toronto, which went to the Westerners, produced $9,750, while the senior finals in Calgary between North Battleford and Sudbury drew $8,193.

Was Nary a Ripple.

Brightness of the financial aspect placed the delegates in a happy mood and there hardly was a ripple to disturb the day's proceedings, dealing mostly with proposals of the Finance Committee.

With no demur a motion was passed to raise the operating expenses of delegates and players on the road to $6 a day on the train and $8 a day in hotels. Previously the rates, because of the shrinkage in the C.A.H.A. coffers, had been reduced to $4 an the trains and $5 in hotels.

With an eye toward the possibility of leaner profits in succeeding years the association reserved the right, as soon as there was danger of losing money, to reduce the rates again.

Motion also was carried that $30,000 be transferred to a trust fund, with annual additions to be made each year as current receipts allowed.

In future the Presidents of the association will have the power to designate the place where cup games will be held according to where he considers the financial return will most benefit the C.A.H.A. The President also will act as official delegate of the hockey body to meetings in Europe of the International Ice Hockey League, governing world body to which the C.A.H.A. has pleaded affiliation. It also was decided grants may be made from the trust fund for Olympic representation of Canada.

New Residence Rule.

Association approved a new residence rule providing all transfers to be made by October 15. The old rule in force a couple of years ago had the transfer date at January 15.

The meeting decided to permit senior teams to import no more than four players, while junior and intermediate teams had their figure set at two. This rule has been operating in the Ontario Hockey Association for three years and delegates decided to place it in the Canadian body's rule book.

In future all Allan and Memorial Cup finals will be on the best-of-five basis with playdowns on two-out-of-three. This system was adopted on a mail vote before the series just concluded got under way and yesterday approval was extended for its continuance.

It didn't take long for members to dispose of all the financial routine and get on to the sole other matter that occupied their attention at the afternoon session — the discussion of playing rules by Clarence Campbell, National Hockey League referee.

The three-day meeting will wind up to-day with disposition of a few constitution and by-law changes left from the first day and yesterday's gathering. Probably the last item on the program will be election of officers.

Sports Spice

NEW YORK, April 21.—(AP)—He's still hot. Babe Ruth visited the Yankee stadium yesterday and stole the show right away from the Yanks and Senators. He got the biggest hand of the day when he walked into his box.

In the fourth inning, the great man reached across the railing and snagged a foul off Frank Crosetti's bat. He chuckled as he stowed it away in his hip pocket, just like any other Yankee fan.

Opening Day Notes: Frank Hogan, Washington catcher, and Walter Brown, Yankee pitcher, the biggest men in baseball, posed for pictures together. Something Hogan would never do before because he was so much bigger than Brown. Which added to the humor of the picture. Ruth, Hogan and Brown were all born in Baltimore.

Early in the second inning, Willard Mullins, crack cartoonist of the World-Telegram, said: "The official attendance will be 45,880." In the seventh it was announced as 46,-650. Willard must be slipping.

When the parade to the flagpole passed the right field bleachers, 2,000 fans began to chant: "We want Ruffing." Col. Ruppert's blood "perked," as they say in Brooklyn. Tony Lazzeri and Joe Dimaggio, who have been on the outs, made up just before the opener. Max Kase, Journal sports writer, brought them together.

Benny Leonard picks Tony Canzoneri to lick Lou Ambers and win the lightweight title for the third time. Clara Mortensen, the grapweeks on the coast under the "Toots" Mondt banner, ... Nearly 1,000 pounds of beef will be tossed into the Hippodrome ring next week when Jack Torrance, 260, fights Abe Simon, 350, and Arturo Godoy, 240, takes on Tony Galento, 230.

LEETHER IS PREXY OF MEN'S SOFTBALL

Elected At Annual Meeting In Duffus'—Several Entries Are Taken

Dave Leether was elected president of the men's City Softball League last evening at a well-attended re-organization meeting in Duffus'. Mr. Leether, a member of the O.A.S.A. and long experienced in an official capacity in the City League, succeeds Harley Weir as president. Percy Harrison, chairman of the Nominating Committee, took over the chair till the president was elected.

A strong slate of officers was voted in as follows: President, Dave Leether; vice-president, Pat Hayden; secretary-treasurer, Walter Curtis; executive, Jim Gillespie, Harley Weir, Bob Simmons and Fred Dandy. This may be added to if necessary.

Several Entries

When entries were called for, Westclox and Ridley's team signified intention of entering, with Quaker Oats also being a probable starter. The league expressed the intention of sponsoring a junior O.A.S.A. crew and entering it in that league. Omemee and Bridgenorth were also mentioned as possible entries. The closing date for entries was set at Tuesday, April 27th.

Feeling that this league was suffering more by the press edict against commercial names in sport than any other local league, it was decided to interview the newspaper on this matter and see what might be accomplished to aid the City Softball League. Dave Leether and Herb Payne will act as a committee for this purpose within the next week.

Another meeting will be held at eight next Tuesday evening in Duffus' when everything will be cleaned up. All entries must be in, the matters of fees, umpires, groundkeeper, etc., passed upon and an opening date for play named. The league will again apply for use of Central School grounds for games this summer.

BABY CHICKS.
According to Official Egg and Poultry Market Report of April 16th, Eggs are likely to be scarce from September to January, due to marketing of Yearling layers this Spring and reduced purchases of Baby Chicks. That means good prices and good profits, if you have Pullets in the nests.
We urge alert-minded poultrymen to take a tip from this forecast and put in a flock of Bray's "Xtra-Profit" started Pullets. These Pullets are well started and should be laying in August or early September in time to cash in fully on high Fall prices.
We quote genuine Bray "Xtra-Profit" stock at following low prices.

WORK TO START VICTORIA ROADS

Sixty Thousand Dollars To Be Spent On Link Bobcaygeon Lindsay

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LINDSAY, April 21.—William Newman, M.L.A., Victoria and Haliburton, announced yesterday that work on Victoria County highways would be undertaken by the Provincial Government during the next fortnight. In addition to the roads taken over, considerable work will commence as soon as the frost is entirely out of the ground on the Lindsay-Bobcaygeon Highway, which will be completed to Lindsay from where work was discontinued last Fall, at an estimated cost of sixty thousand dollars. The various roads to be taken over are Coboconk to Bolsover, 38 miles; Rosedale to Dorset, 60 miles; Minden to Haliburton, Haliburton to Eagle Lake, Haliburton to Wilberforce, Kinmount to Wilberforce.

Thomas Whelan, a well-known farmer of Ops Township, had a narrow escape from death Monday night at 9.45 o'clock, when a car he was driving crashed into the side of the C.N.R. train from Peterborough at Cunningham's Corners, three miles southeast of Lindsay. He failed to see the train as it approached the crossing and struck the rear of the last passenger coach with such force as to throw his car off the road into the ditch. Mr. Whelan was unhurt, but his car was demolished.

Two Toronto people, Miss Doris Purse, Livingston Avenue, and A. J. Anderson, Eglington Avenue, suffered injuries in an accident on the Oakwood Highway, just east of Taylor's Corners, on Monday. While driving towards Lindsay, Mr. Anderson lost control of his car and it took to the ditch. He was severely cut about the legs, seven stitches being required to close the wounds. Miss Purse sustained body bruises and is also suffering from shock.

Insurgents Flee Teruel Province

CELADAS, Spain, April 22 (AP).—A victorious government column drove at the Teruel-Zaragoza highway today after a panic-stricken rout of insurgents from this town in the heart of Teruel province's iron mineland.

The immediate objective of today's thrust by land and air was severance of the road, the only reliable route for reinforcements or insurgent retreat from Teruel City, the tip of Gen. Francisco Franco's coastward salient.

Franco's defending army reported to have been reinforced at Celadas with Italian and other soldiers from the Guadalajara front, was driven from entrenchments and machine gun nests and suffered heavy losses in yesterday's fighting.

READ THIS FIRST:

Charles Stuckey, of a London law firm, reluctantly agreed to a scheme to defraud the daughter of one of his few respectable clients, Jacqueline Smith, of an inheritance of $1,500,000 from an American uncle. In keeping with the plan, Colonel Alex Lutman, who has a hold over Stuckey, and Jim Ason, an ex-convict, are stopping at the same hotel in Cobenall with Mrs. Smith and her daughter. Jim hopes to marry the girl, having her assign her property to him, before Stuckey informs her of her inheritance. In dire financial straits, Mrs. Smith already is impressed with Jim, posing as a wealthy Englishman, as an admirable "catch" for her daughter. Lutman, in the role of Jim's trustee, subtlely threatens Jacqueline with a check he cashed for her mother returned marked "insufficient funds". Finding her mother distraught over their financial plight and Lutman's implied threat over the check, Jacqueline tells her she will marry Jim. Stuckey arrives at the hotel and Jacqueline meets him accidentally. Charles shows Jacqueline a rough draft of the marriage settlement he says her mother asked him to draw up. Stalling for time, Charles tells Mrs. Smith the deed must be signed in London. After meeting Jacqueline, Charles is more reluctant than ever to go through with the scheme but Lutman, using pressure, says all of them will return to London at once to sign the deed.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER 18

CHARLES STUCKEY, seated at the desk of his private office in Rotherhithe, glanced round the room with a disparaging eye. He had done his best with it. The windows, for instance, had been cleaned—on the inside, at any rate—so that, looking through them, one got the impression that the fog which enveloped London was not quite so thick as usual.

His desk, too, was quite disconcertingly tidy, and anyone who was familiar with the office could not have entered it without observing the absence of any considerable amount of visible dust.

Still, it wasn't much of a place, Charles felt, in which to receive Jacqueline Smith and although he had carefully dragged the armchair over the threadbare patch in the carpet, he had an uncomfortable feeling that his sanctum fell far short of attaining that degree of luxury which might be expected in the private office of one who lunched with the Master of the Rolls.

The door of the office was opened and Colonel Lutman came in, resplendent in a peaked yachting cap and reefer coat.

"Good morning, Charles," he said breezily.

Charles glanced up at him, staring in silence at the Colonel's unusual headgear. Then: "There's a hat peg on the door behind you, Lutman," he remarked.

Lutman tipped his cap to a rakish angle and strode to the window. "Marvelous morning, Charles," he said. "I came by river. Delightful."

Charles became absorbed in studying a document.

"You're welcome to it," he said. "I hate the beastly river."

Lutman shot him a reproachful glance.

"My dear fellow, have you no soul?"

"I sometimes wish I hadn't."

The Colonel smiled.

"The river at night, Charles—the big ships going down, and the barges sailing up, the swirling water, the lights, the breeze against one's face—there's more beauty to be seen in the Pool at night than on the lagoons of Venice. One of these nights, Charles, you must come for a trip with me and see for yourself."

"Thanks, Lutman, but I'd rather not blow about in a midget of a boat like yours—especially in the dark."

"The dark, as you should know, Charles, has its uses on occasion, and there's not a finer little craft on the river than mine. There isn't a police boat afloat that could catch her if I didn't choose to let it."

"And that, no doubt, has its uses on occasion?"

The Colonel gave an enigmatic smile.

"Has the estimable James arrived yet?" he inquired.

"An hour ago. I've kicked him out to have a cup of coffee. I couldn't stand any more of him. I warn you, Lutman, Jim's getting restless. He has been plaguing me this morning. He wants to know what he's going to do with Jacqueline Smith when he has got her."

"Jim's imagination is not his strong point," replied Lutman. "Jacqueline and her mother will be along very shortly. I called at their flat this morning and suggested that I should bring them on the river, but they prefered a less romantic omnibus. And, speaking of Jacqueline, Charles, reminds me." He took from his pocket a folded newspaper and laid it on the lawyer's desk. "When I called at Mrs. Smith's flat this morning," he said, "I happened to notice this lying on a table in the hall. It was then in a postal wrapper, addressed to Miss Jacqueline Smith. Fortunately, the wrapper had not been torn.

"And you took it?"

"Yes, Charles. I took it. You see, I noticed the postmark—London E. I wondered who could be sending newspapers to Jacqueline from London E, so I took the liberty of opening it. I found it was a copy of the New York Examiner with the story of Alan Redfern's will splashed across the front page."

Charles' face registered amazed incredulity.

"Who on earth could have done that, Lutman?"

The Colonel picked up the paper and returned it to his pocket.

"Don't do it again, Charles, that's all," he said. "Such tricks are dangerous." He strolled to the window again and stood gazing out at the river. "You've got the contract ready? I suppose it's a bit too late to alter it, isn't it?"

"You mean, to substitute your name for Jim Ason's? There's nothing wrong with your imagination, anyway, Lutman. Yes, it's all in order."

"And was when you came to Vienna, eh? I know. It only became a preliminary draft after you'd met the charming Jacqueline. Meeting her made a difference, didn't it?"

"Enough difference to make me hate the idea of letting her sign it," Charles admitted.

"You're full of surprises," smiled Lutman. "I didn't think you had that much sentiment in you. But keep your sentiment well in hand today, Charles. Any tricks, and I might not be so tolerant as I have been. That deed is to be signed, sealed, and delivered this morning, and at 11 a.m. on Wednesday next Miss Jacqueline Smith will become Mrs. James Ason."

"The Lord help her!" said Charles. "But it isn't Wednesday yet, Lutman."

The Colonel raised his eyebrows. "If that is intended as a threat..."

"It isn't," Charles interrupted. "You know damned well that I can't afford to threaten you. I'm just reminding you that this marriage isn't the dead certainty you seem to think. Suppose Jacqueline wants another lawyer to see the contract."

"My dear fellow, she won't. She trusts you. Lord knows why, but she does."

"Or suppose she reads it and realizes that she's handing over full control of all her property to her husband in exchange for $10,000 a year?"

"In that case," smiled Lutman, "you will point out that it is merely a customary legal formula, and that, as she has no property, $10,000 a year is a very good price for it. Why Quibble?"

"I live by quibbling."

"And if you wish to continue quibbling, you'll be careful not to play any tricks today. You realize what you'll be throwing away if you play the fool, don't you? Three hundred thousand dollars!"

"There's no need to remind me."

"And no need, I hope, to remind you of what will happen if you let me down."

"No need for that either, thanks, Lutman. You've reminded me often enough—every time you've had a dirty job you wanted done, and whenever I've had a chance to be independent."

"Well, Charles, you've got your chance now," said Lutman genially. "Europe is your playground. Read for the bar—be a real mouthpiece, eh? Spouting to judges and juries and heaven knows what, eh? I'd love to see you in a wig and gown. My lord and members of the jury ...' I can hear your deep sonorous voice, Charles."

Lutman chuckled to himself as he turned again to the window.

"What's that big boat out there?"

"John O' Gaunt," Charles told him curtly. "She comes in regularly from Antwerp. I know the captain—Captain Allwright."

The Colonel nodded.

"If you decide to play the fool you might do worse than leave by her. Is there much mud here?"

"Not outside this office."

"Mud, eh, Charles? Can't you hear them saying: 'There goes old Stuckey—he used to be a solicitor until they struck him off; he sells bootlaces now.' All right, Charles; it's a shame to tease you. Hadn't you better get Jim aboard? The others are more than due."

Charles rose and clapped his hat on his head.

"I'll fetch him myself," he said. "I can do with a change of air."

Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY'S PRIZE

Uncle Wiggily was so disappointed and surprised that he couldn't twinkle his pink nose. And when a rabbit gentleman cannot twinkle his pink nose it is very sad.

"My! My! I never would have believed it of Jingle!" said Mr. Longears as he looked at the piano where the little rabbit girl had been practicing. Uncle Wiggily also looked at Buster's bag of marbles on top of the piano near the edge.

One by one the last remaining marbles rolled from the open bag, down a little book-hill and fell "plink! plank! plunk!" on the piano keys making sounds as if a little rabbit girl was doing her practice when she wasn't—she was out playing tag.

"Dear! Dear!" said Uncle Wiggily again. He tried to twinkle his pink nose but it wouldn't even pinkle, which is much less than a twinkle. "To think Jingle would play such a trick to get out of practicing her piano scales! Well, I must do something about this. But what to do I don't know."

Last One

Uncle Wiggily felt so sad he sat down in a chair near the piano. The last of Buster's marbles rolled out, made a "plunk" on a black piano key and fell on the carpet. Uncle

Wiggily picked it up. He picked up all the other marbles that Jingle had used (without her brother knowing it) to fool her father.

"I think I know what to do," said Mr. Longears. He put all the marbles back in Buster's bag, put the bag in his pocket, hopped out of the piano room and to the front porch of his bungalow.

By this time Jingle and all the other animal children had run on to school where the Lady Mouse Teacher was waiting for them.

"Did you do your practicing, Jingle?" asked her twin sister, Jangle.

"Yes," answered Jingle. Well, she had done some of it, but not all. She had practiced a little before she had the wish to go out and play and then had thought of the marble trick.

Morning exercises in the Hollow Tree School were over and the Lady Mouse Teacher was going to hear lessons when along came hopping Uncle Wiggily. The jolly old rabbit gentleman often visited the school.

"Good morning, Uncle Wiggily!" greeted Miss Mouse.

"Good morning, Miss Mouse!" greeted Uncle Wiggily.

Then he said good morning to the animal pupils, including his own bunnies and they said good morning to him and after that Uncle Wiggily asked:

"Do any of your pupils play the piano, Miss Mouse?"

His Children, too.

"Oh, yes, indeed," answered the teacher. "I give them lessons myself but they are supposed to do their own practicing at home. Why, some of your own children play the piano Uncle Wiggily," squeaked Miss Mouse, that being her manner of talking.

"Yes, I know they do," said Uncle Wiggily. "May I ask," he went on, "how many of you practiced today?" piano? Raise your paws or your wings."

Many pupils did this. Some, like Jackie and Peetie Bow Wow, the puppies, had paws to raise. Others, like Lulu, Alice and Jimmie Wibble-wobble, the ducks, raised their wings.

"Fine!" said Uncle Wiggily. "Now how many fo you practiced today?"

Many more paws and wings were raised. Jingle raised her paw.

"Tim," said Uncle Wiggily, looking straight at Jingle, "Well, now I am going to give you a chance to show how well you practice and play. I am going to offer a prize. May I?" he asked Miss Mouse.

"Yes, Uncle Wiggily," she answered.

And please wait and see what happened. You may read about it tomorrow. Then the story will be about Uncle Wiggily and Jingle's tears. That is if the roller skates will please stop playing marbles with the bird's eggs.

Fall Wheat Prospects Good In The Bailieboro District

Fields Showing Excellent Signs Of Growth Following Mild Winter

FARMERS OPTIMISTIC

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BAILIEBORO, April 21. — Prospects for a crop of fall wheat in this district are more favorable than they have been for many years.

The fields have commenced growing and have wintered in excellent fashion, and farmers are very optimistic over the outlook. There was an unusually large acreage sowed in this township last fall, and with higher prices prevailing, a good crop will be of great benefit to all concerned. When fall wheat comes out well in the spring it means much less labor for farmers as well as affording their crop routine to substitute for the wheat which is the cash crop of farms in this district, and especially this season, when seed grains are so scarce and expensive to obtain.

The 1936 crop has practically all been consumed, and farmers are buying mill feeds and the correspondingly low price of hogs, few farmers today are raising hogs for market, and it is generally thought that before the new crop arrives there will be a decided scarcity of market hogs.

Hay and straw is very scarce, but agriculturalists are hopeful that spring will come in rapidly and grass will soon be sufficiently plentiful to turn their cattle on the summer ranges.

Considering the feed shortage, livestock have wintered exceptionally well. There was plenty of feeding value in the winter's fodder and both cattle and horses are generally in thrifty condition.

Livestock Prices Up.

At a livestock sale at the farm home of John Gainer on Wednesday last, prices showed a decided improvement. Horses sold around one hundred and seventy dollars each, while good dairy cows brought about seventy-five dollars each.

A good sow sold for twenty dollars, while farm machinery brought substantial prices.

FISHERY RESEARCH STATION IS RAZED

Newfoundland Government And Trading Company Loss Set At $200,000

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., April 21 (CP Cable)—A mass of smoking ruins told today of a $200,000 fire which last night destroyed the government fishery research station near here, the premises of Williams and Company and the Tors Cove Trading Company, and the residence of Fishery Research Superintendent Blackwood.

A city water-pumper, responding to a telephone call for help, started a dash over the 18-mile road to Tors Cove but ended up in a snowdrift along the route. Other cars which responded to the call were stalled after a heavy snowfall blocked the road.

While Conservative estimates placed fire damage at $200,000, others soared higher. Some officials said loss in the fisheries station alone would reach the $200,000 mark, with loss of other buildings as yet undetermined.

Freighter Seven Seas Spray Reaches Bilbao With Foodstuffs

LONDON, April 21—(CP-Havas)—The 2,579-ton British freighter Seven Seas Spray slipped through Spanish insurgent blockade and entered Bilbao with a cargo of foodstuffs, it was reported here today.

News the ship had reached the port was contained in advices which reached Archibald Fenner Brockway, secretary of the Independent Labor party. Brockway's group had broached plans to bring food supplies to Leftist points despite the insurgent blockade.

The British ship was stopped on April 10 by the insurgent cruiser, Almirante Cervera off Santander, west of Bilbao, later putting into St. Jean de Luz France.

She was the second British ship reported to have broken the blockade with in the past four days. (Examiner Correspondence.)

NORWOOD, April 21.—A number of farmers in this district have started plowing in the last few days with a few small pieces of spring wheat seeded. The fall wheat crop has come through the winter in good condition and up to the present, the prospects for a good crop are very promising.

DELEGATES URGE STATE MEDICINE

Medical League Makes Survey, Present Figures To Provincial Government

REGINA, April 21—(CP). — Urging a system of state medicine for Saskatchewan, Dr. S. G. Moore, president of the State Hospital and Medical League, heading a delegation, submitted figures to members of the government here.

Average cost of hospital and medical services to rural residents, he said, was $8.42, and on this basis a system less than $3,000,000 of this insurance would cost $8,420,000 a year.

The government would contribute slightly less than $2,000,00 of this, he said, or no more than the government was now spending for medical and hospital aid for a portion of the province.

Figures submitted are based on information compiled by Dr. Moore from data secured in replies to 100,000 questionnaires sent to farmers with the co-operation of the Wheat Pool.

Data was compiled from 5,495 replies in which complete answers were given to all questions. These showed costs incurred for medical service amounted to $1,098,101, of which $660,935.26, or 60.3 per cent, was paid, leaving $435,165.76 still owing, or 39.7 per cent.

Figuring 4.74 persons to a family, Dr. Moore said average hospital and medical expenses of a family were $39.90 a year, of which $24.06 was paid and the remaining $15.84 had not yet been provided for. This figured out to a per capita expense of $8.42, of which $5.07 was paid and $3.35 still owing.

He said these figures, with perhaps a few isolated exceptions, refer to farmers who were not on relief and were endeavoring to pay their own way, and that a very large percentage of the population of the province were in the same plight as these families.

PLAN FAST WORK WITH PICTURES

Wire, Radio And Plane Will Rush Photos Of Crowning To America

NEW YORK, April 21 (CP).—Only eight news photographers will be in Westminster Abbey when King George and Queen Elizabeth are crowned May 12 and there will be no popping of flash bulbs for they will be concealed in imitation pillars, according to Marcelle H. Wallenstein, director of a London news photography service, here on a business trip.

The photographers will "shoot" the scene through narrow slits, using hypersensitive glass plates which will be specially coated the night before. Some will be concealed in false pillars painted to resemble old stonework and others will work from hidden niches carefully blended with Abbey architecture.

Wallenstein said he would assign 20 photographers and 30 motorcycle messengers to cover the procession from windows, roof-tops and street angles which afford the best views.

"Within half an hour of the ceremony," he predicted, "newspapers in Paris and Berlin will be on the streets with pictures of the event transmitted by wire and radio. Completed pictures will reach Australia by beam radio transmission about two hours after the ceremony, and Canada and the United States will begin to get facsimile reproductions at 8 a.m. (one o'clock in the afternoon London time)."

In addition, Wallenstein said his agency planned to fly a special plane to Frankfort, Germany, to catch the Zeppelin Hindenburg, scheduled to leave for North America the same night.

Negotiations were still in progress, he said, for special planes to make a westward flight of the Atlantic, via Newfoundland, with newsreel films.

NORWOOD CHURCH TO JOIN CHARGE

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Congregation Favors Three-Church Circuit

(Examiner Correspondence.)

NORWOOD, April 21.—A well-attended meeting of the members of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church Norwood, was held Friday evening for the purpose of considering a successor to the late Rev. A. C. Reeves.

Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr and Jas. Dutton of St. Paul's Church, Peterborough, representing the Presbytery, were present and outlined the necessary steps to be taken.

After some discussion, the congregation decided to amalgamate with the Hastings and Havelock congregations and extend a call to the Rev. Mr. Perrie who has recently been inducted into the congregations of Havelock and Hastings. A committee was named to confer with representatives from the Hastings church to work out details in regard to hours of church services and other questions of interest.

NON-UNION GANG STONED IN SARNIA

Half Dozen Injured In Attempting To Run Picket Line On Docks

SARNIA, Ont., April 21 (CP) — Struck by stones allegedly hurled by union pickets, five or six non-union men were reported to have been slightly injured today when they attempted to run the picket lines set up by striking longshoremen at Point Edward. Several automobiles were also reported damaged. Names of the injured men were not immediately available.

This was the first violence in the strike which began last Friday when 15 or more union men did not report for work. The ranks were subsequently swelled by other numbers.

Monday several hundred men took up picket duty after a conference between union leaders and officials of Canada Steamship Lines. Picket lines were further extended today.

Recognition of the union was said to be one of the major issues in the dispute. Increase of wages was also demanded.

Farm Fields Badly Washed By Heavy Rains In Winter

SEED GRAIN SCARCE

(Examiner Correspondence.)

PONTYPOOL, April 20 — Spring work has started in this district. Farmers are ploughing and cultivating, although no sowing has been reported yet. During the winter the heavy rains have washed many fields very badly. In many places it was necessary to draw brush, straw or stones to help fill in; this is taking a lot of time and work.

Fall grain is reported to have come through the winter in good shape. Clover may not be so plentiful, partly owing to the dry summer of 1936, when small seeds did not grow until the fall rains came; this left them small tender plants to survive the cold winds of winter, when the fields were not covered with snow. However, most farmers left an old meadow and with a favorable season it is expected there will be a fair amount of hay.

Syrup Season Over

The maple syrup season is nearly over. Many people have lifted their pails. This was considered a poor year for making syrup, as it was very short as well as a poor run. The sap however, was very sweet and in some places there were two gallons of syrup made per barrel of sap, which is considered a good yield.

Seed Grain Scarce

Good seed grain is very scarce in this district and is selling at a good price. Feed is also scarce and many farmers are buying hay and grain, while some cattle are out on pasture during the day, but the weather so far has been too cold for cattle lying out at night and there is no green grass yet.

The roads in Manvers township are badly washed in places. Road masters are busy dragging the roads but in many places it will require a lot of work to fill in washouts.

LAKEFIELD

Miss Marjorie Franklin of Toronto visited recently at her home in North Dover, where she also attended the celebration in honor of her parents' thirtieth wedding anniversary.

In the account of the afternoon tea held by Group A of the Women's Auxiliary of Lakefield United church on Friday, April 9, the name of Mrs. N. Stinson was inadvertently omitted. Mrs. Stinson sang very sweetly during the tea hour. She was accompanied by Mrs. H. E. Moore. Mrs. G. F. Kelly rendered several piano selections while tea was being served.

Dial Telephones Are To Be Installed Here J. Brace Announces

Bell Telephone Company To Spend Half Million In Peterborough

ERECT NEW BUILDING

System Expected To Be In Operation In The Spring Of 1939

Peterborough telephone users, in about two years from now, will begin to use the dial system.

This was the important announcement made today by J. H. Brace of Toronto, general manager western area, of the Bell Telephone Company, who is a visitor to the city.

In the course of an interesting talk with a representative of the Examiner Mr. Brace briefly outlined the extensive project planned by his company for the installation of the automatic system in Peterborough, which will involve a gross outlay of close upon half a million dollars.

"The steady growth of this important city and the need that we should keep ahead of the continuously growing demand for our service, local and long distance, have determined us to embark at once upon the very extensive plan of converting Peterborough's telephone service to the dial system," Mr. Brace said.

New Building.

"To that end we have recently purchased land on Hunter street west of George street on which we propose to erect a building that will serve as a new centre of the city's telephone life. When completed, it will house a complete unit of dial switching equipment, with the necessary long distance switchboard and associated equipment, power and testing mechanism. The building will be of the most substantial construction, and in keeping both with the city's progress and the purpose it will serve.

"In the summer of 1938 we shall begin installation of the dial switching mechanism which will be manufactured by the Northern Electric Company in Montreal. Installation will likely take about eight months, so that dial service should be inaugurated here some time in the spring of 1939.

"I need not point out", Mr. Brace continued, "that this project is an extensive one requiring substantial rebuilding of our outside plant, the installation of dial instruments to replace those at present in subscribers'

OSHAWANS REVIEW 15 DRAMATIC DAYS IN STRIKE BATTLE

Hepburn, Thompson, Martin, Hall, Carmichael, Millard Play At Generals

3,700 WORKERS THE PAWNS

OSHAWA, Ont., April 22.—(CP).—While the third attempt at strike settlement in Premier Hepburn's office got under way to-day in Toronto, the drama that has surrounded the great industrial tie-up was told and retold in Oshawa.

It was just two weeks ago—at 7.01 a.m.—that 3,700 workers of General Motors went on strike.

Those playing the chief roles in conducting the strike and bending efforts toward a settlement:

Premier Mitchell Hepburn, who has taken a positive stand with the remainder and denounced John Lewis' committee for industrial Organization, sponsors of the strike through the United Automobile Workers of America.

Hugh Thompson, C.I.O. organizer, who issued the strike call at Oshawa and was denied admittance to peace negotiations in the Premier's office.

Mayor Alex Hall, who told the C.I.O. to call a sympathy strike in General Motors plants in the United States or he would tell the Oshawa workers they were hoodwinked. His plea to the men to accept a settlement proposal was rejected.

"Paid Foreign Agitator."

Homer Martin, president of the U.A.W.A., characterized along with Thompson by Premier Hepburn as a "paid foreign agitator." Martin addressed meetings of the strikers on hurried trips to Oshawa. He is a former Baptist clergyman from Kansas.

First Divorce Mrs. Simpson Again Quizzed

Lawyer Doubts If Decree Legal As Spencer Not Domiciled In Virginia

ASKS BALDWIN RULING

Claims It Necessary Before Present Separation Becomes Absolute

LONDON, April 22 (AP)—Legal doubt of the validity of Mrs. Wallis Simpson's first divorce was raised again today after friends had disclosed plans that would make her the June bride of the Duke of Windsor.

A. Berriedale Keith, constitutional lawyer, wrote to the Edinburgh Scotsman expressing his doubt that Mrs. Simpson was properly divorced from her first husband in the eyes of British law. He again raised the issue, he said, because "a date for the wedding has been fixed."

Keith urged the government last month to remove all doubt of the martial status of Mrs. Simpson, divorced from Lieut.-Commander E. W. Spencer, United States Navy, in Warrenton, Va., in 1927. Her conditional divorce from Ernest Aldrich Simpson was granted at Ipswich, Oct. 27, and is expected to be made final soon after April 27.

The English Law

"The only divorces which English law certainly recognizes as dissolving marriages effectively for purposes of status in England are those granted in the court of the husband's domicile," Keith declared. It seems plain that Mrs. Simpson's first husband was not domiciled in Virginia."

The remedy, Keith suggested, would be for Prime Minister Baldwin to be asked categorically and to state if his advisers consider the proposed marriage is valid.

If Baldwin says yes, Keith declared, there would be no objection to the wedding. If he says such assurances cannot be given, the lawyer urged a special act of parliament to say that Mrs. Simpson is unmarried when her English decree nisi becomes absolute.

WITNESS MISSING IN HIJACK CASE

Three Suspects Held On $10,000 Bond After Car Found Abandoned At River

WINDSOR, Ont., April 22.—(CP)—Windsor police have launched an intensive search for 27-year-old Henry "Bud" Pratt, to have been key witness against three alleged "hijackers," now lodged in jail.

Three days and nights have passed since Pratt vanished, leaving behind him a wife and baby daughter. Only cue to his disappearance is his car found abandoned near the river. Pratt was last seen Sunday. It was about two and a half hours later the car was found with the keys still in it.

Circumstances surrounding Pratt's mysterious disappearance caused Crown Attorney James Allan, to demand in police court yesterday two of the alleged "hijackers," released on their own recognizance, should each post $10,000 bail. Unable to raise this money, Wilmer Laramie, 27, and George Weir, 35, Windsor, were placed in jail. Third member of the accused trio, Lawrence Burns, 24, has been in jail since his arrest April 6.

Pasteurization Of Milk Fails To Pass Committee

Committee To Arrange Conference Between Dealers Urged

TO SAVE SMALL MAN?

The move that would have made pasteurization of milk compulsory in Peterborough which was introduced into council some time ago and referred to the Finance Committee has failed for the time being at least to secure the approval of that committee.

It was before the committee at Wednesday night's meeting and after a long discussion a motion that it be re-introduced into council to go into effect on December 1 of this year was lost when only Ald. Stocker and Dutton the mover and seconder and Mayor Macdonald voted in favor.

An alternative proposal to appoint a committee to arrange a conference between owners of pasteurization plants and distributors of raw milk with a view to seeing what can be done to avert loss to the latter was carried.

When the matter was introduced Ald. Stocker remarked that when Dr. Reynolds, former head of O.A.C. had spoken here a short time ago he had been unanimously in favor of pasteurization.

Ald. Dutton said the matter was probably the most important council would have to settle. He pointed out that bovine tuberculosis sore throat, typhus, etc., had a great bearing on public health and that according to the reports of health departments when pasteurized milk was used those ailments were materially reduced. No one in the council had any desire to harm the small man in the milk business but he felt that the matter had been long discussed and ample time had been given every one to put his house in order. The city was building up its health department and he felt that it would be a foolish thing to adopt a more progressive health policy and at the same time not eliminate factors that had been shown to be harmful. He believed that it might be possible to hold a conference to see what could be done to save the small man from loss.

The Government's Part

Jail C.I.O. Men After Rioting At Lewiston

Union Secretary, Director And Organizer Nabbed As Police Battle 1,000 Strikers

29-DAY WALKOUT

6,400 Workers Tied-Up In 19 Shoe Factories—Court Ruling Defied

LEWISTON, Me., April 22 (AP)—Police Captain Joseph Picard today arrested Powers Hapgood, New England secretary for the Committee of Industrial Organization, and William J. Mackesy, C.I.O. director of a 29-day shoe strike involving 6,400 workers and 19 factories in the Lewiston-Auburn area.

In addition Ernest Henry, a union organizer, was also arrested. The three men were seized at their hotel.

A police warrant charged them with "riotous assault" and it was issued in connection with the stoning of state police Lieutenant George Fowler, knocked unconscious yesterday as state and Auburn police turned back 1,000 strikers at a bridgehead.

Today's action followed on the heels of an injunction outlawing the strike and granting a temporary injunction against the strikers, and C.I.O. retorts that the court ruling was a "miscarriage of justice" that "meant nothing."

200 Guards On Patrol

Three hundred National Guardsmen patrolled Auburn today, hastily summoned by Governor Lewis O. Barrows. Three melees and injuries to half a dozen persons and arrests of a like number called them to the scene.

City Manager Frederick W. Ford flatly asserted that recurrence of such violence would bring martial law and more troops "to upbold the police and the courts."

Gov. Barrows, in sending troops into the district declared, "I am prepared to order out the entire military forces of Maine to preserve constitutional authority."

The strike issue revolves around wages, and C.I.O. recognition.

Aurora, April 22.

THOUGH a motorist may be driving immediately behind a police officer's car, he may still be convicted of exceeding the speed limit, Maurice Strangman found this out in York County Police Court yesterday when he was fined $10 and costs for driving on Yonge Street at fifty-five miles an hour. "Were you not playing a game with him?" the officer was asked by defense counsel. "Yes," replied Provincial Officer Alex Ferguson, "he was playing a game with me, so I thought I would play one with him."

SLOT MACHINES ARE UNDER FIRE

Finance Committee Defers Action Until Parties Can Be Heard

The slot machine problem bobbed up before Finance Committee for a short time at Wednesday night's meeting, but bobbed down again before any action could be taken. Chairman Hamilton reminding the members of the committee that the principal owner of these machines in Peterborough and his solicitor had been promised a chance to present their case before anything was done.

"The machines should all be thrown out," said Mayor Macdonald when the question was introduced.

In answer to a question City Solicitor Corkery explained that he had gone into the matter of licensing and had followed up the cases that had developed in other places. The Council would be in order to license machines, he said, on the condition that they were to be used only for amusement purposes. If they were employed for gambling the Criminal Code stepped in to deal with the matter.

After a few minutes aimless discussion by which something was said about making the license fee $500 to drive the machines out and the Mayor expressed the opinion that the better way would be to ban them, the matter was dropped for the time being in order that interested parties may be heard by the committee.

The aldermen seemed agreed that no matter what action were eventually taken something should be done to make it impossible for children to play the machines.

OSHAWA STRIKERS COLLECT WAGES

Many Fearful Last Pay Due Would Contain Notices, But None Received

OSHAWA, Ont., April 22 (C.P.)—Pay cheques, earned during the week preceding General Motors strike, were collected today by strikers who silently entered and left the pay office.

Some were fearful of collecting their pay because they feared the company might place "quit slips" in the envelopes. The company, however, announced no such step would be taken.

Hugh Thompson, organizer of the United Automobile Workers of America, left for Washington last night to confer with Homer Martin, president of the Union. Both of the men, whose presence in strike negotiations have been objected to by Premier Hepburn and company officials, will remain in the United States until strike negotiations, undertaken by the Premier, are completed.

LINES, TREES FALL AS 40-MILE GALE SWEEPS ONTARIO

Rain, Sleet, Snow Make Traffic Hazardous—Ships Hug Port

BRUCE HIT HARDEST

TORONTO, April 22. (CP.)—With a wind velocity that reached 40 miles an hour at Toronto and Erie, Pa., easterly gales lashed the region of the Great Lakes last night and early to-day, bringing rain to many centres and sleet or snow to points in Northern Ontario.

Accompanied by a rapidly falling barometer that reached its greatest drop at Toronto with a dip of .04 in the past 24 hours' reading, the wind blew limbs from trees hindering motor traffic, disrupted electrical services in some places, and tore down communication lines in others.

Storm warnings displayed at all lake ports Wednesday and last night made ship captains wary and little lake traffic was reported. There were no arrivals or departures at Goderich or Owen Sound last night, although one vessel arrived at the latter point early to-day.

Gingston and parts of Eastern Ontario escaped the severe winds, although rain fell steadily during the night in that section. Violence of the storm seemed greatest in the Bruce Peninsula, where telephone, telegraph and hydro lines were torn down. Although the wind reached a reported 60 miles an hour at Goderich, little damage beyond disrupted communications was reported in that area.

Snow, Sleet at Ottawa.

At Ottawa strong south-east winds brought a rain storm that turned to snow and sleet during the night.

Greatest velocity of the wind was at Toronto, where it reached 40 miles an hour.

When an automobile driven by Jack Kelly of Broadalbin, N.Y., skidded on wet pavement and went into the ditch at Kingston, Kelly was instantly killed. His brother, Wesley Kelly, received minor injuries.

Buffeted by a gust of wind, a car driven by Harry C. Gilman of Detroit, went out of control on the highway near Chatham and overturned in the ditch. Gilman and two passengers, Morice Craftman and Edith Craftman, also of Detroit, suffered minor bruises.

Flighty Prisoners Get Pink Panties

Oklahoma City, April 22. (CP).

WARDEN Fred Hunt's pink panties treatment for recaptured prisoners at Granite reformatory gained support to-day of the Oklahoma affairs board.

"I think it is a noble experiment," said Lea Nichols, head of the board, which administers the state penal institutions.

"Hunt knows more about those prisoners than we do. I certainly am not going to stop him. I will give him a free hand and a free bloomer."

Four prisoners who escaped were punished by seating them in the rotunda of the reformatory for 22 hours a day—two attired only in pink panties and two in Mother Hubbards.

Settlement Believed Nearer Than At Any Time Since Walkout

FIFTEEN DAYS OFF WORK

Premier Includes Leduc, Nixon And Louis Fine In Negotiations

TORONTO, April 22.—(CP)— A settlement of the 15-day strike of Oshawa automobile workers appeared nearer to-day than at any time since the walk-out April 8 as union spokesmen and General Motors executives sat down with Premier Mitchell Hepburn to work out a detailed agreement.

Present when the conference settled down to work at 1.30 o'clock, were H. J. Carmichael, vice-president and general manager, and J. R. Highfield, plant manager, of General Motors of Canada; J. L. Cohen, Union counsel, and C. H. Millard, president of the Oshawa local of the United Automobile Workers of America, and also a U.A.W. organizer.

The Oshawa strikers' negotiating committee was also present. It was not known beforehand whether they would ultimately take direct part in the conference or whether they would remain in an ante-room where Cohen and Millard might consult them. A notable absentee was Hugh Thompson, C.I.O. organizer, who has been centre of much of the preliminary trouble.

Amicable Start.

Hopes the conference would result in an early settlement were made yesterday when the Premier held simultaneous but separate conferences with Carmichael and Cohen. It was understood Carmichael and Cohen conferred privately here to iron out any remaining preliminaries.

Taking part in the conference with Premier Hepburn were Hon. Paul Leduc, Attorney General and Minister of Mines; Hon. Harry Nixon, Provincial Treasurer, and Lewis Fine, Ontario Labor Department.

The Bargaining Committee is on hand in case a conference is arranged to present formally the strikers' demands, Millard and Hans McIntyre, union official said. Those accompanying Millard are George Day, George Prise, Pat Murphy, Bill Walker, Frank Palmer, R. E. Rabbs, and Miss Gertrude Gillard.

Two "Non-Unionists" Ousted

When attention was drawn to absence of Ollie Dean and H. James, McIntyre said these two men had acted as employees' representatives "but they were serving in an advisory capacity." It was suggested the two men were removed from the committee because they favored acceptance of settlement proposals extended by Mayor Alexander Hall at Monday night's mass meeting.

"There is no dissension in the union, no dissension in the executive of the union," said McIntyre.

The Mayor suggested a return to work with increased pay, a five-day 45-hour week with time and one-half for overtime with recognition of the local union, but not the International.

When asked if Dean or James favored the Mayor's proposals, McIntyre replied: "I would rather not answer that." He suggested the two men be asked.

Order Hood Home For Coronation

LONDON, April 22 (C.P. Cable).—The Admiralty announced to-day that Rear-Admiral Charles Gordon Ramsey, commander of the second battle squadron, will relieve Vice-Admiral Geoffrey Blake as senior naval officer in Northern Spanish waters.

Ramsey will hoist his flag on the battleship Royal Oak, which will sail from Devonport on Saturday for Spain. Blake, commander of the battle cruiser squadron, will return his flagship, H.M.S. Hood, to Portsmouth where the vessel, the most powerful warship afloat, will be prepared for the Coronation Naval Review off Spithead on May 20.

STEPS ON LIVE WIRE.

SUDBURY, Ont., April 22 (C.P.).—George Will, 22, Toronto, was electrocuted on Wednesday when he stepped backwards on to a live high voltage wire at Coniston No. 1 Plant of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission on the Wahnapitae River.

Dr. W. S. Johns of Coniston and Dr. R. Orange of Sudbury won his special resuscitation apparatus worked for four hours in efforts to revive Will.

Divorced Queen Pleads Guilty To Attempting Witch Craft

THREE MAGIC MEN HELD

SEROWE, Bechuana-Land, Africa, April 22. (CP).—On trial under a cluster of thorn trees, the divorced queen of the powerful regent chief of the Bamangwato tribe pleaded guilty to-day to charges of trying to harm the queen mother by mystic potions and incantations.

The former Queen Ragakgamela, 27, divorced by Chief Tshekedi Khama, March 7, entered her plea before a district commissioner. Three witch doctors, held with her, entered similar pleas.

They were charged with trying to harm the queen mother Semane on the grounds she alienated her son's affections for Ragakgamela. Semane is the widow of the Khama chief who submitted Bechuana-Land to Queen Victoria.

Bechuana-Land stretched between South Africa and the Rhodesias, is a British protectorate. It is administered by the British High Commissioner to South Africa, Sir William Clark, formerly at Ottawa, who is represented in the territory by a resident commissioner.

Oshawa Champion Egg-Eating City

Ottawa, April 21. (CP).

RESIDENTS of Oshawa, Ont., eat more eggs than those of any other city in Canada. This fact was disclosed last night by the economics branch of the Agriculture Department which conducted studies on the consumption of various food products in different city and rural districts of Canada.

Oshawa led in egg-eating with 36 dozens of eggs per person each year; Calgary was next with 34.

Looking For Business—Finds Snowbank.

An Examiner man, working on the Toilties and Mail-It-Away Edition of this paper, was in the Sturgeon Lake district yesterday. Truth is he was looking for advertising. Got it, too.

But he found something else when he parked his car behind the pavilion at Sturgeon Lake. He found the last snow bank of the season. Not a formidable one, but there it was.

The ice went out of the lake there on Monday and like all other resorts in the Kawartha Lakes district preparations will now be under way for the 1937 season.

The Examiner wants to make this a better season, and that is why the plan was adopted of issuing a Mail-It-Away edition. Get your lists ready because we will be asking for them within a few weeks now. We believe it is a good plan to send out this paper before people have made their plans for the 1937 vacation.

Travels Across Siberia So Chinese Envoy May Be Suitably Garbed

TWO WEEKS OF FITTINGS

SHANGHAI, April 22. (CP-Reuters)—A missionary, carrying an elaborate gold-braided suit, to-day travelled across Siberia enroute to London.

The suit was inadvertently left in Shanghai by H. H. King, China's chief delegate to the Coronation of King George VI. When the error was discovered King was already at sea.

The Chinese Finance Minister had spent two weeks in fittings before his tailors completed the suit to his satisfaction, and not wishing to take any chances on its being lost in transmission King decided to entrust its safe delivery in London to his friend the British missionary.

Papoose Has Carriage As Tribe Modernizes

Calgary, April 22.

THE INDIAN custom has changed, but only partly, to white man's style. After 180 Blackfoot tribesmen, clutching treaty money in their bronzed hands, arrived here from Gleichen, Alta., sixty miles east of Calgary, a squaw was seen pushing a baby carriage along a downtown street. The dad strode along in front.

Ballyduff Midnight Syrup Party Proves 'Scorcher' But Boys Laugh Last

Lindsay, Ont., April 22. (CP).

A FEW of the boys at Ballyduff, 20 miles south of here, indulged in an old-time "sugaring off" and got themselves in trouble. They also proved quite a headache to the owner of the sugar bush.

The boys, living on the eighth line, sneaked into the bush one dark night with some hot cakes for "sugaring off" once quite an annual affair in these parts of the maple syrup country. The hot cakes were for a midnight lunch and everything went fine till the boys poured several pails of sap into the evaporator, they had already emptied of syrup.

They didn't place enough sap inside to keep the machine from burning. The owner scanned the scorched evaporator and called police who called on the boys. The youngsters worked all day and night fixing up a new one, getting supplies from Lindsay.

The sap was bubbling again. The owner fell asleep. He awoke at the morning. The new pan was burned to a cinder. All the sap in the pan had been lost along with several barrels in the feeder reservoir.

FOOD FREIGHTERS TO RUN BLOCKADE ON OWNERS' ORDER

Bilbao Shore Batteries Open Barrage On Patrolling Rebel Warships

DRIVEN OFF FISHERMEN

ST. JEAN DE LUZ, Franco-Spanish Border, April 22. (AP) — British food ships, under the high seas guard of British men-of-war, determined to-day to smash the Spanish insurgent blockade of Bilbao and provision the near-starving Basque capital.

While three of the five freighters, driven to cover here by attacks from insurgent vessels, put up steam for the attempt to run the blockade, government shore batteries along the Bay of Biscay coast started booming at dawn in the direction of insurgent warships.

The food-laden British vessels were reported authorized by their owners to run the gauntlet, despite a warning from the British cruiser squadron that they would be convoyed only to the three-mile limit.

At that point, the government shore batteries and fleet of small armed craft will take over the job of fighting off insurgent attacks.

The first victims of the effort to prove the way was open to Bilbao and its refugee-swollen population of 400,000 were three insurgent trawlers who came within range of the guns at Santander just after dawn.

Same Fishing Fleet

Attempting to raid a fleet of fishing vessels anchored off Lequeitio they were driven back by the long range coast artillery of the Basques.

Insurgent sources reported their ships ranged the Basque coast, just off Bilbao, ready to swoop down on any ships defying their blockade to starve Bilbao into submission to the slowly encircling land forces of General Emilio Mola.

Just outside St. Jean de Luz, ready to escort the fleet of little food ships to the three-mile limit, the world's mightiest warship, the battle cruiser Hood, rode at anchor.

Under the command of the flag officer aboard the Hood was a squadron of "B" class destroyers, including the Blanche and the Beagle, and the Forester which had just returned from Bermeo—a scant few land miles west of Bilbao—with 200 refugees.

The three freighters bound for Bilbao were the MacGregor, the Hamsteniey and the Stamfrook, each 2,000 tons, flying the British flag and carrying mixed cargoes of food.

REBUILD VILLAGE OCEAN WIPED OUT

Smugglers' Haunt On Sussex Coast Reappears As Law-Abiding Community

MIDDLETON-ON-SEA, England, April 22 (C.P.). — About 100 years ago the last vestige of the ancient village of Middleton was wiped from the face of the earth. The tiny settlement, mentioned in the Domesday Book of William the Conqueror, on the chalky cliffs of the south coast, fell prey to the sea's encroachment and now is believed to be more than two miles off the coast.

But a new Middleton has sprung up at a comparatively safe distance from the menace of erosion. Huge building estates have appeared and the community has gone architecturally modern. An appeal has also been launched to enlarge the second St. Nicholas' Church which was built at "a respectable distance" from the sea in 1848. The only relics of the old church are the register dating back to 1560 and the chalice and paten of 1576. These are treasured in the new church.

S. Burningham, 80, oldest inhabitant of the community, recalls stories of the Middleton of 100 years ago as a hotbed of smugglers. "Everyone in the village dealt in contraband spirits and my father told me he often earned fourpence for carrying a couple of kegs of rum across miles of field."

CHARIVARI PARTY FOR WARSAW PAIR

Cottesloe Young People Assist In Honoring Mr. And Mrs. Herb Tucker

COTTESLOE, April 22 — The Young People from here joined the Young People of Warsaw in a charivarie party on Monday night for Mr. and Mrs. Herb. Tucker at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. George Russel, Warsaw Road.

About forty were present and inspired of old fashioned charivaries when the old muzzle loaded shotguns were double charged with powder and the crowd gathered to the time of a tin pan, the young people made themselves at home and after giving the bride and groom their best wishes they proceeded to enjoy themselves in music and dancing.

A collection was taken and instead of the usual custom of tendering it to the musicians, it was presented to the bride and groom.

Mr. Tucker in a nice little speech and invited them to visit them at their home in Apsley.

Y.P.S. Meeting.

The Y.P.S. met in the church on Monday evening with the president, Miss A. McCracken in charge.

During the business period arrangements were made for the meeting to be held at Warsaw on Monday night as this society is making its return visit. Books for the play entitled, "George in a Jam," are being sent for, which is expected to be presented in the near future.

The Bible readings were given by R. MacDonald and D. Barr. Miss McCracken gave the topic in a very interesting manner and Marjorie Barr gave a reading.

The meeting closed with a hymn, followed by the Mispah benediction, after which a game was enjoyed by all.

The ROYAL ROAD to the CORONATION

His Majesty swimming at Southwold, golfing at Sunningdale, playing tennis at Wimbledon

TENNIS is his majesty's favorite sport and he is a good enough player, though wielding his racket left-handed, to have put up a creditable game on the famed Wimbledone courts. As a boy, the prince and his brothers and sister were taught the value of sports in building keen minds and healthy bodies and they gave way to none in their enjoyment of games.

The king has long been known as the best tennis player in the royal family, many maintain that he is also the best golfer. Curiously enough, as the pictures above will show, while he plays his excellent brand of tennis left handed, he swings a golf club and plays all other sports right handed. A study of this form here, to links critics, will reveal that his stance and swing are considerably better than that of the average amateur.

When his majesty plays, and with the great demands upon his time it takes effort to fit in a program of games, he plays hard and asks no quarter from his opponents. Tennis he perfected in the R.A.F. and with a championship is recorded as winning a doubles championship as an important tournament. Golf was less popular generally when the king was plain Prince Albert, but that too was on his schoolboy curriculum and the ability he mastered then has not deserted him. He plays generally at Sunningdale, near London, where he is well-known. Even when aboard ship during his tours of the dominions, athletics were not allowed to lapse and squash racquets took the place of other sports impossible afloat.

Swimming he enjoys particularly when at his camp for boys at Southwold, Sussex, which, in the past, he has visited each summer for a few days under canvas. Then a romp with the lads or a long hike is often followed by a brisk dip and though not a champion swimmer his majesty is well able to look after himself in the water.

His belief in sports as a training ground for boys was indicated by his advocacy of more playing fields in industrial areas both as an aid to better citizenship and as a safety measure against increasing traffic hazards. He became chairman of the advisory committee to distribute King George's jubilee fund for this purpose. In 1934 during a visit to Manchester he watched the well-known Manchester City football team in a match against a league rival and he enjoys also lacrosse, field hockey and rugby. The customary official appearances at the Derby and Grand National will of course be continued and with pleasure by their majesties, and it is clear that King George VI intends to take an increasing interest in the racing stables which his father developed. Thus it would hardly be a misnomer if some enterprising writer, reviewing his majesty's unostentatious but obviously sincere interest in the world of games, would some day dub him "The Sporting King."

Conference Is Set With Premier 1 p.m. Minus C.I.O. Tinge

Hepburn Considers Including Cabinet Ministers In Expected Final Decision

OSHAWA, Ont., April 22 (CP). — General Motors strikers marked time today while their representatives began new negotiations with company officials in Premier Hepburn's Toronto office.

The sudden swing toward a new conference came yesterday when union heads agreed to the company's ultimatum that settlement terms must be talked over with the Premier, or the men return to work before an agreement was reached, continuing negotiations after they were back.

Hopes of early settlement seemed much brighter when union heads agreed to the former course. Hugh Thompson the C.I.O. organizer, whose presence at past parleys was protested by Premier Hepburn, left last night for Washington. C. H. Millard, president of the Oshawa union, announced he himself would represent the men. He would, he said, attend the conference "in the capacity agreed upon by Premier Hepburn."

What that capacity was, Millard declined to say, but in the past the Premier had insisted on meeting him not as an official of the International Union, but as a representative of General Motors employees.

Up To The Men.

Arrangements for the Toronto negotiations were made when Millard was informed by Harry Carmichael, General Motors vice-president, it was the men's job to arrange the parley. Union heads met J. L. Cohen, union counsel, and he completed arrangements in Toronto. The company had stood firmly on its demand the workers return to work before settlement terms were discussed or Mr. Hepburn must be taken into negotiations.

Before leaving Oshawa Thompson said he would return with Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers of America, the International Union.

Mayor Alex. Hall's only contribution to yesterday's developments was the warning that if the strike were not soon settled many skilled auto-

Hitler Eases Pace To Get Some Play

BERLIN, April 22 (A.P.) — Adolf Hitler is finding time to toy with the arts and the theatre these days.

The strain of busy days to establish his power has lessened greatly, and the Fuehrer begins his 49th year of life surrounded by many new pleasures.

An artistic, modern theatre has been built in one wing of the Reich's Chancellery in the Wilhelmstrasse. Its revolving, disappearing stage, blue and silver auditorium and artistically decorated dressing-rooms are said to be the very latest in theatre construction.

Hitler likes to attend rehearsals of casts from state operas or theatres who are to perform for him, and he often takes a hand in suggesting artistic changes.

His Munich home is filled with an elaborate art collection. "He has an exquisite taste," a Berlin art dealer related.

Freighter Grounds On Huron Shoal

MACKINAC ISLAND, Mich., April 22 (A.P.). — The Mackinac Island coastguard station said to-day the freighter W. H. McClean was aground on a shoal near Bois Blanc Island, south of here in Lake Huron.

The coastguard said the freighter was in no immediate danger, although a 35 to 40 mile an hour wind was blowing. Rain and snow were falling intermittently.

DON'T SUFFER FROM CONSTIPATION

Read this letter from Wm. C. Billings (address on request): "When I had eaten a heavy breakfast, I would feel logy. After a couple of days of this, I would have to take a laxative.

"One morning I had a dish of ALL-BRAN. It beats any laxative, as it keeps me in shape every day."

Everybody knows that taking medicine all the time is an unhealthy habit. How much better to end common constipation by enjoying this safe, natural food!

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN relieves common constipation because it gives the body the "bulk" it needs. It absorbs twice its weight in water, gently exercises and sponges the intestines clean.

Try it for a week. If not satisfied your money will be refunded by the Kellogg Company. Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually enough —with every meal in chronic cases. Serve with milk or fruits. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in London.

TORIES IN SAULT NOMINATE LYONS

Former Minister Claims U.S. Paper Industry Is "Sugar Daddy" Of Hepburn Regime

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., April 22 (C.P.). — Conservatives of this Northern Ontario constituency were ready to-day for the next provincial election, whenever Premier Hepburn sets the date. Their candidate will be James Lyons, former Minister of Lands and Forests in the Ferguson Government.

A nominating convention yesterday unanimously selected Mr. Lyons as the party's standard-bearer after he had declared the district was "sick and tired of the Hepburn Government." The Government's pulpwood-export policy was criticised by Mr. Lyons, who said the United States paper industry was the "sugar daddy" of the administration.

Addressing the convention, Hon. Earl Rowe, Provincial Party Leader, termed the Premier the party's best ally because, he said, he was defeating himself. The Government, Mr. Rowe, added, was "bidding to the left before it came into power and bidding to the right before it goes out."

The Rand of South Africa will hold its first auto meet next December.

19,000 Of London's Policemen Hunt Boy 15, In Rooftop Chase

ESCAPES DOWN DRAIN PIPE

LONDON, April 22 (A.P.).—London's 19,000 policemen searched today for one snub-nosed boy of 15 who escaped from custody in a wild dash across roof tops.

The boy, his identity guarded by British law, squirmed loose from his guard yesterday at Juvenile Court in Caxton Hall, climbed through a window and scrambled to the roof.

Burly policemen ponderously followed. For hours they slithered over the tiles while the boy unrefooted as a monkey, danced lightly from one dizzy perch to another, and a good-natured crowd cheered favorites among the perspiring police.

Twice the youngster escaped capture by sliding down drain pipes where the men dared not follow. Finally he got away by descending an unguarded ladder near a back exit to the building.

Veteran Keeper Of Jewels Won Honors On Battlefield

Major-General Sir George Younghusband In Charge Of Coronation Relics

77 YEARS OF AGE

LONDON, April 22 (CP)—Among the historic officers of state to whom the Coronation of George VI and Queen Elizabeth on May 12 brings new duties and responsibilities is the Keeper of the Jewel House in the Tower of London, now Major-General Sir George Younghusband.

General Younghusband, who has held this post for the last 20 years, first saw fighting in the Afghan War of 1878, and took part in nearly all of Great Britain's "little wars" which followed one another pretty rapidly in the 80s. He was severely wounded in South Africa and in the Great War was mentioned in despatches more than once. He now is 77 years of age.

In olden days the Crown Jewels were entrusted to the care of the Abbot and monks of Westminster, but it is now nearly seven centuries since they were sent for safe-keeping to the Tower of London. The Jewel House there is visited yearly by tens of thousands of people from all over the world. It lies in what is known as the Wakefield Tower, and its priceless contents are enclosed in a heavily-barred circular iron cage, which enables the beholder to walk around the exhibit and inspect it from all angles.

Many of the emblems have not been removed from the Tower since George V's coronation in 1911.

In addition to the actual regalia, the Jewel House contains many other valuable relics. There is an altar dish and flagon, for instance, presented to the Tower by William and Mary of Orange on condition they were used three times yearly in the chapel of St. Peter ad Vincula within the Tower. In this way these articles would replace temporarily the altar plate used in the time of Charles II.

Was Political Gesture

At the time the proviso was probably a mild political gesture to show the Stuarts were no more, but though there is now naturally no political significance in the observance the custom is still followed, and the William and Mary plate replaces the much older Stuart Plate on three church festivals.

Near to these articles in the Tower are the maces carried by the Sergeant-at-Arms in different reigns. There are eight of them, their weight ranging from 34 to 50 pounds. Besides being used at the coronation, the maces are carried on such special occasions as when peace was declared in 1918, when the Heralds proclaimed the glad tidings at various points in London. Another interesting exhibit in General Younghusband's care is a wine fountain presented to Charles II by the city of Plymouth.

Claims Throne

Anthony Hall, who for years has flooded England with propaganda claiming the throne on grounds he is a direct descendant of King Henry VII, again sprang into prominence with the announcement that he has served the archbishop of Canterbury with an injunction demanding the archbishop "shall not crown Albert Wettin (King George VI) as king of England, as he is not of royal blood." "King Anthony" then told reporters he believed an American girl as Queen of England "is exactly what we need." "An American girl would bring the United States as her dowry."

CROWNINGS MEAN GREAT CEREMONY WITH HEAVY DAY

Program For King And Queen Strenuous Through Long Hours

ON CORONATION DAY

LONDON, April 22 (AP) — King George VI and Queen Elizabeth will begin the most arduous day of their lives when at dawn on May 12 guns thunder from Hyde Park and the Tower of London to announce Coronation Day.

Officials will solemnly present to the King his underwear, shirt, socks and other raiment as tradition provides. At 10:30 the procession will leave Buckingham Palace for Westminster Abbey.

Their Majesties will ride in the state coach, drawn by eight cream-colored horses, they will be attended by colorfully-garbed yeomen of the guard and a sovereign's escort of the Life Guards. In separate processions preceding them will be Empire and foreign representatives, princes and princesses of the blood royal.

The coach has been specially smartened up for the occasion. Early one morning, to attract as little attention as possible, it was taken to an old firm of coach-builders in Chelsea for regilding and renovation. Although built 178 years ago for Queen Anne it is still in good running order. Very heavy, it is generally drawn at walking pace by eight horses.

Along the route will be an estimated 2,000,000 spectators, giving London police one of the worst traffic and transportation problems they have ever faced. Steel crush barriers will be erected and hundreds of extra mounted police will be on duty.

The King will enter the Abbey wearing a crimson velvet robe and a cap of state. The Queen will be attired in purple robes and a circlet of gold. The lengthy Coronation ceremony is expected to start about 11 a.m. when the royal couple advances to the "Coronation theatre," a raised platform in front of the high altar, and kneels on faldstools set before the chairs of state on the right of the altar. After various rituals the Archbishop of Canterbury administers the Coronation Oath to the King who kneels at the altar with his hand on the Bible.

After the anointing under the silken pall the King is girdled with the sword of state in a purple velvet scabbard. He removes it, after a prayer has been said, and carries it to the altar. It is redeemed with money and carried naked before the monarch during the rest of the ceremony.

Guns Salute Crowning

Next the King is invested with the stole and imperial mantle and, returning to St. Edward's chair, receives the orb, a ruby ring and his sceptre. The Archbishop consecrates St. Edward's crown and reverently places it on the King's head. Guns at the Tower of London, signalled by a telephone operator high in the Abbey, boom out the news and the people—inside and out—shout "God Save the King." The peers put on their coronets, trumpets blare and Abbey bells peal.

After the benediction the King goes back to the throne. Shouts of "God Save the King" again swell through the Abbey as drums roll and trumpets sound.

Coronation of the Queen follows, then the procession back to Buckingham over a six-mile route. Back at the palace, their Majesties will appear on the balconies in response to the surging crowds. The King's last major duty of the day will be the broadcast to the Empire.

For the royal rulers it will be an exacting day but for their loyal subjects it will be a colorful, exciting one. Something of the carnival spirit will prevail in the crowd which will flow through Hyde Park—transformed for the occasion with refreshment stands, first aid shelters and troop tents.

Floodlighted buildings will add to the spectacle and, from scores of restaurants, pubs and theatres will re-echo the cry "God Save the King" as the masses drink his health and watch special entertainments far into the night.

PLACE IN HOME, IN CAREER TOO

Wstern Woman Doctor Believes Business And Family Life Possible

EDMONTON, April 22—(CP)—It is entirely possible and practicable for a woman to divide her interests satisfactorily between home and career even if she has a family, these are the considered opinions of Mildred Polirabee Newell, a practising physician in Edmonton since 1932, Dominion convenor of health for the National Council of Women and one of the West's pioneers in the field of professionalism for women.

Dr. Newell has no liking for an attitude of militant feminism, she made clear. She sees no need for it and she is not alarmed for Canadian women on that score as women don't need to defend their rights. A question of one's sex superiority over another, she indicated, is all nonsense. Each has its place and women will always have theirs.

A physician and home-maker, Dr. Newell has had plenty of experience on which to base her opinions. And as convenor of health for the National Council of Women, she occupies a recognized place of importance among her sex in the Dominion. She represents that body, too, on the Canadian Welfare Council.

Last summer, after presenting her report at the annual meeting of the council in Halifax, she stopped off in Chicago for a fortnight, to observe methods in treatment of maternity cases. There, she explained, the practice has been definitely established of confining women in maternity cases in their homes. This, she believes, is the better way for all women, and particularly helpful for those hard pressed financially. Chief objection of doctors arose from lack of hospital conveniences in homes.

A girl shouldn't really undertake the study of medicine unless she has the urge to do it, Dr. Newell says. Having it, branches of the profession embracing obstetrics, gynaecology and children's diseases will always be open to her.

PAINFUL PILES

Can Be Quickly Relieved

If you think there is no way to relieve the misery of piles, it's because you don't know of HEM-ROID, an internal medicine, from a prescription written by Dr. Leonhardt, a western physician.

The real cause of piles is on the inside—bad circulation of blood in the lower bowel, with the tiny rectal veins full of stagnant, impure blood.

Dr. Leonhardt decided the way to relieve piles was internally, with a medicine which would ease the congestion of blood in the veins of the lower bowel and help to heal and restore the sore, tender spots. After many tests he wrote the prescription which has been so successful in giving quick relief from pile misery. It is now offered to you with our promise that you may have your money back if you are not completely satisfied after using one bottle.

Coronation Tickets Resented By Towns

MANCHESTER, April 22—(CP)—Some of the Lancashire towns are "on their dignity" on the question of representation at the Coronation.

Bolton began it. The Corporation received six tickets for 15-shilling seats on the route of the procession. The Council decided it was beneath the dignity of a town of Bolton's importance to have its representatives sit on an uncovered stand and to pay for their tickets, and has returned the tickets.

Oldham also believed it should have a more dignified invitation.

Two other Lancashire boroughs, Warrington and Stalybridge, have returned their tickets, but in their case the reason is that civic heads wish to participate in the Coronation celebrations at home.

A Wholesome Protest

At a meeting of the Students' Administrative Association of the University of Western Ontario a recent dance held by the Arts Class was discussed. Part of the entertainment was in the form of what is known as a floor show, and criticism centred on the nature of the jokes used which were considered rather vulgar, and the dancers were too scantily attired. One young lady student stated "I don't think it was fit to be seen." The report indicates there was general agreement with that remark.

And that speaks well for the class of young folk who are gathered at Western. There is a tendency today to stand for almost anything in the way of entertainment without rising up to protest. A good deal which gets by under the pretence that it is new and smart is merely vulgar and disgusting. If a woman can so expose herself that she attains near nudity and is able to escape the censors or the police or the morality squad then she seems to consider she has accomplished something. And if the jokes are sufficiently offensive to make a sensitive person shudder and yet not so entirely and flagrantly rotten to call for suppression, then those who perpetrate them consider they too are rather smart. It was refreshing to find the young folk at Western pointing their harpoon of verbal scorn at such entertainment.

Just As Planned

A number of press photographers and newsreel experts gathered near Havelock at the Ontario Stone Quarry when a good-sized hill of rock was to be blown to bits. It is more correct to say they gathered near the scene, and nearness on such an occasion is measured by half-miles or concessions. Harry Scott, the superintendent, estimated 100,000 tons of rock had been displaced by that one giant explosion in which 18 tons of dynamite had been used. It had been necessary to make 846 feet of tunnelling so the explosive could be carefully loaded and wired in 54 separate pockets.

Those who go to take pictures on such occasions are content to stand afar off. Even at a distance of half a mile fingers are apt to be a little unsteady following the rumble and the outburst. It must be with feelings of satisfaction that those in charge of such undertakings find after the switch has been pulled that everything went just as had been planned, because at best dynamite has never been regarded as a friendly playfellow.

Marks of Appreciation

There have been two complimentary dinners in Peterborough in as many days, the first for Senator Iva Fallis and the other for Ald. Walter Stocker. The attendance and general feeling on each occasion was such that one can safely conclude the people heartily approved of what was being done, and the truth may well be that we do not as a rule do enough of this kind of thing. We are certain the honored guest on each occasion must have felt the sincerity which plainly marked the occasion.

The honor paid Senator Fallis can well be interpreted as more than a personal affair; in the larger sense it was a tribute and recognition to the part women are playing in the public life of this country, and it was noticeable that the matter of politics seemed to have no part whatever in the arrangement nor the attendance.

Ald. Walter Stocker is worthy of some such recognition as he received at the dinner tendered by the Horticultural Society. Truth is he has been worthy of it for quite a long time. A plain outspoken man he is, but practical indeed when it comes to making the city a more beautiful place. His testimonial stands in the many places where he has turned his hand to cause shrubs and flowers to grow.

Glad to Read About It

Two men in Goderich were accused of having stolen some chickens, but as there were only bones left of several of them there was trouble proving ownership. But there remained yet one hen which had not gone to the roasting pan on account of age.

The speckled hen was said to be the property of a lady living in town, and the bird was taken to her home for purposes of identification. Now one speckled hen rather old is likely to look like any other speckled hen rather old, but this hen was different. It was in the pet class and when told to sit down on the floor it promptly did so and identification was established.

In this age when efficiency is praised above all else, and when chicks from the time of birth until they go forth as broilers or have a chance to lay eggs never do have much home surroundings, it is well to read of this speckled hen at Goderich. We consider that quite an accomplishment for a speckled hen to sit down when told to do so. There isn't much else a hen could do; she could not stand on her head, and she might lose her balance if she tried to imitate the dog's trick of shaking hands.

So in this day of rush and speed, of trying to raise 50 chicks where formerly there was only one, it is well to know that in Goderich the speckled hen has opportunity to live until she gets old and in the meantime has picked up a trick or two.

Financing the Struggle

Another noted trial starts in Los Angeles today. Rheba Crawford, former co-pastor of Angelus Temple, is suing Aimee Semple McPherson for $1,080,000 for slander. Rheba at one time when working in New York was known as "the angel of Broadway," and any person who has visited that busy spot will readily enough admit that angels seem to be a trifle scarce there.

But it is going to take money to fight a case like that. And much of it. When one angel starts fighting another angel the expenses are apt to run high, so the people at Angelus Temple made plans for it on Sunday when the collection plate was passed.

We read the collection was so great that three men were required to carry it from the auditorium to the section described as the counting room. In the collection that day there was cash, wedding rings and gold teeth. Where the wedding rings came from or why they should come is something on which we have no information. The cash we can understand, but when the folk start shedding their gold teeth to finance the battle of the angels we admit the situation is out of hand entirely and well past understanding. Whether they had them stored in the house or deliberately pried them loose from their moorings is something on which we have no light. But if and when Aimee wins this last of many court battles the individual who donated a couple of gold teeth will probably have reason to feel a personal interest in the victory. He or she will not be like one who has viewed the battle from afar off.

Wants a Log Cabin

The Examiner received a letter from a member of the staff of the New York Herald-Tribune, asking about some property he was intending to purchase at Loon Lake, which is in Chandos township a few miles from Apsley and about 40 miles north of Peterborough. The New York newspaper man is going to build a log cabin there so he can have a place to spend the summer with members of his family. He will find the trip from New York to Loon Lake a delightful bit of travel. He will also find Loon Lake and its surroundings entirely different from the place where he carries on his daily work on 41st Street in New York City.

There was an inquiry in the letter about taxes, and from information which we secured it is certainly not a formidable item. But each log cabin or cottage erected means a little more added income for Chandos or for any of the other townships in which lake property is being acquired. It is not merely a payment this year, but next year and the year after. Each cottage added also means a larger market for supplies; it means a better chance for the farmers to sell whatever produce they have to offer.

The same movement is taking place in many sections of the Kawartha Lakes district and it is permanent settlement. In the case mentioned in this article it means a man who earns his living working on a newspaper in New York is going to spend some of it building a cabin at Loon Lake; he will spend more of it when he comes along each year with members of his family. It is new money as far as this district is concerned and we know of no other way in which it could be brought here. Nature has been extremely generous in dealing with the Kawartha Lakes district and each year sees additions to the distance to which that truth has penetrated.

After Many Years

The establishment of a Canadian Corps of Commissionaries is being undertaken in several centres. Sponsored by the Dominion Department of Pensions and National Health it will function as an employment agency for ex-service men; that is, an effort is being made to try and find places where any special training which ex service men may have will be of assistance in placing them in suitable positions.

We have noticed discussion at various points regarding the ability of men who served in the war to take certain positions which were open. It is now nearing 23 years since the war started and November of this year will mark 19 years since its close. The average age of the men who served overseas has never been definitely stated, but we have seen the statement that as far as Canada is concerned the average age of the man who is in the ex-service ranks today would be close to 45 years. There are of course men who served during the war who are not yet 40 years of age, and some of them have passed the 60-year mark.

One discussion arose when new policemen were being engaged in an Ontario city. It was argued that a returned man should be given the preference, but it was found the age limit of the force did not permit the engagement of any army man in the community. It was perhaps a blunt truth to state—but they were considered too old.

It is also a fact that war experience proved a break in the lives of a number of men and they have never been able to step back in the path where they were prior to the war and proceed with the plans they may have had before enlistment. Some of them have found that disability which they considered slight at the time they left the army has increased, and according to the increase there has been a similar decrease in their ability to work.

We do not believe there was a man in existence who, at the time Canadians were enlisting for the world war would have predicted that 19 years after the war was finished there would be a new effort making its start to see what could be done for ex-service men who had not been attended to or who had found it impossible to fit in with the new order of things which they faced upon being discharged from the army. And yet that is what is being done in the month of April in the year 1937. When they went away there were the definite promises of a grateful and enthusiastic and war-fevered people. When they came back the enthusiasm for carrying out those promises had faded, and in that faded atmosphere a good many returned men have had to make their way ever since.

NOTE AND COMMENT

A child born in Detroit weighs but 9 ounces. It is time the stork went to have his equipment checked over by the Weights and Measures Department.

Germany has started a drive to save wrapping paper and the next campaign will probably be to make sausages without the skins.

Monte Carlo casino reports a profit of nearly $100,000 last year. Evidently the gentleman of the song who broke the bank and was honored musically has not been around recently.

Catching pickerel out of season is a practice that is not only injurious to legitimate fishing but is decidedly costly when the courts start levying $15 fines for the offence.

United States treasury officials state there is no change in their policy in regard to gold. That announcement should allay a lot of uneasiness on this side of the line.

A Pole who claims to be 102 years old has received a legacy of $200,000 from his 99-year-old brother in New York. He will probably get a flock of marriage proposals in his mail during the next few weeks.

No prisoners are to be freed in Canada as part of the Coronation celebration. The failure of those who were liberated at the time of King George's jubilee to honor their parole has killed any chance of a similar release on this occasion.

The world's amateur hockey contest in Toronto does not seem to be causing any great excitement, possibly because the fans realize the teams are all Canadians no matter what uniforms they wear.

A survey by experts of the Kitchener municipal street railway produced the finding that the equipment was out-of-date, the carbarn system is inefficient and the staff is overmanned. Apart from that everything seemed to be quite all right.

The Canadian League against War and Fascism proposes to start a boycott against German goods. It will not be in time, however, to save the London Utilities Commission which has discovered that its Coronation decorations were made in Germany.

The chairman of the Social Credit committee of Alberta is going to England to make a personal appeal to Major Douglas to lead a rescue expedition into the province. The scheme seems to be going down for the third time so the Major better bring along a pulmotor with him.

SHE KNOWS

(By A. H. K.)

¶ When I hear from my Aunt Lucile, I know she'll tell just how she'll feel, because she always did; she writes and tells what makes her shake, gives history of each little ache, and pains within her lid.

¶ When she leaves home she brings her pills, she knows she'll bring along her ills, and she brings ointment too; a water bottle's in her grip, before she ever makes a trip, it's covered in pale blue.

¶ I marvel how she knows each ache, and just the proper pill to take, for they are green and brown; and some are blue and some are pink, in fact I often stop to think, she's all the shades in town.

¶ And if there's something in her meal, that puts Lucile just off her keel, she takes a pill that's white; and when it comes near time for bed, she takes a pill that's colored red, so she will sleep all night.

¶ And if she thinks her liver's shot, and acting like it shouldn't ought, Lucile knows what to do; she'll put the other pills away, and pop in pills throughout the day, and they are colored blue.

¶ So Aunt Lucile is rather smart, she knows her pills off all by heart, locates each pain and ache; she never has to stop to look, or read a chapter in a book—do know which one to take.

Opinion About The Auto Strike

(Letter in Globe and Mail)

TO the Editor of The Globe and Mail: There was a time when the striker was looked upon as a criminal or a lunatic. During modern times the use of the strike as a means of forcing the employer to join in council with employees has been generally recognized and approved. It is, for practical purposes, a necessary part of our economic system, and few would deny the employee this potent weapon, in contest with the sluggish or dishonest employer.

The strike as a weapon has been much abused. All corrective effort may be subject to abuse. Temperance reformers sometimes overshoot the mark, but general condemnation is not justifiable. The position of the worker in most parts of the world is immeasurably better today than it was a half century ago, and it is to be better yet. This is not by reason of a naturally developing benevolence or generosity on the part of the average employer. What the worker has won, he has had frequently bitter—by means of concerted action and bargaining. Only in this way had the employees any power.

Collective bargaining entails spokesmen for both sides, and while the workers used to put forward, in this role, one of their own number, the employer often had the whip hand, being attended by secretaries, accountants and lawyers. In order to avoid a faux pas. There was but an obvious development of this situation. The men's unions gathered strength, and for their advocates were able to command brains—good, bad and indifferent. And from these ranks have emerged the professional agitators, who are usually highly undesirable persons, mainly bent on lining their own pockets.

As regards the dispute between the employees at the Oshawa plant of "General Motors" and the Corporation, it should suffice to say that the dispute was not of an international character. The fact that the parent corporation is in another country is insignificant. Canadians can manage their own affairs in their own way, and it would appear that the employees were ill-advised in permitting the intrusion of an agitator from outside. By so doing they allowed a large block of public opinion to swing away.

The Prime Minister of Ontario would never have been permitted to refuse to meet the employers. He has not refused. He would, in fact, be willing to meet them at any time; but it is surely straining relations too far to tell him he must meet, and bargain with, the executive of a foreign labor organization.

The growing power of the worker, by legitimate means, and within proper limits, is something to be desired for the prosperity of the nation. The workers will retard their progress if they cannot run their own affairs. The last thing the worker wants is a dictator. The surest way to get a dictator is to affiliate with such concerns as the C.I.O.

If Democracy had a little moral courage it would see some good in communism, and some good in fascism, embracing those features for its own. But the time is not yet.

Toronto. Veritas Vincit.

THE RECALL—

(London Times)

IN places of worship throughout the country the Good Friday and Easter congregations this year have been so much larger than usual that the fact deserves notice. Reports from many places and from various denominations spoke of unprecedentedly full churches on Good Friday, while in regard to the Easter communicants there is the evidence of definite figures, not merely a general impression or the estimates of optimistic vergers.

This can be attributed in part, no doubt, both to the Archbishop's "recall" and to its timeliness. His appeal was made at a moment when the nation was ready to respond. Although statistics can be only an imperfect test of spiritual progress, this increase in churchgoing is encouraging and significant. It strengthens the hope expressed by the Archbishop that this year will witness the begining of a real return to religion, and that the Coronation of the King will be accompanied by a consecration of the people.

THE ALTERNATIVE.

(Edmonton Bulletin)

THE question of debt reduction in Alberta boils down to this: What is the alternative? What will happen if debts are not reduced, and reduced in a way to make a very substantial diminution of the total burden resting upon the productive industry of the province? The 772,000 people who live in Alberta have among them accumulated public and private debts amounting to $615,000,000. At 5 per cent the interest on that sum is more than $30,000,000 a year. At the average of rates actually contracted to be paid the interest bill cannot be less than $50,000,000 a year. Without taking leave of common sense, how can one suppose that we can maintain wealth production year after year on a scale large enough to stand that drain and also pay off the principal of the debts? There isn't a shadow in the world. The choice is simply debt reduction—of interest or principal—on a payable basis, or debt repudiation on a wholesale scale a little later on.

A Bit of Nonsense

Byron's Dog

A lady had a favorite pet dog which she called "Perchance."

"What a singular name for your beautiful pet," said a visitor, "and I would like to ask how you came to choose it."

"Oh," she drawled languidly, "it was named after Lord Byron's dog. You remember, where he speaks of it and says, 'Perchance my dog will howl.'"

RIGHT

"I know what I can do when I get back to the station—I can charge you with loitering!"—London Opinion.

The Root Of All Evil.

(From the Woodstock Sentinel-Review.)

"To all of you, I say right here,
I don't do this for fun;
Although I may be seeking fame,
I am chiefly out for mon."

EVERY labor agitator, if he wishes to be truthful, ought to begin his address to an audience in the foregoing words. Then they will understand that he is not so much interested in their welfare and wages as he is in how much his prestige and pockets may profit by his success in getting them to pay fees for joining his organization.

He tells them only a part of the story. He appeals to their cupidity by telling them that if they will follow his advice and strike for higher wages and shorter hours, their employers will be forced to close down their respective businesses or accede to their demands. If the employers, by reason of small profits, limited output, limited market, or foreign or domestic competition, cannot comply with the demands so made, then a mob of former employees is invited or inspired to wreck the factory or business and thus cause unwarranted loss to the man or company who had struggled for years to give employment and fair wages such as the business and profits allowed, to those same employees.

Canada is just now emerging from six years of depression. Factories that were forced to close down have been reopened, orders for goods have been sought for and in some cases obtained, and financial hope and prosperity have begun to take the place of despair and poverty. The crafty and unscrupulous labor agitator, who had been made dumb and impotent by the depression, at once thought he saw an opportunity to fill his pocket and add to his prestige by throwing the monkey wrench of a strike into the financial machinery just as the wheels of progress were beginning to revolve. He could not wait until these employees had got the business going fairly. He chose to try to stop them at the beginning.

He ought to tell those whom he addresses that every business is started by some man or men of brains and enterprise, who thought he or they could start a business or factory which would give employment to others and, incidentally, give some return for the money invested. To accomplish this end, they put in their own capital and induced many others to invest in it also. Consequently, the success of the business, built on hope and far-seeing vision, does affect many people other than the employees. Often it affects the wellbeing and peace of a whole community. No consideration to this aspect of the situation is given by the labor agitator and little, if any, is given by those who listen to his vaporings. They are thus led to join his organization and so wreck a struggling business and bring chaos where peace and prosperity had reigned. The great trouble with some people is that they either do not or cannot think clearly. Such people pay, with downcast eyes of timid acquiescence, to supernal gall and impudent assertion the tribute of a thoughtless "yes."

Getting Your Goat.

(From the St. Thomas Times-Journal.)

CANADIAN farm statistics do not list goats, possibly because so many people who are not farmers keep a goat or two on their grounds. As one motors around the country the number of tethered goats seen is increasing. There is no means of ascertaining the number in this country, but the United States Department of Agriculture does take a census, and at the last count the number of goats was over 5,000,000.

It is interesting to note, therefore, that the New Jersey College of Agriculture has undertaken the milk testing of goats and their general improvement and propagation, believing in the value of goat milk and goat meat. There is a good deal of prejudice against goat milk, yet it is highly esteemed by medical men for invalids and infants. Goats do not get the same amount of attention that cows do, and the so-called "goaty" flavor of the milk is due to lack of cleanliness. Provided the udders are washed before milking there is no unpleasant flavor whatever. The milk is relatively rich in butter-fat and casein. Normally it is 85.71 per cent water, 3.20 casein, 1.09 albumin, 4.46 milk sugar, 4.78 butter-fat, and .76 ash. Unlike the cow, the goat is rarely infected with tuberculosis, hence its value for invalids and children. Goat cheese is palatable, mild and nourishing. The butter is white, but this is corrected by artificial coloring.

The goat has been the subject of human-like beard, but its usefulness has been recognized for centuries. The Angora is valued chiefly for its coat, but the milch goats most suitable for this country are Saanen and Toggenburgs, the original homes of which are Switzerland.

The supervisor of the New Jersey College tests, Dr. J. W. Bartlett, believes the records will show that for small families the goat is more useful than the cow. There are many families who could neither buy nor pasture a cow—we would recommend the goat to the owner of "Jessie" at Riverside, Windsor—and their wants could be more economically met by a goat.

Sit-Down Strikes a Boomerang.

(From the Christian Science Monitor.)

THAT autocratic device of labor minorities, the sit-down strike, is on the way out, according to experts. They say it's too complicated, too subject to misuse by radical leaders, too far-reaching in effect. Labor begins to see that the sit-down partakes of the nature of a boomerang. Thrown at management it often hits the public and bounces back to land on Labor's own vulnerable spots. So Labor's long heads are deprecating it to the extent that, whereas once sit-downs occurred at the rate of one an hour, now there are less than a dozen extant in the United States. That does not mean, however, that Labor unrest has been stilled. Daily new threats appear and as C.I.O. organizers attempt to intimidate the independent workers, bitterness grows. One evidence of this, the 11 people shot in a Kansas labor riot. Another is the stand taken by Premier Hepburn of Ontario to keep "foreign" agitators out of Canada. It begins to look as though organized labor will have to put its own house in better order before insisting on a clean-up in industry at large.

"We can settle our own problems without the hirelings of John L. Lewis," says Premier Hepburn. But Herbert Morrison, labor member of the British Parliament and president of London County Council sees Mr. Hepburn's attitude as indicative of a common incapacity to "see both sides of the question where labor unrest is concerned." Mr. Morrison comments that since General Motors of Canada is financed with American money it is inconsistent to insist that it be exclusively Canadian on the labor side. But Mr. Morrison says a still more pertinent thing. He warns American labor that it is dangerous to attempt to build a great political party in a few months. Behind success, he points out, must go years of work, study and self-education. Both management and labor are getting plenty of the latter at present, it would seem.

EASY MONEY.

(Guelph Mercury)

"EASY money," says Henry Ford, "is never honest money." He was speaking with regard to boys and the need of doing something to better their condition in life. Ford's idea is that "the average boy is just mischievous and may do something the law will regard as a crime, and if once convicted the lad is done for." There's more truth than poetry in the statement. The boy after his first mistake is generally hounded hither and thither, and if he turns out good, it's often in spite of the activities of those who want to reform him.

GOLF WIDOWS.

(Kitchener Record)

THE wife of a noted golfer dramatizes the dismal lot of a "golf widow" by suing for a divorce. Her advice to prospective brides of fairway addicts is "Don't."

With all respect to the unhappy woman, however, it is submitted if she took every step possible to make her married life a success. If she simply sat home and waited for her mate's seasonal return, perhaps she got what she deserved. But a "golf widow" generally can avoid her bereavement by use of a little guile.

For instance, she could insist upon playing golf with her husband. Then, every time he prepared to drive she could hum a little tune. She could take care that each of her drives would not carry over 10 feet, making it necessary for him to walk as she meandered slowly over the fairway. And she could chatter away about the beauty of Nature, or the drabness of golf togs worn by other women nearby.

In this way, it would be only a matter of time until her mate exploded, broke his clubs, and thence became a home-body.

THE PINKS AGAIN.

(Brockville Recorder and Times)

THE "pink" professors and clergymen have been again to the fore during the Oshawa labor difficulties making speeches condemnatory of capitalism and the Ontario government, issuing interviews and writing articles and, generally, adding fuel to the flames of controversy and inciting trouble.

Some of these individuals speak and write as if they would dearly love to see the Soviet system of government established in this country. In certain cases, they have quite frankly expressed their preference for Soviet principles and the Communistic order. And yet the professors and clergymen in question are very often paid out of the proceeds of capitalism and if capitalism did not exist, they would be without either occupation or income. Moreover, in the case of the clergymen, they would probably find that if ever Communism got the upper hand in this country, the Christian church to the ministry of which they belong would soon find itself on the defensive and, quite possibly, threatened and persecuted as the Christian church in Russia has been.

UP TO THE STATE.

(Hamilton Spectator)

THE welfare commissioner, Mr. T. F. Kappele, reports that children are more and more coming to feel that it is the responsibility of the state, and not themselves, to support their aged parents. "There are a lot of people preaching just that," he added.

Such preaching may go far to account for the dereliction, but it does not excuse it. To seek to avoid this responsibility is not merely culpable, it is unnatural.

Circumstances alter cases, we know; there may be instances where the maintenance of dependent parents is practically impossible for families which have the greatest difficulty in keeping themselves, but there is plenty of evidence that, even where such maintenance presents no insuperable financial problem, the attitude is that the community should assume the responsibility.

SPRING

The dirty snow, like thin
Gray tissue hangs, with Little perforations through.
The streams are overflowing
With new-found life;
They rush and tumble
Carrying anything they can wrest away.
The suns' new warmth
Seems to be a bringing back
Any spots of green,
And coaxing the early robin
To show his bright new vest
And tune his vocal cords to sing.
O happy time! When man like
Earth takes on new life,
Renews new hope, new love.
It's Nature's mating time.
And lovers seem to follow her example,
O wondrous Spring, who dresses
This old Earth anew, in verdure
Bright, after the chilling
Frosts of Winter.

DIAL TELEPHONES TO BE INSTALLED

ers' premises, and a general program of education and coordination of our entire personnel. There is also the matter of general public instruction in the operation of the dial instrument which must precede the cut-over to the new service."

Effect On Staff.

"What effect does the introduction of dial telephones have on your operating staff in a city like Peterborough?" Mr. Brace was asked.

"While our future requirements will be somewhat less than at present, experience has shown that the necessary shrinkage in the female operating staff can be accomplished with a minimum of disturbance and without undue hardships. Our normal losses due to resignations will account for a considerable reduction and, in addition, positions for surplus staff are available at other exchanges. Our requirements between now and the dial conversion will be maintained by making use of available ex-employees and by recruiting new employees on the understanding that employment may be temporary."

Bell Telephone service in Peterborough, as Mr. Brace pointed out, dates back to 1880, when there were 18 subscribers. The first manager was Geo. D. Edwards, brother of R. B. Edwards, former local barrister, in whose law office on Simcoe street the telephone switchboard was set up.

Thirty-two years ago a common battery switchboard was installed in the present Hunter Street building. Peterborough being the first city of its size in Ontario to be provided with this type of service. The present premises have been gradually outgrown until with the prospect of continued development here the Bell Company decided that a complete new station of the latest type was justified. Peterborough now has upwards of 5,500 telephones in service.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

A last-minute burst of selling forced prices of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today and toppled prices after a steady trend during most of the session. At the final bell prices were 2¾-1¾ cents lower with May at $1.23¼, July $1.29¼-¾ and October $1.18¾-$1.17.

Brokers were bewildered at continued heavy wheat shipments from Argentina and refused to act on the bullish trend of the Buenos Aires market today, believing prices there were gradually raising out of line with other markets.

Favorable weather reports from the United States grain belt and added precipitation in Alberta and Manitoba restrained investment buying despite fair continental support.

Roumania Faces Threat Of Civil War

PRINCE NICHOLAS
PRINCESS NICHOLAS

KING CAROL
PREMIER TATARESCU

Reported near civil war, Roumania was facing the gravest crisis since the assassination of Premier Duca, as Socialists, Conservatives and peasants rallied to the side of King Carol against Prince Nicholas and the outlawed Iron Guards. The crisis arose when Prince Nicholas demanded that his morganatic wife and four-year-old son be given Royal status. King Carol exiled his brother from Roumania. Later, however, the order was suspended and the young prince arrested. The Iron Guards, composed of Fascist and anti-Jewish supporters attempted to use Nicholas' expulsion as the basis for a new drive against King Carol and Premier Tatarescu, who succeeded Duca in 1933. The arrest of Prince Nicholas have given rise to rumors the government is preparing to smash the Iron Guards.

citizens awoke to find all indications of spring blanketed beneath a three-inch snowfall. During the night the snow was so heavy it threatened the Hydro power service. Traffic was affected. The Public Works Department characterized it as the heaviest fall of the year.

North Bay also got its share of snow and streets were covered with about two inches of slush. The temperature, hovering about the freezing point, kept citizens wondering whether sleet or rain would be their portion.

Violence of the wind at Toronto drove Lake Ontario in fury against city sea walls and beaches. No waterfront accidents were reported.

SEE PROTECTION FOR EMPLOYERS IN WAGNER ACT

New Law May Also Restrict Unions, Result Of Labor-Business Parley

UNDER FRANCES PERKINS

WASHINGTON, April 22 (AP) — Restrictions on unions with employers receiving protection under the Wagner Labor Act were foreshadowed today following the conference of labor and business leaders called here yesterday by Frances Perkins, United States Secretary of Labor.

In addition, these persons asserted, officers of Secretary Rogers business advisory council recently submitted to President Roosevelt confidential recommendations that labor's legal responsibilities be increased.

These proposals were expected to come openly from two groups: The board of the National Manufacturers' Association, meeting today in New York, and the United States Chamber of Commerce, convening here next week.

Administration chieftains indicated any congressional consideration probably would be deferred until wage and hour legislation is discussed, which may not be until the court issue is disposed of.

Participants in the labor relations conference at the Labor Department said questions raised by business spokesmen showed their views.

Both these representatives and union leaders raised such objections, it was said, that a plan to issue a summary of conclusions was abandoned.

Secretary Perkins told reporters both sides "agreed to observe collective bargaining contracts as sacred and binding and to recommend the same attitude to their associates."

The conferees were in accord, she said, that "Labor's success in collective bargaining should be fitted into the pattern of success for industry."

CITY TAKES OVER INVERLEA PARK

Give To Nicholls Park Commission Property On Monaghan Road

The Finance Committee of the city decided at a meeting Wednesday night to take over Inverlea Park from the Nicholls Park Commission and to give the commission in exchange the land on Park Hill Road opposite Jackson Park, formerly used as a terminal by the old street railway company.

A deputation representing the Nicholls Park board consisting of Roland Denne and Dr. J. A. Middleton waited upon the committee and Mr. Denne suggested the exchange. "You have virtually two Inverlea Park now," he told the committee "and we would like to turn it over to you, accepting the property opposite Jackson Park from the city in lieu of the Inverlea."

Mr. Denne explained that the Nicholls Park Commission had purchased other property adjacent to the lot in question and they were anxious to get possession of the remaining land so that Jackson Park's beauty might not be marred by unsightly buildings being possibly erected across the road from the property.

The request was approved on motion of Ald. Cotton and Dutton. A further request that an old road allowance at the west side of Jackson Park be closed will be taken up by the chairman of the committee and E. H. D. Hall for the Nicholls Park Commission.

ers' premises, and a general program of education and coordination of our entire personnel. There is also the matter of general public instruction in the operation of the dial instrument which must precede the cut-over to the new service."

Effect On Staff.

"What effect does the introduction of dial telephones have on your operating staff in a city like Peterborough?" Mr. Bruce was asked.

"While our future requirements will be somewhat less than at present, experience has shown that the necessary shrinkage in the female operating group can be accomplished without a minimum of disturbance and without undue hardship. Our normal losses due to resignations will account for a considerable reduction and, in addition, positions for surplus staff are available at other exchanges. The requirements between now and the final conversion will be maintained by making use of available exemptions and by recruiting new employees on the understanding that employment may be temporary."

Bell Telephone service in Peterborough as Mr. Bruce pointed out, dates back to 1880, when there were 15 subscribers. The first manager was Geo. D. Edwards, brother of E. D. Edwards, former local barrister, in whose law office on Simcoe street the telephone switchboard was set up.

Thirty-two years ago a common battery switchboard was installed in the present Hunter Street building. Peterborough being the first city of its size in Ontario to be provided with this type of service. The present premises have been gradually outgrown until with the prospect of continued development here the Bell Company decided that a complete new system of the latest type was justified. Peterborough now has upwards of 5,309 telephones in service.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

A last-minute burst of selling forced stop-loss sales on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today and toppled prices after a steady trend during most of the session. At the final bell prices were 3¼-1¾ cents lower with May at $1.33¾, July $1.29¼-¾ and October $1.16¾-$1.17.

Brokers were bewildered at continued heavy wheat shipments from Argentina and refused to act on the bullish trend of the Buenos Aires market today, believing prices there were gradually raising out of line with other markets.

Favorable weather reports from the United States grain belt and added precipitation in Alberta and Manitoba restrained investment buying despite fair continental support.

Roumania Faces Threat Of Ci vil War

PRINCESS NICHOLAS
PREMIER TATARESCU

Reported near civil war, Roumania was facing the gravest crisis since the assassination of Premier Duca, as Socialists, Conservatives and peasants rallied to the side of King Carol against Prince Nicholas and the outlawed Iron Guards. The crisis arose when Prince Nicholas demanded that his morganatic wife and four-year-old son be given Royal status. King Carol exiled his brother from Roumania. Later, however, the order was suspended and the young prince arrested. The Iron Guards, composed of Fascist and anti-Jewish supporters attempted to use Nicholas' expulsion as the basis for a new drive against King Carol and Premier Tatarescu, who succeeded Duca in 1933. The arrest of Prince Nicholas have given rise to rumors the government is preparing to smash the Iron Guards.

citizens awoke to find all indications of spring blanketed beneath a three-inch snowfall. During the night the snow was so heavy it threatened the Hydro power service. Traffic was affected. The Public Works Department characterized it as the heaviest fall of the year.

North Bay also got its share of snow and streets were covered with about two inches of slush. The temperature, hovering about the freezing point, kept citizens wondering whether sleet or rain would be their portion.

Violence of the wind at Toronto drove Lake Ontario in fury against city sea walls and beaches. No waterfront accidents were reported.

SEE PROTECTION FOR EMPLOYERS IN WAGNER ACT

New Law May Also Restrict Unions, Result Of Labor-Business Parley

UNDER FRANCES PERKINS

WASHINGTON, April 22 (AP) — Restrictions on unions with employers receiving protection under the Wagner Labor Act were foreshadowed today following the conference of labor and business leaders called here yesterday by Frances Perkins, United States Secretary of Labor.

In addition, these persons asserted, officers of Secretary Ropers business advisory council recently submitted to President Roosevelt confidential recommendations that labor's legal responsibilities be increased.

These proposals were expected to come openly from two groups: The board of the National Manufacturers' Association, meeting today in New York, and the United States Chamber of Commerce, convening here next week.

Administration chieftains indicated any congressional consideration probably would be deferred until wage and hour legislation is discussed, which may not be until the court issue is disposed of.

Participants in the labor relations conference at the Labor Department said questions raised by business spokesmen showed their views.

Both these representatives and union leaders raised such objections, it was said, that a plan to issue a summary of conclusions was abandoned.

Secretary Perkins told reporters both sides "agreed to observe collective bargaining contracts as sacred and binding and to recommend the same attitude to their associates."

The conferees were in accord, she said, that "Labor's success in collective bargaining should be fitted into the pattern of success for industry."

CITY TAKES OVER INVERLEA PARK

The Finance Committee of the city decided at a meeting Wednesday night to take over Inverlea Park from the Nicholls Park Commission and to give the commission in exchange the land on Park Hill Road opposite Jackson Park, formerly used as a terminal by the old street railway company.

A deputation representing the Nicholls Park board consisting of Roland Denne and Dr. J. A. Middleton waited upon the committee and Mr. Denne suggested the exchange. "You have virtually got Inverlea Park now," he told the committee "and we would like to turn it over to you, accepting the property opposite Jackson Park from the city in lieu of the Inverlea."

Mr. Denne explained that the Nicholls Park Commission had purchased other property adjacent to the lot in question and they were anxious to get possession of the remaining land so that Jackson Park's beauty might not be marred by unsightly buildings being possibly erected across the road from the property.

The request was approved on motion of Ald. Cotton and Dutton. A further request that an old road allowance at the west side of Jackson Park be closed will be taken up by the chairman of the committee and E. H. D. Hall for the Nicholls Park Commission.

HOW little is needed by the man who wishes simply to live, and how much by him who wishes to live with satisfaction and to make good use of his time. If one had strength to renounce happiness as impracticable, one would be far happier, but must one always remain alone? Peace itself is a mournful gift if one has no hope of sharing it.—Senancour.

Dear Friends:

Sometimes we crave so much for peace, but even peace is not of any satisfaction if we must have it alone. You cannot enjoy much in this life without someone to share it. Even a nice time needs companionship or it falls flat, and a good meal is improved if someone eats with you.

A comedian needs an audience, or who is there to laugh at his jokes, in fact we all must share with one another, else the whole thing called life is flat and unprofitable. Sometimes we need crowds, and don't think we go to a movie or church, or any large gathering without feeling this need.

Once in the West I lived in a small village for about a year, and I could not have survived it had I not been able to go to the city and mingle with the crowds for a day now and then. Anyone who lives alone has peace of a kind, in fact they can get too much of it, and that is why they are glad when someone comes to see them.

We need the exchange of ideas, we need even some annoyance to stir our emotions, to make us think, so that we really live and do not stagnate. Many have tried to live like a hermit, but it did not work very well, for they get an ingrowing disposition living like that.

And is there peace in nature? I don't think so, for there is something going on in the earth all the time, something growing and stirring even in winter when all seems dead. The wind is blowing somewhere in the world all the time, the birds are mating and singing, all the insects are busy, even altho' they are not busy here.

The sea, or the lakes are never at peace but are constantly moving, and we all know what happens to a body of water which does not move and is at peace, for mould and slime grows over it, so we, if we were to have too much peace, would become the same way.

Any person who lives alone most of the time knows that they can have too much peace, so that it gets on their nerves, and without contacting others their lives are empty. Any mother would welcome the noise her children made when well, once they are sick, and find the peace they craved was no good to them.

No, it is far better to live lustily and soulfully, taking your share of the knocks taking your part in the stir and stress of life, trying to get even a little bit of happiness, rather than having the peace that is death in life.

Too much stir may seem hard, but too much peace takes all the heart out of you. We may have all the peace we want in the grave, but even there we shall maybe be conscious of the birds singing in the trees, and of the people who come to look at the place where their loved ones are laid.

Once in a far land, in a strange church, I heard a minister preach on the text, "There was silence in Heaven for half an hour." Later I will write on it for it would take a whole article to tell you of it, but it was amazing how the fact of peace for thirty minutes seemed to affect us.

Our bodies are never at peace, for we are either coming or going, we breathe all the time, our heart must keep beating even altho' we do not hear it, our eyes keep on seeing so they are not at peace, and our hands must keep on moving to earn our living. So don't crave too much peace.

Your Friend,
ROBERTA.

MRS. R. McMULLEN IS GUEST SPEAKER

Thankoffering Meeting Of St. Andrew's W.M.S. Held In Church Parlors

The Easter thankoffering meeting of the W.M.S. of St. Andrew's United Church was held on Tuesday afternoon in the church parlors. Miss F. Dixon presided, the meeting opening with the singing of a hymn followed by prayer. The Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Nelson and Mrs. Harris made the dedicatory offertory prayer. Mrs. R. McMullen of Apsley was the guest speaker for the meeting. Mrs. McMullen and her husband, the Rev. R. McMullen, pastor of Apsley United Church, spent some sixteen years in Korea, and she gave a most interesting account of their work in the church and schools of that country, which was received with much appreciation. At the close of the meeting tea was served and a social half-hour was spent.

LACE IS SPRING FAVORITE THIS SEASON

Long lace dinner dress with pink silk piqué ground and inset medallions of blue chantilly.

FILMY DRESSES ARE SHOWN IN PARIS

By LISBETH

THE LARGEST and best known of the Paris dress houses are fond of using lace and lacy fabrics as a medium for some of their handsomest creations. Some of the smaller couture houses are also showing excellent collections right now in a variety of fabrics and original styling.

The two dresses shown here are from two of the most widely known houses, Lucien Lelong and Lucile Paray. Lelong's dress is a dinner model using inset medallions of blue chantilly lace on a ground of pink silk piqué. The gown has the effect of being simple, but attracts attention for the pink and blue color combination, and the use of the two contrasting materials. A very plain bodice with simple V-shaped neckline and short sleeves puffed at the top, and skirt that is fulled from the waist and has a very wide hem, are the points to be noted.

Lace and Tulle

The long-sleeved evening gown by Lucille Paray is also of lace combined this time with tulle. The dress itself is of black lace, with a deep, stiff hem of black net, and the same stiff net making the collar. The dress is worn over a cire sheath and trimmed with yellow roses.

Of the smaller houses who are doing notable work one goes by the name of Manguy. It is showing youthful, colorful models combining practical ideas and real elegance. Day clothes consist of tailored suits with tight-fitting jackets, bellses and flared skirts, and many wearable dresses of light woolen materials have large collars, scarfs and jerkins or sometimes tunics very much nipped in at the waist.

FISH-BONE IN THROAT

BELLEVILLE, Ont., April 22 (CP).—Threatened momentarily with suffocation by a fish-bone in her throat, Mrs. Andrew Thompson of Shannonville was rushed to hospital here yesterday. The bone was removed by Dr. James H. Forrester, throat specialist.

CITY PROPERTY SOLD TO SISTERS

Finance Committee Decides To Accept Offer For Ashburnham Lot

An application made by Rev. Dean O'Sullivan on behalf of the Sisters of the Precious Blood for the purchase of 60 feet of city land situated at the rear of their property on Robinson street was granted at the meeting of the Property Committee of the city council on Wednesday night.

This land came into the hands of the corporation for tax arrears and the Sisters wished to secure possession of the back portion of the lot. The price offered was $75 and on motion of Ald. Stocker and Ald. Dutton the offer was accepted and the necessary bylaw ordered drawn up.

Chairman Malcolm McIntyre and several members of the committee had previously visited and inspected the property.

An offer from Richard Hartley of $15 for one of the buildings in Inverlea Park, which are to be torn down was received but it was decided to take no action as it was pointed out the city might be able to use the building elsewhere.

Ald. Max Sloan suggested that it might be moved to Nichols Oval for the accommodation of the cricket club but Mayor Macdonald doubted the suitability of such a building in these surroundings.

On motion of Ald. Stocker and Dutton it was decided to take the necessary legal steps to evict a family from city property on Lewis street.

Chairman McIntyre was given authority on motion of the Mayor and Ald. Dutton to secure an extra caretaker for the city dumps. He told the committee it was impossible for one caretaker to look after both dumping grounds satisfactorily.

Ald. Sloan reported that there were complaints from residents on Crescent street that refuge from the Canadian Raybestos Company placed on the section that is being filled in was blowing about and it was decided to ask the company to have the stuff brought there early enough each day so that it could be properly covered over and thus prevent the condition complained of by the residents in the neighborhood.

Five explorers from Moscow, Russia, will survey for minerals in the Verkhoyansk district of Siberia where the temperature dips to nearly 90 degrees below.

DUKE PREPARING TO TRAVEL AGAIN

African Honeymoon Suspected As He Pores Over Numerous Maps

ST. WOLFGANG, Austria, April 22.—(AP).— The Duke of Windsor yesterday obviously was getting ready to travel again. Switzerland possibly, France almost certainly and Africa later were understood to be on the itinerary the former King had under study.

With final action on the divorce of Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson approaching, an air of expectancy hung over the Appesbach Villa the Duke has occupied here the last few weeks. Mrs. Simpson's decree nisi is expected to be made final early next month.

"It looks like another moving day soon," said an attendant at the Villa.

The Duke remained indoors yesterday, spending much time poring over maps, including some of Africa he bought in Salzburg, that lent color to reports he is considering an African honeymoon after his marriage to Mrs. Simpson.

It was understood the Duke had not definitely set a date for his departure from this Upper Austria resort, but there were indications it might be as early as April 27.

MARMORA

Mrs. M. Clement who has been spending the winter in Detroit has returned to her home here.

WINDSOR WEDDING SEEN JUNE 19 OR 23

Former Date Is Mrs. Simpson's Birthday And Latter Is Duke's

LONDON, April 22 (CP)—Plans are being completed for the marriage of Mrs. Wallis Simpson and the Duke of Windsor, their friends here declared to-day.

The date of the wedding was expected to be either June 19, Mrs. Simpson's birthday, or June 23, which is the Duke's.

The ceremony, which their friends say will be attended by his sister Mary, the Princess Royal, and the Duke of Kent who will be his best man, is likely to be at the Chateau de Cande at Tours, France, where Mrs. Simpson is in residence.

Definite fixing of a date, however, was said to await the Duke's arrival at the Chateau after Mrs. Simpson's divorce decree is made final April 27.

doubt he will leave Austria before doubt he will leave Austria before the Coronation on May 12 for, although he says he is "counting the days" until he sees Mrs. Simpson again, he is determined to give his brother a "clear run" during the coronation.

LAKEFIELD LODGE SPONSORS DANCE

Novel Numbers Feature Coronation Ball In Memorial Hall

LAKEFIELD, April 22. — About 125 persons attended the Coronation dance which was held in the Memorial Hall, Lakefield, on Tuesday evening, April 20, under the auspices of the Lakefield L.O.B.A.

Decorations in coronation colors were a feature of the party. A large union jack at the back of the stage and red, white and blue bunting draped across the front of the platform formed a frame for a replica of King George VI. and provided an attractive background for the orchestra. Flags and bunting were draped above the entrance and clusters of flags along the sidewalks completed the artistic effect.

Rex Wilson's orchestra provided good music for both square and round dancing and those persons present reported a delightful time.

A novel feature of the party was the method of choosing the winner of the lucky number prize. Oriental feathers each containing a number were distributed to those present and the holder of the lucky feather received the prize. Ted Rose, of Warsaw was winner, the prize being presented by Mrs. Stanley Biggins of Smith. The feathers were the source of a great amount of merriment, a number of the dancers wearing them as a head-dress after the dance.

The committee in charge of arrangements was composed of Messrs. Stanley Biggins, Jim Blakeley, Theo. Nichols, Wes. Sargent, Miss Edith Nicholls and Mr. Allan Gill.

Wages are being increased in Japan to meet rising living costs.

"Eat Less Fat" Is Daily Plea In German Press And Movies

Nazis Call On Citizens To Even Save Their Coffee Grounds

"Eat less fat" is urged almost daily in the papers and news reels at movie theatres display graphs showing that 25 per cent. more fat is consumed than before the Great War.

"Won't you help the four year plan by keeping your fat consumption down to the 1913 level?" a newsreel voice asks, adding "in that (pre-war) year you didn't fare so badly."

In raising more oil producing plants the great remedy is seen. Since Hitler came into power, cultivation of grape and soiza has grown ten-fold, but it is not enough, for even in 1936, 1,700,000 tons of linseed cake had to be imported.

A "fat research institute" has been formed to examine all possibilities of extracting oil from hitherto neglected or imperfectly tapped sources. Linseed, poppy seed, tobacco seed, sunflower seed, all kinds of nuts, even grape stones and coffee grounds come under consideration.

"Save your coffee grounds!" the Nazi cry. They contain about 12 to 14 per cent. oil, good for soap-making, the public is told.

Moreover, the Government has placed a contract for 60,000 tons of whale oil in Norway, payment to be made through the German-Norwegian clearing office.

Grape Seed Butter.

A Magdeburg firm has invented a new fat, extracted from grape-seed. It is claimed it can be used instead of butter and as baking fat.

Housewives are apt to grumble at sudden scarcities of food and articles of domestic use; but those scarcities are more local than general, and shift continually from place to place; perhaps under orders from "higher up."

One may be told at one restaurant that egg dishes are off, because there are no eggs. At another restaurant in the next street, there is no difficulty.

Reminiscent of wartime conditions was the arrest the other day of a man at a railway station in Bradenburg, who had 2,000 eggs in a trunk; bought up at country farms, to be sold in Berlin.

"Eat fruit preserves instead of butter!" is one slogan. Provision stores have placards showing how much more wholesome jam is than butter on bread.

What irks housewives most is the inferior quality of many domestic commodities. Butter is adulterated, they complain; sugar sweetens less; cleaning materials take the skin off your hands; starch is hard to come by; cake flour is poor in quality, and the household money never seems to go so far as it used to.

Had Star Pupil

Weather-beaten and furrowed is the face of Samuel Morris, shown at work plastering a wall at Port Murray, N.J. He once toured the country as a workingman's "Father Jehovah" and his star pupil was one George Baker. "We sometimes made as much as $2.25 a day," reminisces Morris. The star pupil has fared better than the teacher for he is known to-day as "Father Divine," regarded as god by thousands.

SEEDLESS GRASS AWARDED EFFORT

Book Tells Of Experiments Of Young Farmers In The West

WINNIPEG, April 22 —(CP)— In Kathleen Strange's book "The West in Her Eyes," she and her husband had some hard luck in growing various seeds for lawns and golf greens.

The grass grew beautifully, but except for the first year when their patch yielded seed which they sold at $7.50 a pound, there was "nae luck about the house." For three more years the grasses flourished, but for some mysterious reason they produced no seed. If these grasses had done what they were expected to do, the yield would have been 300 pounds per acre.

A grass seed house in New York offered to buy all they could produce at $7.50 per pound, so they calculated that they could make in one year (from 80 acres) $110,000. But the seeds failed to appear. Major Strange never found out why.

In selecting the best seed grain for competition, Mr. and Mrs. Strange spent much time picking it grain by grain from piles of hard red berries on the table. And it was her idea that the final pick of ultra-fine seed should have a little extra polish. So she rigged up her churn, first with a lining of flannel, then with silk. She put the precious grain into it and swished it gently around.

When she took it out she says that it looked "almost too beautiful to be real." While the grains were being made ready, I gave the churn, still loaded with wheat, a final turn or two. What was my horror and consternation when the lid of the churn suddenly fell off. All the precious wheat kernels, of course, poured out on to the living-room floor.

"It was too late to go over the wheat again and the whole peck of it was scattered to the four corners of the room. There was nothing to do but to sweep it up, hastily scan it—for foreign particles, weigh it, and put it into the sack."

Train Carrier

ST. JAMES' FULL ON TRAGIC LORE ON ROYAL PEOPLE

Once Leper Hospital But Redeemed By Henry VIII. As King's Home

SCENE OF ROYAL LEVEES

LONDON, April 23 —(CP)— As the scene of several marriages and christenings within the royal family, St. James's Palace has a special place among the royal estates of King George and Queen Elizabeth, whose Coronation takes place next month.

Originally the palace was a hospital "for 14 maidens that were leprous" until that acquisitive Monarch, Henry VIII, converted the building into a hunting lodge. From this time dates the Gatehouse, which to-day presents the most favorable aspect of the approach to the palace. Most of the children of the ill-fated Charles I were born at St. James's and it was from there that he walked across the park to his execution in Whitehall. William IV was the last monarch to make this castle his principal residence.

The present King's father and mother, George V and Queen Mother Mary were married in the Chapel Royal of St. James's, which still preserves the ceiling attributed to Holbein, a masterpiece of art. George and Mary were married in this chapel in 1893.

Queen Victoria was married there in 1840 and the future German Emperor and Empress Frederick (daughter of Victoria) in 1858.

Few of the historic buildings of the Empire's capital greet the eye with more charming effect than does St. James's Palace. With its octagonal towers of mellow brick its mullioned windows and quaint carry-

BEATTY'S SON MARRIES

LONDON, April 22 —(CP)—Earl Beatty, son of the late admiral, was married today to Mrs. Dorothy Sands, an American, at the London Register office.

They had been engaged since June, 1936. Mrs. Sands has two sons by a previous marriage.

NAVY MAY DECIDE EMPIRE'S FUTURE

Keyes Reminds Britain She Needs More Than Air Defences

LONDON, April 22 (CP)—"Pacticism will not ensure peace unless you have got force behind it," declared Admiral of the Fleet Sir Roger Keyes in urging a strong British navy in an address at King's College.

Replying to a recent declaration that all that was necessary for defence was an immense air force, the admiral declared: "Imperial defence is not as easy as that. The protection of London from being bombed and the ability to bomb other nations does not make for the security of the Empire."

The future of the Empire might be decided on the ocean hundreds of miles out of the range of aircraft, except those carried by the ships.

WINS 14TH CHAMPIONSHIP.

NEW YORK, April 20.—(AP).—Ralph Greenleaf of New York, a champion in 1919, is a champion again. Greenleaf stalked out of the past to whip Andrew Ponzi, another New Yorker, in the finals of the world's pocket billard championship last night, 125 to 107, in 12 innings, for his 14th championship.

Boys and girls of Myddle Church of England School near Shrewsbury have formed a team of handbell ringers.

100 Horses Learn Stair-Walking For Single Event—The Coronation

LONDON, April 23 (AP)—Scotland Yard is teaching 100 army horses to walk up and down stairs for the day—May 12—when "All the King's horses and all the King's men" will turn out to crown King George VI.

Mounted police will ride them.

The horses are having trumpets blown in their ears, banners waved at them, and are made to walk in front of loudly blaring phonograph records and an airplane engine going full blast.

By the time of the procession the horses will be able to stand most anything in the way of possible noises and confusion. There is every indication that they'll need poise and confidence.

Fears Slaying

PETER VERIGIN THE YOUNGER

Former spiritual leader of the majority of Canada's Doukhobor population in British Columbia, who is being protected by the British Columbia government following fears that disgruntled members of the Sons of Freedom, who have been expelled from Christian Community of Universal Brotherhood, would attempt to assassinate him. Verigin resigned as leader of the Doukhobors in 1935.

STARS WELL PAID COSTS ARE HEAVY

Actor Talks Of Old Days, Salaries Lower But Times Good

NEW YORK, April 22—(CP)—The good old days when a leading man lorded it on $100 a week and players in minor parts did themselves well on $30 were recalled by Henry Hull as he rested from taking nightly shots at himself as the Crown Prince Rudolph in "The Masque of Kings."

"In those days a leading man was paid $100 a week and felt positively imperial on it, while to-day he worries on $350," remarked the veteran actor. "Margaret Anglin or Maude Adams or Ethel Barrymore, of course, got about $1,500 a week, while now it is a poor week for Helen Hayes when she doesn't net a bit more than $4,000."

Hull's first encounter with an audience was way back in 1911 in Pittsburgh when he appeared as a colored man in a play called "The Nigger." As a debut, the job was unique for it required him to go through the process of lynching himself as well as playing the off-stage parts of bloodhounds, horses and mobs. At that time, Hull continued, "the great bulk of our cast received on an average somewhere between $20 and $50 a week, and lived very well on it. To-day these same players are receiving when they are cast at all, between $50 and $100, and I doubt if they can make out as well at that figure."

He went on to compare the cost of taking a show on the road in those days—and now, when eight separate unions had to be dealt with.

The new set-up has this advantage, however, Hull said, that it quickly kills a doubtful play and disembarrasses Broadway of a lot of bad shows.

BRITAIN SEEKS BETTER SIRENS

Expert Says Country Will Soon Be Organized For Air Emergency

LONDON, April 23 (CP)—In the government's search for an effective air-raid warning device, the Willesden district of London has resounded in the din of blaring hooters, shrieking sirens and exploding maroons.

Sixty observers of the metropolitan police were posted in the open, in shops, houses, and offices to listen to the chorus of noises. Some were four miles from the centre of the operations.

Further trials may be necessary before final selections are made. Meanwhile the government-subsidized factory at Blackburn is turning out 500,000 gas masks a week and special services organized by the air raid precautions department of the Home Office are being whipped into shape.

Wing Commander E. J. Hodsoll, in charge of the air raid precautions department, said the country would "soon be organized and ready to meet any emergency that might arise."

KING'S KINDNESS MARKED CROWNING OF 'PEACEMAKER'

Edward VII. Aided Aged Prelate To His Feet At Coronation Twice Postponed

LONDON, April 22 — (C P) — Strange and even cruel happenings associated with past Coronations are scattered so frequently in the roll of English history that the Coronation of Edward VII in 1902 stands out by reason of a very kindly incident.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Frederick Temple, father of the present Archbishop of York, knelt to do homage to the Sovereign but was unable to rise again to his feet. Edward thereupon left the Chair for a moment and gently assisted the stricken primate to his feet. "God bless you, sir, God bless you," murmured the Archbishop. It was on account of Dr. Temple's infirmities that the Archbishop of York, then Dr. Maclagan, crowned Queen Alexandra.

Edward and his Queen, Alexandra, were beloved. Edward having achieved a warm place in the affections of England through his diligence, services as Prince of Wales during the latter years of the reign of Victoria. It was the especial distinction of Edward to have been a substantial support of the throne before he was called upon to occupy it. He was exemplary in his discharge of his public duties and in his scrupulous detachment from party politics.

His Coronation was postponed by the long drawn-out war in South Africa. Fixed first for June 26, 1902, another postponement was necessary, the King suffering from pertyphlitis, which necessitated an operation.

The King's recovery was rapid and the Coronation took place Aug. 9.

Arranges Funeral And Dies On Schedule

Orange, N.J., April 22.

GUISEPPE Fiore's funeral was just as he wanted it, for he planned it in anticipation of death, which came on the day he predicted.

Some time ago Fiore, 52, visited Paul Ippolito local undertaker picked a solid oak casket, and arranged for his funeral. He chose a tuxedo for his funeral clothes, and ordered flowers for his funeral.

Fiore told members of his family last week he would die "the last of the week." Saturday afternoon he took a walk, telling his family he wanted "to take one more before I die."

That night he collapsed and died of a cerebral hemorrhage. He was buried Tuesday.

SNOOK the Neighborhood Kid

By LEWIS OPTICAL, 345½ George Street

What Is Correct?

Should a man help a woman into a car?

A man opens the door of a motor car for a woman, and then usually stands back to let her precede him into the car. He may help her into the car if he wishes to, or if there is some reason why she needs assistance—if she is elderly or ill or handicapped in some way.

Is it correct to smoke at the table?

Guests should be guided by whether there are ash trays and cigarettes on the table. Naturally, ashes should never be flicked on the floor, or dropped on the table linen. Frequently, at formal dinners, there is no smoking until the group sojourns for coffee.

What kind of candles should be used on the dinner table?

Candles are the rule at dinner. They should be of wax, undecorated, preferably pale in color, and without shades, and they should be high enough to keep the candle flame above the eye. Plain ivory-colored candles are more generally used.

In perfectly run homes only FRESH coffee is served

A WOMAN may set her table with priceless silver and beautiful flowers, but she will fail as a hostess if the coffee she serves is not absolutely fresh.

Stale coffee not only tastes rancid and flat, it may cause indigestion, headaches and "nerves."

Yet it is easy today to make sure of fresh, delicious, stimulating coffee.

Chase & Sanborn Dated Coffee in the bag is rushed fresh to the grocer, marked with the date he gets it, and none stays on his shelves more than 10 days.

With this system, we can dispense with high-priced containers, too. There is no excuse for serving stale coffee today.

Your guests will appreciate fresh, full-flavored Dated Coffee, even in an ordinary pot, far more than they would stale coffee, no matter how gorgeously served! Order Chase & Sanborn Dated Coffee tomorrow, in the inexpensive bag!

BISHOPS CLAIM THEIR DUTIES TO GUARD KING

Prelates Of Durham And Bath Will Support George VI. At Coronation

AN ANCIENT RULE

LONDON, April 22 (CP)—Among the prelates with special privileges at the Coronation on May 12 will be the Bishops of Durham, and the Bishop of Bath and Wells.

Their claim to "support his Majesty" was on the last coronation conceded without question. Support for their claims lay in the fact they are recognized in Liber Regalis, the great authority for all matters concerned with English Coronations, which was drawn up for the Coronation of Richard II. This book is still preserved in Westminster Abbey.

For the coronation of James II the claims were justified by a specific note: "The Bishops of Durham and of Bath and Wells have from time to time entered ye claim before ye Commissioners of Claims setting forth that their predecessors in these Sees from time immemorial were wont allwaies to support ye King of England (ye first on his right hand and ye second on his left) in ye solemn procession and during ye whole service in ye church on ye day of ye Coronation."

The Bishop of Durham holds fifth place in the Anglican hierarchy, the two Archbishops and the Bishops of London and Winchester only being senior to him. These sees are known as primary sees, the Bishops always being members of the House of Lords, whereas other bishops become members according to the seniority of their consecration.

The present Bishop of Durham, Rt. Rev. Hensley Henson, who was appointed in 1920 after several years as Bishop of Hereford, is a forceful figure in Anglicanism. He advocates disestablishment, but is against the admission of women to the ministry. Dr. Henson is 73.

Is Schoolmaster Bishop

The Bishop of Bath and Wells, Rt. Rev. J. B. Wynne Willson, has just announced he will resign in November on account of ill-health. He is 68, and hot prominent in church affairs at large. Wells is one of the most beautiful of English rural cities and the cathedral has many gracious features. The Bishop's Palace is surrounded by a moat, and is perhaps the finest residence of its kind remaining in this country.

The Bishop belongs to the line of "schoolmaster bishops," for he was Master of Haileybury for six years and of Marlborough for five.

BALMORAL HOME FOR NEW QUEEN

Highland Castle And Its Lands Likely To Be Highly Favored

EDINBURGH, April 22 (CP) — Of all their Royal estates Balmoral Castle will have a special place in the affections of King George and Queen Elizabeth, who will be crowned on May 12. For Balmoral, near Aberdeen, is the Scottish seat of the King whose Queen comes from one of the ancient Scottish families.

It is not a Royal palace, but a property belonging to the King personally. Queen Victoria first saw it in 1848, and liked it so much that her husband, the Prince Consort, bought the lease.

The castle was built in Scottish baronial style to the designs of the Prince Consort, and although it was one of the favorite residences of Queen Victoria, who practically divided her time between Balmoral and Osborne in the Isle of Wight, it is said to have been in those days one of the most comfortless of residences on the grand scale which could well be imagined.

On visiting Balmoral the King and other members of the Royal Family always attend the Presbyterian form of worship at Crathie Church. Their appearance there on a Sunday morning invariably attracts crowds from many miles around.

Sandringham, in Norfolk, is another estate which is the personal property of the King. It was bought by Edward VII., when Prince of Wales, in 1862. It comprises about 7,000 acres. The Royal Family's Christmas foregathering has always been held at Sandringham, and from here King George V. uttered his Christmas radio messages. King George died at Sandringham a year ago last January. Queen Alexandra, his mother, died here in November, 1925.

Invitation To The Coronation

QUEEN KEPT OUT WHEN GEORGE IV. RECEIVED CROWN

Hapless Caroline Refused Admittance At Coronation Of Famous Monarch

KING SOUGHT DIVORCE

LONDON, April 22 (CP)—One of the most amazing coronations in English history was that of George IV. in 1821. This monarch, many years Regent owing to the mental malady of his father, George III., was labelled by some biographers as the most accomplished blackguard in Europe.

He spent his earlier years in a whirl of pleasure-seeking and was a leader in all the license and luxury of the "gay society" of the time. His long alliance with the famous Mrs. Fitzherbert was notorious, and any happiness from his formal marriage to Princess Caroline of Brunswick was short-lived.

Caroline was accused of adultery with the Italian Count Pergamo after she fled England and George IV. attempted to put through the House of Lords a bill depriving her of her royal title and divorcing her. This bill was abandoned as its supporting vote decreased in successive legislative stages.

The King, however, gave orders that Caroline, who had returned to England, must not be admitted to Westminster Abbey, through fear that she might interrupt the Coronation ceremony. Arriving at the Abbey at six o'clock in the morning, the Queen went from door to door, vainly striving to be allowed to enter and take her place by the King. The popular support failed her on this occasion.

To begin with, scandal had been caused by the cost of the ceremony, which amounted to nearly three-quarters of a million sterling. The day was hot, and the portly sovereign constantly mopped his streaming brow with a succession of handkerchiefs, passing them to the Archbishop of Canterbury, who in turn handed them to the Bishop of Salisbury.

It is recounted how, even during the communion service, George repeatedly kissed a ring given him by his latest favorite, Elizabeth Lady Conyngham, who smiled on him from a seat as close by as decency allowed.

From time to time the King would pass into the chapel of St. Edward, which had been fitted up as a sort of snack bar, and while he refreshed himself the Coronation ceremonies naturally had to be suspended.

ANARCHISTS LOSE GROUND IN SPAIN

Madrid Moderates Forced To Shoot Trouble-Makers Down In Many Cases

(Editor's Note—The following dispatch, written on the Franco-Spanish frontier, presents an uncensored analysis of the "war within a war." The Spanish Government has been waging to hold its own followers in line for a co-ordinated prosecution of the civil war.)

PERPIGNAN, France - Spanish Frontier, April 22 (AP)—The moderating elements in the Valencia Government, pursuing a rigid campaign of suppression by force, were slowly but surely getting the upper-hand over trouble-making anarchists to-day.

In some cases street battles have been necessary to establish the authority of Premier Largo Caballero's Government over the heterogenous groups that made up the Spanish popular front when the civil war started last July.

Government troops beat down anarchist defiance in the Town of Vinalesa, a few miles north of Madrid, shooting the recalcitrants down in the street when they offered battle against Valencia's decisions.

Four hundred anarchists have been imprisoned in Valencia and reports set 125 as the number executed by firing squads.

Anarchist troops have been removed from the Teruel front, the main theatre of war, where they were accused of spending most of their time quarrelling with other units, and the famous anarchist regiment is now sulking in its barracks at Valencia.

Some of its troops were reported to have been shot as a lesson in discipline.

Impartial diplomatic observers rate the Communists the most steadying, law-abiding influence in Republican Spain. Unlike the anarchists, who wish to effect social reforms first and then give attention to the war, Communists stress united action to win the war first. They are showing increased willingness to leave the social reforms to a reconstruction period.

TWICE CROWNED WERE TWO KINGS OF OLD ENGLAND

Richard The Crusader And Henry VI. Made Their Titles Doubly Sure

TWO CORONATIONS

LONDON, April 22—(CP)—Coronation of George VI and Queen Elizabeth on May 12 recalls a wealth of history associated with previous crownings and among this double-coronations which have occurred twice in England's history.

Richard the Lion Heart the great Crusader, was crowned at Winchester in 1189—the first occasion. Although long a favorite hero with troubadors and romancers, Richard I by no means embodied the ideal of chivalrous excellence.

His record was stained by at least one act of needless cruelty, the massacre of more than 2,000 Saracen prisoners at Acre, and his fury, when thwarted or humbled, was ungovernable. As a ruler he was rapacious and few useful measures in his own country can be placed to his credit.

On returning from the Crusades in 1192 after numerous intrigues and battles in other parts of Europe, Richard was captured at Vienna in a mean disguise and was compelled to purchase his release by payment of a heavy ransom.

Richard reappeared in England in March, 1194, and he was re-crowned to show that he had not signed away the kingdom. Though his ransom was never paid in full the resources of England were taxed to the utmost for the first instalments and from this can be traced the beginning of secular taxation on movable property.

Henry VI also had two crownings. The first took place at Westminster in 1429 as King of England. The second was in old Notre Dame Cathedral in Paris, two years later, when he was crowned King of France.

ACORNS FOR WINNIPEG.

WINNIPEG, April 22 — (CP) — Four hundred Coronation year acorns from King George's park at Windsor, England, have arrived for distribution throughout Manitoba. They are part of 9,000 brought to Canada to be distributed to Canadian towns and private citizens who pledge to tend them properly.

H. J. Carmichael, vice-president and general manager of the company, who has made plain General Motors' stand against dickering with C.I.O. Through him and J. B. Highfield, plant manager, company statements of policy have been issued.

C. H. Millard, president of the Oshawa Local No. 222 of U.A.W.A., who will attend negotiations meeting for the third time. He came under disfavor with the Premier at the second. He has spoken in other Ontario cities in behalf of the C.I.O.

Here's how the strike drama unfolded up to conference time today, 15th day of the strike:

April 8 —Strike called at 7.01 a.m. Hepburn asked for additional police emergency forces. Royal Canadian Mounted Police were sent to Toronto from Ottawa, to join Ontario Provincial Police. The Premier said no relief would be allowed strikers.

April 9—Mayor Hall declared no additional police were needed. The force summoned by the Premier was kept in Toronto. The company announced it would ship auto parts to dealers and warehouses. Thompson said if there was an attempt to break the strike no cars would be built in the United States.

Thompson Is Barred.

APRIL 10—Negotiations at Toronto collapsed when Thompson was not allowed to participate. The Premier again denounced C.I.O. "agitators." The shipping of parts was begun at Oshawa without molestation by strikers. About 100 employees reported for work in the parts building. Thompson said the company's move didn't amount to a "drop in the bucket."

April 11—Martin addressed Sunday meetings, declaring the company would sign an agreement or be "prevented from making cars in the United States."

April 12—There was talk of settlement and "federal intervention." Hepburn revealed company offer of wage increases and other assurances. At the same time he took another crack at "Lewis' hirelings."

April 13—Hepburn announced he would demand solid backing of his cabinet in his strike stand. The company advised English customers orders would have to be filled from the United States. Mayor Hall asked Ottawa for Federal intervention. Government officials indicated they stood ready to offer their services in any industrial dispute but preferably at the request of all parties concerned. It was further indicated the Province already was dealing with the situation.

Croll, Roebuck Resign

April 14—Hon. David Croll, Minister of Welfare and Labor, and Hon. Arthur Roebuck, Attorney-General, resigned their cabinet positions at the request of Premier Hepburn, disagreeing with his strike policy. Mayor Hall issued his sensational ultimatum to Martin to call out United States workers.

April 15—Mounted Police were recalled by Ottawa at Premier Hepburn's request, who charged the Federal Government with vacillating on a policy of full support. He began recruiting men as a special emergency force to serve with Provincial Police. Detroit executives of General Motors said it was agreed a settlement should be reached between the Oshawa company and the local union. Hepburn took over Croll's cabinet position and Hon. Paul Leduc, Minister of Mines, became also Attorney-General.

April 16—Vice-president Carmichael issued a statement offering to meet committees from the various plants and enter negotiations if the strike were called off and the men returned to work. As an alternative he stipulated Premier Hepburn should be present at negotiations.

April 17—Negotiations again collapsed in the premier's office. Millard, Thompson and J. L. Cohen, counsel for the Oshawa union, were charged by Hepburn with using a private phone to call Martin. The premier quickly terminated the meeting with the announcement there would be no negotiations "by remote control."

Ready For Siege

April 18—In a Sunday statement Thompson said the strikers were preparing for a long siege. He told of plans for financial backing, athletic programs and entertainment. Premier Hepburn announced he would combat any attempt at invasion of the mining areas by C.I.O.

April 19—A shouting mass meeting of strikers turned down proposals for a settlement outlined by Mayor Hall who pleaded in vain and told the floe.

You've Been Duped And Fooled

When Mayor Alex Hall, of Oshawa, appeared to address a mass meeting of striking General Motors employees, as shown ABOVE, he was howled down by the strikers after he had asked them to return to work prior to beginning negotiations with the company. Mayor Hall had previously stated that should the United Automobile Workers of America fail to call a strike at General Motors plants in the United States he would advise the Canadian workers to go back to work. During the mass meeting Mayor Hall was continually booed and laughed at and in exasperation he cried: "You've been duped; you've been fooled; you've been hoodwinked." The meeting unanimously voted against the plan to return to work.

MANY APPLICANTS FOR FREE SERVICE

Residents Take Advantage Of Provincial Chest Clinic Examination

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, April 22. — Nearly fifty people have taken advantage of the Provincial Chest Clinic conducted by the Department of Health for free examination. The clinic, which was held in the Armouries, opened on Monday afternoon, and it is expected that at least sixty people will have taken advantage of this free service offered by the Government before the clinic closes at noon on Thursday. Appointments for examination must be made through the patient's local doctor to whom a complete report of both the physical examination and X-ray are sent. Dr. G. Brearley who with his assistant, D. Wise, X-ray technician, work from the General Hospital, Belleville, which is their headquarters.

A further step in the treatment of tuberculosis is now being given free at the afternoon clinic conducted in the Belleville Hospital every Friday.

This treatment, known as pneumothorax refills, is a comparatively recent addition to the Government's free service in its battle against tuberculosis, Dr. Brearley told The Examiner, and has been conducted in Belleville for the past sixteen months. Going from here to Cornwall, Dr. Brearley stated that they would return to this district to hold a clinic in Hastings early in May.

Step Dancing Contest Set For Saturday

Miss Lenore Gordon, 10-year-old Rotary Club protege, whose fame as an entertainer is spreading, is to be featured in a singing and tap dancing act at the Legion Hall this Saturday evening. In addition, good prizes are to be offered in a contest open to all step dancers for modern and old time dancing.

Large patronage at these dances each Saturday night has indicated old time dancing is coming back in popularity in Peterborough. Regular crowds have been attracted each week to dance to the music of Jim Black's Royal Ambassadors.

PASTEURIZATION OF MILK FAILS

be used admitted that he was pleased by the fact that while St. Joseph's Hospital used only raw milk Nicholls Hospital on the other hand used nothing but the pasteurized brand. He was curious to know why the provincial health department did not make pasteurization compulsory for the whole province.

"That is one of the weaknesses of provincial governments," remarked Ald. Dutton. "They are satisfied to pass laws and leave it to the municipalities to carry them out."

Ald. Sloan wondered that now that the raw milk and the pasteurized sold at the same price the latter had not driven the former off the market.

Ald. E. R. Wilson who said that he had been drinking raw milk all his life thought they were starting at the wrong end. The best policy was to make sure milk was clean by better inspection of cattle and premises.

Pasteurization he charged destroyed the calcium content of milk and thereby destroyed its bone-building qualities.

"No raw milk has gone into the Sick Children's Hospital at Toronto for at least twelve years," interjected Ald. Stocker.

Ald. McIntyre said that he drank pasteurized milk himself but he hesitated to make it compulsory for the people who wanted to drink raw milk to use the other kind- eighty-two per cent of the population already used the pasteurized.

Ald. Glover said that if they were to follow the advice of provincial and municipal health departments there was no other course than to adopt pasteurization. At the same time he felt that the case of the man who had $1500 or so invested in a milk business should be considered and anything that could possibly be undertaken to save him from loss should be done. He was of the opinion that something could be accomplished by [illegible]

Ald. Hamilton, chairman of the committee doubted whether very much could be accomplished in that direction. To him it was a question of whether council should compel the 18 per cent of the people who preferred raw milk to drink the pasteurized article.

"Frankly I am not in favor of going that," he said. Finally Ald. Stocker moved, seconded by Ald. Dutton that the bylaw be sent back to council to take effect on December 1.

The mayor and the mover and seconder alone supported the motion. Other members declaring that they preferred to arrange a conference first before making pasteurization compulsory.

A motion by Ald. Sloan and Cotton that a committee composed of Ald. Dutton, Stocker, Wilson, Hamilton and Sloan be appointed to arrange the suggested conference was carried.

FAREWELL PARTY TO HARRY TYRRELL

St. George's Congregation, Hastings, Make Presentation To Departing Member

HASTINGS, April 21.—Members of St. George's congregation, Hastings, met in the basement of the church on Monday evening to bid farewell to Harry Tyrrell who leaves shortly to make his home in England, the land of his birth.

During the evening, Mrs. E. Radford, Jr., presented Mr. Tyrrell with a leather travelling bag on behalf of the congregation. An appropriate address, voicing appreciation of his sterling worth and regret at his departure from their midst, was read by E. Radford, Jr., president of the A.Y.P.A. Mr. Tyrrell has been a resident of Canada for the past 10 years and during that time has been most loyal as a member of St. George's Church and has given generously of his time and talents, especially to the work as vestry clerk, as a member of the choir, and for years as president of the A.Y.P.A.

Following the singing of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and after Mr. Tyrrell had replied, thanking one and all for the kindness shown him during his sojourn among the members, Rev. Wm. Stocks made a few remarks of appreciation extending to Mr. Tyrrell his best wishes and reading one of Henry Van Dyke's poems "The Happy Warrior."

The president of the A.Y.P.A. acted as chairman for the evening. Cyril Blackbourne and Miss Bernice Dalnard sang "Love's Old Sweet Song" with accompaniment by Miss Mary Fuller. Eric Fuller caused laughter as he demonstrated "How a bachelor sews on a button." Messrs. J. Hall, J. Taylor and H. Fife gave as an instrumental trio "Margie" and "Wonder Valley". Miss Plant recited "The King's Maxim"; a duet, "Reuben and Rachael", was well suited and humorous as given by Miss Bernice Dalnard and Cyril Blackbourne, Jr., who also sang "There's a Silver Moon on the Golden Gate." A violin selection "Listen to the Mocking Bird" was given by Cyril Blackbourne with accompaniment by Miss M. Fuller and Messrs. Hall, Taylor and Blackbourne, Jr. Those effected and Ald. Dutton reiterated that view.

Two amusing contests were enjoyed, Mrs. Roy King being responsible for a vehicle contest, 18 questions being answered by using the name of a vehicle.

Following the final hymn refreshments were served.

CONFERENCE SET WITH PREMIER

mobile workers would leave Oshawa for good, getting jobs elsewhere. They would not be satisfied with strike allowances, "even if they get it," the Mayor added.

Union officials estimated about $120,000 was due the strikers for five days' pay, which the company yesterday offered to pay. They assured the men there would be no "quit slips" in their envelopes.

Session Opens 3 O'clock

TORONTO, April 22 (CP)—Representatives of 5,000 General Motors' strikers and company executives prepared today to meet with Premier Hepburn in a conference pointed at settlement of the strike that has tied up the automobile company's Oshawa plant for 15 days.

Negotiations were scheduled to start at one o'clock in the prime minister's Queen's Park office. Two earlier conferences have collapsed before they were properly started on the issue of recognition of the United Automobile Workers of America, an affiliate of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

J. L. Cohen, Toronto lawyer, and C. H. Millard, president of the Oshawa union local, today were to represent "the employees of General Motors at Oshawa," according to a statement issued last night by Premier Hepburn. H. J. Carmichael, vice-president and general manager, and J. H. Highfield, Oshawa plant manager, were company spokesmen.

Mr. Hepburn's statement, issued after preliminary conferences yesterday which led to today's gathering, left in doubt whether Mr. Cohen and Mr. Millard will be recognized as representatives of the U.A.W.A.

Not Representing C.I.O.

The statement said Mr. Cohen had told the premier "Neither he nor Mr. Millard was instructed by or represented the committee known as the C.I.O." The premier was asked: "Will Mr. Cohen represent the U.A.W.A." His reply was: "He will not represent the C.I.O."

Mr. Hepburn said Mr. Cohen had assured him he had definite word from Homer Martin, international president of the U.A.W.A., that neither he nor Hugh Thompson, organizer for the C.I.O. would be in Toronto during the negotiations. Both men are believed to be in Washington.

The first meeting called almost two weeks ago to arrive at a basis of negotiations was called off when the premier refused to deal with Mr. Thompson. The second one last Saturday collapsed when Mr. Hepburn found Mr. Cohen and Mr. Millard talking by long distance with Mr. Martin.

Mr. Hepburn considered bringing some of his cabinet ministers in today's discussion and Louis Fine, Ontario Labor Department mediator, also was to have a part in the negotiations. Members of the strikers' original negotiating committee were scheduled to attend.

The conference announcement came after an ultimatum was issued by General Motors that Premier Hepburn would have to be present at any negotiations or the strikers would first have to return to work.

URGES KNOWLEDGE OF BIRTH CONTROL

Would Decrease Divorce And Have No Affect On Birth-Rate Dr. Thomas States

TORONTO, April 22.—(CP). — There is a necessity for knowledge of birth control, Dr. Ernest Thomas of the Board of Evangelism and Social Service, United Church of Canada, told an audience here last night in an address on voluntary parenthood. Such knowledge would not only decrease divorce but would not affect the birth rate.

"There is not much value in being a parent by accident," said Dr. Thomas, urging the necessity of lifting parenthood from the realm of superstition and mystery. "Nothing of much value is gained by accident."

Too many people believed "birth control" indicated childless marriages and security for licentiousness outside marriage, he said. But such was not its purpose. It was designed for saving human life.

"The instinct of motherhood is so strong that we need not fear of its dying out," Dr. Thomas declared. "Investigation reveals that the clinics to overcome sterility are just as crowded as those where people seek to avoid children at a time when they do not want them."

"SPRING FEVER"

The need of a spring medicine seems to be universal. This is due to the fact that during the winter month the blood becomes clogged up with impurities owing to the amount of heavy food eaten to supply bodily warmth, and to the lack of sufficient exercise.

Is it any wonder then, when the warm days of spring approach, that the sluggish blood protests and causes that tired, listless, all-gone, don't-care-to-work feeling which is so prevalent at this time of year?

HOTEL MANAGER IS FINED $150 L.C.A. BREACH

ROOM ON SECOND FLOOR

Otto L. Dalgleish, proprietor-manager of the Grand Hotel was fined $100 and $16 costs when he pleaded guilty before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., this (Thursday) morning to what was described by his counsel T. J. Carley, K.C., as "a technical breach of the Liquor Control Act."

He was charged that on April 3 last he unlawfully did keep or consume liquor in part of an hotel other than a guest room.

Outlining the circumstances of the case and urging that only a technical violation of the law was involved, Mr. Carley told the court that as proprietor-manager of the hotel Mr. Dalgleish has a licensed beverage room on the ground floor of the hotel. On the night in question, he related, the hotel was being kept open until the hour permitted by law, when the police came in and found that Room No. 8 on the second floor was being used as a beverage room for the overflow.

Applies To Board

"As a matter of fact," Mr. Carley urged, "Mr. Dalgleish had shown Room No. 8 to the licensing inspector and the inspector was agreed that there was need of additional beverage room accomodation at the hotel. The room had formerly been used as a guest room with a double bed in it, but on this occasion the bed had been taken out and it was fitted up as a beverage room. An application is at present before the Liquor Control Board to have this particular room licensed as a beverage room."

Counsel contended that the hotel which has been recently renovated and redecorated is "one of the cleanest and best conducted hotels in the city and the proprietor is endeavouring to keep within the law."

Mr. Carley claimed there had been a certain amount of animosity displayed towards Mr. Dalgleish by other hotel proprietors in the city because he had not entered into an agreement with regard to closing hours. "It is unfortunate that this hotel should be black-eyed for a technical offence where no offence was intended," he remarked.

Not Overcrowded

Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., for the prosecution, stated his information was that on the night police visited the premises the beverage room downstairs was not overcrowded.

While there was ample room downstairs for other customers, he charged, "special customers were being entertained upstairs in Room No. 8."

He declared that when police entered the hotel armed with a search warrant, the proprietor stood at the head of the stairs and delayed the officers in their search. The Crown Attorney said he did not feel it was a proper case for the minimum penalty of one hundred dollars as Mr. Carley had suggested. "It is part of the administration of justice to see that the Liquor Control Act is enforced," he said.

In a statement to the press following disposal of the case, Mr. Carley declared the suggestion that "special" guests were being entertained in the upstairs room was denied by Mr. Dalgleish. "It was just the overflow" he said.

With reference to the suggestion that Mr. Dalgleish had delayed the officers in their search, Mr. Carley stated, "Mr. Dalgleish did not actually obstruct them but merely stood on the stairs with his arm outstretched."

The lunar operations governing this day point to a well-stimulated spirit of initiative and enterprise, with few projects and important creative abilities well especied. But, at the same time, there are omens of annoyances, frustrations and perplexities to be handled. These may have to do with writings, documents or possibly with misrepresentations, false reports or trickery. However, with precaution, vigilance determination and industry, all may thrive.

Those whose birthday it is may be under a spur for achievement and enterprise in putting over constructive projects during the year ahead, but they may have to call upon their spirit of initiative, determination and creative ability as well as upon precaution against fraud, distortion of facts or treachery in order to make a pronounced success of affairs. Boldness and resolution as well as persistency may win the day.

TWO BAKERIES ARE FINED $20.00 EACH

Found To Be Offering For Sale Bread That Was Underweight

On pleading guilty to charges of unlawfully selling bread that did not weigh 24-ounces avoirdupois Gus Stoangi of Dundas street west, Toronto and Westons Bread and Cakes Limited were this (Thursday) morning both fined $20 and $3 costs before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C.

The Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., who represented Stoangi's Bakery explained that the defendants make what is known as a French stick loaf which dries out more rapidly, with consequent loss of weight, than the ordinary loaf. "It is bought chiefly for the crust presumably by customers who have not false teeth," Mr. Gordon jocularly remarked.

He called to attention of the court that the Bakery which conducts a large business has never previously been called on to answer to a charge of selling bread that is short in weight.

Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., stated that sixty-three out of two hundred loaves were found to be deficient in weight on one of the Stoahgi delivery wagons. Thirty-one loaves were 1-ounce short; eight were 1½-ounces short; nineteen were 2-ounces short; two were 2½-ounces short ;and three were 3-ounces short.

"How many were overweight?" Mr. Gordon asked.

"The remainder were overweight," the Chief of Police replied.

A charge against Angelo Greco driver for Stoangi's Bakery arising out of the same circumstances was withdrawn by the Crown.

Joseph Nilsiock who pleaded guilty to the charge of unlawfully selling bread that did not weigh 24-ounces avoirdupois on behalf of Weston's Ld. Bakery of which he is local manager, told the magistrate he wished to offer the same explanation that had been advanced by Mr. Gordon on behalf of the previous defendant.

He said the bread complained of were stick loaves which were very hard to make without loss of weight.

Mr. McElderry stated that so far as Weston's Limited were concerned police seized twelve loaves, ten of which were found to be underweight. Eight were 2-ounces short; and two were 2½-ounces short.

SALE OF TOBACCO TO BE LICENSED FEE MADE $10

Finance Committee Scraps $20 License On Cigarettes For New Levy

CONSIDERED FAIRER

The Finance Committee of the city council decided at Wednesday night's meeting to abolish the present $20 license fee on the sale of cigarettes and to substitute instead a $10 license for the sale of tobacco in any form.

The matter was introduced by Ald. Max Sloan who argued that the policy of taxing the man who sold "tailor made" cigarettes $20 for the privilege while other persons could sell tobacco and papers for the making of cigarettes without paying any license fee was most unfair. In addition he charged that there was bootlegging of cigarettes by stores whose owners had not taken out cigarette licenses.

"Better be careful," warned Mayor Macdonald, "you might be called upon to prove those bootlegging charges."

The matter was discussed at considerable length. Chairman Hamilton was inclined to favor the abolition of all licenses for selling tobacco failing to see why that particular commodity should be discriminated against and Ald. Glover said that his view of the matter coincided with that of the chairman.

Ald. Sloan moved, seconded by Ald. Dutton that the $20 license fee be rescinded and that a yearly license fee of $10 be charged for the sale of tobacco in any form.

The motion carried with the chairman remarking that in his opinion a $5 license fee would have been ample.

Ald. McIntyre inquired as to the age limit in regard to the sale of cigarettes.

"Judging from what we see on the streets the limit must be about six years of age," remarked Ald. E. R. Wilson.

City Clerk Armstrong informed the committee that 18 years was the age limit prescribed by law.

Percy Macdonald of the Canadian Department Stores waited upon the Finance Committee of the City Council on Wednesday night to discuss the materials the store had available for purposes of Coronation decorations. TWO FIRE ALARMS

Dirty chimneys and overheated pipes caused the Fire Department a couple of runs to different parts of the city Wednesday night and Thursday morning. At 7.16 p.m. a chimney fire took the Department to a house tenanted by T. H. HE WANTS A ROOF

W. Lawford, 11 Conger street, told The Examiner this morning he had received notice and court orders to vacate the house in which he has been living as the property has been sold. He claims there is not a house of any kind in the city to which a relief tenant can be admitted, and when he has to leave his present place he fears it will be a case of going on the street. In three years he says he has had to move three times and he would be pleased if some person would tell him where he is going to move this time.

The Peterborough Red Patch Club will mark this significant anniversary with a dinner this evening in Legion Hall at seven o'clock.

TWO MINOR ACCIDENTS.

Parking his car outside an address on George street, W. Lesurf, 1277 Branson Avenue, Ottawa, came out to find that it had been run into from the rear and damaged by a hit-run driver. The accident, which occurred at 8.05 p.m. on Wednesday, resulted in damages to the fender, tail light, and license plate bracket of the Lesurf car. Leslie Abraham, a passenger in a car driven by Ernest Fowler, 681 Water Street, sustained injuries to his elbow when the car was involved in collision with another vehicle driven by Miss Florence of Elias Avenue. The crash occurred at the intersection of George and King Street.

Frequently Removed Without Anaesthetic Court Is Told In Kingston Case

EXPLAINS REASONS

KINGSTON, Ont., April 22. (CP) Highlights yesterday in the action of Gertrude McCumber and Byard McCumber of Millhaven in their suit against Dr. I. G. Hogart and the Hotel Dieu Hospital, charging malpractice, was evidence of Dr. W. E. Gallie, surgeon-in-chief of the Toronto General Hospital. He took the witness stand for the defence. Dr. Gallie said it was a common practice to leave gause in a wound after an operation for as much as several weeks and also to remove such gause without the use of anaesthetic.

The case for the prosecution was concluded with the cross examination of Mrs. McCumber and the evidence of Miss Sadie Knox, a cousin of Mrs. McCumber.

Miss Knox told Mrs. McCumber's condition and of the taking of four inches of sponge from the incision, after which she said Mrs. McCumber improved.

Dr. Gallie gave evidence on the accepted practices in the use of gauze sponges. He told the court it was usual for the sponges to be counted before the operation and after. He explained that in some operations the sponges are all removed after operation but that in operations where fleecy was put, sponges were often left in the patient from a week to three weeks.

Used As Cleansers.

The reason for this was to prevent the spread of the pus in the abdominal cavity and also to assist in the discharge of pus to clean up the affected area.

He also explained that usually the sponges were removed without the use of an anaesthetic. He admitted the removal of sponges was painful but gave it as his opinion that the temporary pain caused was in some cases preferable to the administering of an anaesthetic.

Dr. W. T. Connell, professor of medicine at Queen's University for the past 17 years and chief of the medical staff of Kingston General Hospital, told the court he had examined the plaintiff at the Hotel Dieu hospital and said that her general condition was reasonably good and although she now walks with a slight limp, she appeared to be in good health.

HIGHWAY ROUTE MAY BE CHANGED

North Monaghan And Cavan Councils Want Interview With Department

The township councils of North Monaghan and Cavan are co-operating in a request to the Ontario Department of Highways for an interview regarding recent reports of official intention to change the course of the Peterborough-Port Hope highway from Scott's Corner northerly to the road leading east into Peterborough.

That section of the road includes three turns which, it is rumored, the Department is planning to eliminate, practically from the top of the Springville hill near the home of J. F. Staples and past the farm of J. C. Hall to the foot of the east hill where work on a new service station has been begun.

The proposed deputation from the two councils intends primarily to obtain official information from the Hon. T. B. McQuesten regarding the plans of his Department in that section. Engineers have been surveying farms along that sinuous stretch of the highway, and there is some apprehension that a new road will needlessly cut across farms. Members of the councils agree with neighborhood opinion that a preferable plan would be to extend the highway straight north from Scott's Corner along the Cavan-North Monaghan boundary and then turn east toward Peterborough. By this route there would be only one turn instead of the present three. The councils are awaiting an appointment with the Minister of Highways or his Deputy.

OIL TRUCK BOGGED

Westbound traffic into Cavan township to-day was confined to the road from the Springville garage on the Peterborough-Port Hope Highway. An oil truck broke through the surface and bogged down a short distance west of the little bridge on the Cavan-Bethany road this morning; and the twelfth line was reported impassable near the Fairmount church. Frost has been slow and late in coming out of the ground, breaking up in some places where the damage has been aggravated by

BUILDING TRADES ARE MORE ACTIVE CONTRACTORS SAY

Executive Committee Of Home Improvement Plan Holds Meeting

EXPECT REPAIR WORK

At a meeting of the general executive committee of the Home Improvement Plan held under chairmanship of Roland Denne in the city council chamber on Wednesday evening, reports were tendered by the representatives of various trades indicating that a larger volume of business is being handled at the present time by comparison with the corresponding period of a year ago.

"I am certain the plan is working out," declared M. Sickler, cement worker. "I have four times as much work in hand at the present as compared with this time last year." Other tradesmen uncertain as to whether or not increased work could be directly traced to the H.I.P., were nevertheless of the opinion that there is a general improvement in all trades allied to building construction. Indications are that with the onset of good weather conditions there will be a great amount of repair work undertaken by home owners generally.

D. B. Falkner, manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, intimated that enquiries for Home Improvement Loans are increasing and he hinted there are some fairly large jobs being lined up to be undertaken in the near future.

"I am busy, good and busy," S. King, plasterer, told the meeting. "But I cannot say definitely whether it is due to the Home Improvement Plan. Most of the work I am doing is for private people."

Fred J. Overend, secretary-treasurer of Peterborough Lumber Company, believed the success of the Plan was how much money was being loaned by the banks but how much work was being actually done and he declared: "There is every indication of a general improvement in the building and allied trades." He commended The Examiner on the campaign it is conducting in connection with the H.I.P.

Harold Scott, manager of The Scott Coal and Lumber Company remarked: "We are sixty per cent. ahead of last year in building supplies. Numerous small jobs are being done throughout the city and I feel it is largely due to the advertising that has been done in connection with the Plan."

In the near future the executive is planning to call a general meeting at which a full turnout of every member of the various committees will be expected to attend.

ALFRED HARRIS DIES SUDDENLY

Known For Years As Engineer On Harris Line Of Boats

Alfred Harris of Gore's Landing, engineer on the Harris line of boats in the passenger and freight service between Rice Lake and Peterborough, died suddenly at his home at the Landing on Tuesday morning.

Many of the people of the city and district who remember pleasant river trips on the Genova, North Star, and Monarch, will probably recall Alfred Harris when he was engineer on one or other of these boats and Wilbert Harris was captain. With the coming of the automobile and the eventual withdrawal of the steamers, Alfred Harris retired to a farm on the south side of Rice Lake. Only recently he had retired from that work and returning to Gore's Landing had spent only one night in his house at the village. The next morning he remarked to his wife that it was good to be back in the old house, and while she was cooking the breakfast Mr. Harris died as he sat at the table. The funeral was held this afternoon at Gore's Landing.

Peterborough Presbytery Drama Festival which was to be held at St. Andrew's Church has been definitely postponed until further notice.

Kiwanis Offer Of Wading-Pool Meets Approval Of Committee

Service Club Will Contribute $650 Toward Providing Place For Children

IN KING EDWARD PARK

Thanks to the public-spiritedness of the Kiwanis Club the children in the southend of the city are to enjoy the advantages of a commodious wading-pool which is to be built at King Edward Park.

At Wednesday night's meeting of the Finance Committee a Kiwanis deputation composed of Al Sharpe, president, A. B. Gates and J. A. McKone waited upon the committee and President Sharpe introduced Mr. Gates, chairman of the Kiwanis committee as spokesman.

Mr. Gates explained that it was the desire of the Kiwanis Club to install a wading-pool 40 feet square in King Edward Park and the proposition was that the Kiwanians would pay the expense of building the pool and the council take over the maintenance and supervision. Little Lake as a bathing place had been shut off and the youngsters in the southend, he pointed out, had no facilities for bathing. The fact that the city council had decided to build a rest room in King Edward Park and would have to keep a caretaker there had been the factor that brought the matter to a head. It was proposed to have the water in the pool ranging from a depth of five inches to a foot and he suggested that the section west of Aylmer street, and across Rubidge street might be the most desirable location.

Ald. Dutton remarked that the Kiwanis Club was to be congratulated upon coming to the council with such a splendid proposition. "It is very gratifying to see such public-spiritedness," he remarked and Ald. Glover also voiced similar sentiments.

Ald. Hamilton, chairman of the committee asked the deputation if they would be favorable to having the city build the pool, the Kiwanis Club to pay the expense and Mr. Gates replied that the club would be glad to contribute to the extent of $650, the work to be done under the direction of the city engineer.

On motion of Ald. McIntyre and Dutton theoffer of the Kiwanis Club was accepted by the committee, with the understanding that the pool would be built by the city and the club would contribute $650 while a committee composed of Ald. Hamilton, Hocker, Sloan, McIntyre and the Mayor was appointed to confer with the Kiwanis committee as to a suitable location.

BAKERIES BYLAW UNDER DISCUSSION

Matter Is Left To Ald. Dutton And City Solicitor For Consideration

After wading through some twenty clauses of a by-law to regulate bakeries the Finance Committee of the City Council decided at Wednesday night's meeting that the most expeditious manner of dealing with the legislation was to turn it over to Alderman Dutton and City Solicitor Corkery for final consideration.

The by-law provides for the licensing of bakeshops and for their regular and systematic inspection. It lays down regulations as to the cleanliness of the premises, the health of the employees, the vehicles used for delivery, and other provisions intended for the protection of the public.

One clause that would have empowered the health officials to suspend the operation of a bakery forthwith, if the conditions warranted it was objected to by Alderman Wilson as being too drastic.

"If the official had a grudge against any baker he could put him out of business under that regulation," said Ald. Wilson.

It was explained that the baker had the right to appeal to the Council within two weeks, but Ald. Wilson pointed out that the Council might not be meeting for some time, and in the interval the baker would not be able to operate.

The clause was finally changed, requiring a seven-day notice before a bakery could be forced to suspend business.

ISLAND MINISTER STRESSES NEED OF ADDED FARM LIFE

Says Agriculture Should Be Taught In Common Schools Of P.E.I.

AN IMPORTANT SUBJECT

CHARLOTTETOWN, April 22 (C P)—Minister of Education Mark R. McGuigan, of Prince Edward Island believes teaching of agriculture in the common school is an important subject and one that requires careful consideration.

"It is said that our schools and colleges instead of helping to prepare our children for a life on the farm are really educating them away from it," said Mr. McGuigan. "I think there is a great deal of truth in this charge but the school is not all to blame. Parents foster in their children the idea of leaving the farm and obtaining employment in other fields of endeavor which they call more genteel and which they consider to be more remunerative.

"This policy was not so far wrong in the first quarter of the present century in as much as there were opportunities for young people in those days. We had the New England States to take up and assimilate our surplus population.

"Thousands of our young people went there and as there was plenty of work for all, they were successful in securing good positions and obtaining for themselves all the requisites of a prosperous and contented life. Owing to the depression, however, and the strict immigration laws of our neighbour to the south, that avenue is no longer open.

"We had also the Golden West and a large number of our people followed Horace Greeley's advice and took the train for that great country where there was ample opportunity for all. Owing to the vicissitudes that the western provinces have gon through in recent years we can no longer look for relief in that quarter.

"We have no large industries in our province and hence for the next few years, when may be indefinitely prolonged, our people will be compelled in great numbers to seek their livelihood on the farm and make it their chosen vocation."

A new attitude should be taken on the part of all concerned both in the home and in the school, regarding the importance of the farm and farm life, said Mr. McGuigan. "The minds of our young people should be filled with the idea that farming is the greatest of all professions. It should be impressed upon them from their earliest infancy that they are extremely fortunate to be born on the farm instead of the crowded city.

"A love for their surroundings, their life and their opportunities should be impressed upon them. They should be taught that farming is an honorable profession and one in which they can use all their ingenuity."

LOCUST SWARM ONCE MENACED SABLE ISLAND

Wind Erosion Seen As Possible Result Of Five-Year Plague

VEGETATION DESTROYED

HALIFAX, April 22 (CP)—About 100 statute miles off the nearest part of the eastern coast of Nova Scotia lies Sable Island, the great Sea Serpent of the North Atlantic, that has crushed countless proud ships in its sandy fangs and dreoled their derelict remains to the ocean floor.

But once, during the years 1891 to 1896, to be exact, this constant menace to navigation was itself threatened with devastation by the lowly locust. Voracious hordes of the melanoplus atlantis, as the variety was known, appeared on the island, having undoubtedly flown the 100-odd miles from the mainland.

Once there they multiplied rapidly, favored by a dry summer so necessary to their rapid propagation. They devoured the grass so voraciously that in 1894, the driest season on record, only one load of hay could be cut on the island instead of the usual 14.

It was said they attacked the grass near the root, creating a serious problem; for if the grass disappeared nothing short of elaborate and costly preventative measures could prevent wind erosion from rapidly shifting the sand, of which the island is formed, and ultimately causing this oceanic sandbank to disappear beneath the sea.

The following summer the hoppers were just as abundant as ever and attacked gardens as well as hay, so much so that provender had to be imported to feed the herds of wild ponies that inhabited the island. Many of the latter were taken to the mainland to reduce the number to be fed.

The locusts did not confine their appetites to growing things alone but also invaded houses of the island residents, attacking the food supplies, and in one case even eating a cotton window-blind. All efforts to combat the pests—and many experiments were tried—were of no avail, and it was not until the following season that the residents found any relief.

The succeeding year of 1896 providentially turned out to be excessively wet and cold, with mild spells followed by cold and rains which destroyed the adult and young insects en masse. In every direction, dead hoppers littered the ground, lucreteful being swept up from around door-steps of the island people's homes.

The locusts disappeared quite as suddenly as they had come five years before and have not inhabited the island since, much to the relief of the authorities in charge there.

FISHING VESSELS OUT FOR ANNUAL HALIBUT HARVEST

Fishermen Will Stop When 45,000,000 Pounds Caught—Use Power Boats

VANCOUVER, April 22—(CP)—Three hundred sturdy little powerboats from ports in British Columbia, the state of Washington and Alaska wallowed sluggishly through choppy seas today, gathering the annual halibut harvest along the north Pacific Coast. When the fishing season opened at midnight March 14 they were dotted on the open ocean from Cape Flattery, Wash., to the Aleutian Islands.

Their four and five-man crews describe the boats as "the most uncomfortable crafts in the world." Built mainly to carry fish and ice their accommoration for humans is a secondary consideration.

Winds and waves from far-off Siberia make decks buck underfoot, and more than 1,300 fishermen spend most of their time in oilskins while they're earning about $1,500 during the season.

About 175 vessels operate from Seattle, largest halibut port where almost half the world's catch is sold. Nearly 100 more work out of British Columbia ports—mostly Prince Rupert and Vancouver—and the rest sail from Alaskan bases.

North Pacific halibut fishing is not a small business. Meagher Hansen and Lokken of the Fishing Vessels Owners' Association estimated its value at $4,000,000 a year.

Partner Shares.

"Fishermen sign on the vessels as partners," Lokken said. "The boat gets 20 per cent of the catch, expenses are deducted and the remainder is equally divided among the captain and the crew."

Last year Seattle headed the halibut ports in weight of fish landed, with 22,719,238 pounds. Prince Rupert was in second place with 14,316,842 pounds, while Vancouver trailed far behind with only 2,453,-567.

Before conservation measures were applied by the International Fisheries Commission, Prince Rupert held top place. In 1928 the northern British Columbia port was the unloading point for 36,850,000 pounds of the big fish, compared with Seattle's total of about 10,000,-000 pounds.

The season will end when the combined catch of the Canadian and American fleets totals roughly 45,-000,000 pounds—a figure decided upon by Canadian and United States officials for conservation purposes.

Dr. W. F. Thompson of the International Fisheries Commission, said halibut "stocks on the north Pacific coast had increased 400 per cent under conservation measures were put into force by the commission.

Two years ago the commission tagged and tattooed 1,200 halibut, trying to discover their rate of movement, direction of migration and rate of growth. Metal tags were clamped on all of them, and some were marked with a blue tattoo on the left cheek—or the nape of the neck on the white side of the fish.

Dr. Thompson said he expected fishermen would bring in some of the tattooed fish this year, and that examination of the halibut by inspectors would assist the international commission to determine accurately just how many fish can be caught without depleting the widespread Pacific coast banks.

WORKERS FIND ANTIQUE STAND

VALUABLE RELIC

REGINA, April 22 —(CP)— Believed to be relic of the old Territorial government an ingenious wash-stand has only been recently discovered in the audit office of the Legislative Buildings here.

For many years it has served as a stand for a frying cabinet and it was generally thought it was built for that purpose.

The other day the cabinet had to be moved and the stand was exposed. It was covered with billiard cloth and looked like an old card-table. The top lifted revealing a compartment containing a pail of peculiar shape over which fits a shallow basin.

Once the water in the basin was used to wash it could be emptied into the pail. Brass chains support the cover, which holds a mirror, when it is thrown back. On one side of the compartment is a wooden stand for soap and other toilet articles.

It is believed the stand came to Regina with other furniture, including the famous "Confederation" table, from Ottawa in the days of the North West Territories government.

NEED MORE MEN IN SOCIAL WORK

Montreal Director Sees Chance For Sterner Sex In This Line

MONTREAL, April 14 —(C P)— Dealing with the "serious shortage of qualified social workers, particularly men," Miss Dorothy King, a social work director here said more should be done to bring this vocational opportunity to students in Canadian universities.

"There was a real dearth of able men in the field. Apart from the retirement into private life of one member of the class of 1936, who "lapsed into matrimony, every graduate was employed." Miss King said, "and all but two were holding positions in Montreal agencies." Most of the students, expecting to receive diplomas this year, have already been considered for appointments.

W. H. Scott, K.C., who presided, predicted that the future would see the workers recognized as persons duly qualified to occupy municipal, provincial and Dominion civil service positions in departments devoted to social welfare. He considered it significant that in the United States the various emergency relief administrations had drawn heavily on private social agencies for trained personnel.

A Trip To United States

MRS. JOSEPH HAMILTON, LAKEFIELD

Having returned from another trip to the United States, and knowing various people of Peterborough are contemplating a good-will tour of certain American cities, all of which I know quite well, as Ohio was my home state, I shall endeavor so to interest all who can go, as you hope to interest them in our Kawartha Lake district.

I shall picture to you points of interest and advantages that you would not learn from a Chamber of Commerce, etc. You may know that one can travel and spend great sums of money, yet not see much of value, where if well informed great good can be gained from an educational or pleasure viewpoint with less money yet just as much publicity.

First, I advise you to thoroughly know your own city and the Kawartha district before you go. I'll give you my reason for you may be like this woman—Mrs. Marshall Field of the Marshall Field Store of Chicago, known the world over, was dining with King George and Queen Mary of England. The former King George, being much interested to know the highlights of Chicago, said: "I've always wished to see and know about the world's most famous stockyards in Chicago, and now I know, as you are our private guest, you will tell us about them." Mrs. Field said it was painful and one of the most embarrassing moments of her life and yet never having seen the stockyards, as they among several other features in Chicago, were classed as the greatest in the world, she hated to admit she had never seen them.

Now if you have visited those stockyards just once, instead of several times, as I have, you could plainly realize why such a society woman as Mrs. Field would not have previously been interested. But confronted by such as our former King George, she had never considered a world-famous stockyard as a place for such as she to broaden her knowledge. Hence, she had to admit she had never seen them.

Now if you have visited those stockyards just once, instead of several times, as I have, you could plainly realize why such a society woman as Mrs. Field would not have previously been interested. But confronted by such as our former King George, she had never considered a world-famous stockyard as a place for such as she to broaden her knowledge. Hence, she had to admit she had never seen them.

If you know your own vicinity, etc., and the advantages as well as the needs before your tour, you can more efficiently see the same in other places you visit.

Maps Are Important

Supply yourself with road maps before you venture into a new locality or state. We have found the Sohio, Imperial, Esso and City Service maps very good to give locations of good roads distinctly and accurately, but the Ontario Official Government road or Sunoco maps are historical or pictorial. The important points are designated by pictures on the maps, making such noticeable for quick observation. Some cities or villages are to the traveller "just another," while some have outstanding features, and when pointed out may induce you to see just what you have longed to see to broaden your knowledge.

Traffic is quite an interesting factor to beware of on such a trip. Heavy traffic is never a problem to me, but a reckless driver is a horror to anyone. We travelled all the way from home to Niagara and never saw an officer, but you don't go far from the Niagara corporation until you see many. I'll state here, "Traffic or people on foot in the sunny south act thus: Take your time, take your time." Farther north they go like this: "Hurry up, hurry up," but beware all above the 38th meridian do this way: "Get there, get there as fast as you can go."

Just having gone over above 2,000 such miles and having many times gone 50 miles an hour as excellent highways, space etc. permitted, yet before we could realize it a little car would loom up behind, go around without a toot at 60 or more miles an hour and be out of sight. But, as we saw several times, some got an April Fool by a dive in a ditch.

Beware of Speeding

Beware of the inducement of a good highway for speeding. As for policemen, you will find them and their traffic system regulations, etc., a factor to study. I learned to drive in Youngstown in 1921 and have driven cars ever since, yet after many thousands of miles of travelling every year in the largest cities of either Canada or the U.S. and through states each with different regulations, I'd class Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Youngstown, and few small villages far more difficult to travel in than New York, Chicago or Cleveland. Each has its traffic system but much effect is acquired through systematic and strict enforcement of laws or regulations. Pittsburgh is noted for its flatiron shaped streets; Philadelphia for its streets like cowpaths; while Youngstown has its times during rush hour. Just try travelling over Spring and Common in Youngstown during rush hour or out over the square and high level in Cleveland during the rush hour and judge for yourself.

You may enjoy it or may not, but I can assure you that it will show how systematically traffic is regulated. In Cleveland traffic is regulated according to hour and place. If someone tells you to go in Youngstown till you see the Diamond, don't think it is a 4-carat, for it is much larger—the main square in the city. They tell you in Cleveland: go to the loop—it is the 36-corner square in city. Stand in the centre at 4 p.m. and see if you get dizzy: 9th street at Euclid was considered in Cleveland as the third busiest corner in the world. See it at 12 in the day or 12 at night.

We have always found all officers most courteous, alert and willing to give information or assistance where requested. I shall give these as examples. Having gone to the States for a serious operation, we went into a hospital for an examination only to be in one hour, but instead it was four hours. Our car was in a space allowing short parking limits, but even for a four-hour duration we had no ticket, while several others had the undesired ducat. At another time we had driven around and around in a large city, found all parking lots near it full and only available spaces 30 minutes or 15 minutes parking. We told a policeman our troubles. He said, "Say, I never got a ticket in Canada, so you need not expect one here, pull in there (a 30-minute place), stay there till 4 o.m. if you like" (which was five hours hence).

A Good Month

May is an excellent month for several reasons for a tour. The Ohio Valley is now about four weeks ahead of us for season. You may go by way of Windsor and Detroit, but after having gone most every way possible, we would advise via Niagara and return via Detroit for a good trip. Although we saw the Niagara all frozen over, and Lake Erie frozen out as far as we could see, you could not see that but the Niagara Falls, Hydro and the Shredded Wheat factory are wonderful sights.

Take the short cut to Buffalo over the two beautiful new bridge structures connecting Beaver Island. Here you may begin the study of bridge engineering and structure will be most interesting; for on such a trip you may compare the old, covered wood bridges which have stood the test of many years (some over 100) and cost little, with all types, up to the new 8¼-mile San Francisco-Oakland Bay bridge, costing $77,600,000.

In all our travels, we have found Canada has more tourists from New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio than any other states, and as is the case their farmers are like ours, just too busy and too confined to travel, so you will find most tourists come from the cities, for they just get so sick of city life, the constant hurry, buzz, loud screeching noises of cars, stale air, etc., till they feel it a haven to get out to our land of quiet, peaceful fresh air and beauty spots where one can have solitude and pleasure not to be found in a rushing city.

I shall leave it up to the traveller to get the highlights of all but Ohio, although I know many states quite well. Ohio was my home state, so it I shall stress. See Buffalo, Erie down route 19 and 6 to Meadville, a quaint old city. By the way, there is the only place we ever had a "hot shot." Do you know what that is? Well we came upon an old narrow bridge built at an angle of about 34 degrees at centre with a long iron sticking out in the drive where we approached to the road you would go into the river and directly in front was a deep ditch so it meant an abrupt left turn to back off the bridge. I was looking at the engineers on the new construction work when up loomed a big car. The drive tooted motioned with both hands off the steering wheel for us to back up, yet he continued on toward us. I threw up my hands for him to stop so we could pull to one side to let him by; but on he came till his bumper touched ours squarely, also to please them we backed up not off the bridge, but hugged our side to let him pass as this he could easily do. That bridge had thus been crossed for years, but the woman in the car cried out, "Get back on the other side where you belong" (meaning Canada). We had to laugh; for to us, it was funny! The engineers called cheerfully to us: "Come again." A good study of personality and character.

A Study of People

This episode leads one to the study of people. Take notice and compare the people of one section with that of others. Notice they each for all the good qualities you may find. For we get out of life that which we put in it and, after all, we are all human, and it is the good in everything to be sought in order to get the best the world affords. Compared, pro or con, their alertness, shrewdness, eagerness to serve, warm welcome extended, friendly spirit, salesmanship, approach of conversations, and perhaps in their haste they fail to show these qualities, still they learn you are a stranger (from Canada as your case may be), then the atmosphere changes quickly. I shall narrate this episode to show friendliness even of a youngster:

"As I sat in our car waiting for my friends to return, a dirty, poorly clad youngster of seven slowly and shyly faced our license plate. With his dirty hand to his brow to shield his eyes from the sun he saw they designated Canada. When he saw that, he peered into the car to see its occupants. I had to smile; he smiled in return and shyly, but most manly and courteously he raised his cap and passed on. I've seen Shirley Temple and Our Gang in person, but much prefer to see the real thing, the natural child, and I'll say that youngster was a real boy."

HOFFMAN RHYMES TO SAFE DRIVING

Governor Prominent in Hauptmann Case Turns To Writing Verse

NEW YORK, April 22 —(CP)— Governor Harold Hoffman of New Jersey, much in the public eye when he interested himself in futile efforts to postpone indefinitely the execution of Bruno Hauptmann for the kidnap-killing of the Lindbergh baby, is back in the spotlight revealed as a poet.

It was at a political testimonial dinner that the secret came out. The toastmaster more or less electrified the gathering when he announced he was about to read a poem the governor wrote for the National Safety Congress.

Mr. Hoffman rocketted out of his seat to protest. "It's bad enough to be a Republican without having to be known as a poet." But the audience clamored for a reading and the toastmaster started:

A cheery little home, with glistening window panes;
Outdoors—the rainy gloom; wet and chilly rains.
Brightly-colored rugs, inside; soft,
well-used chairs;
Warmth—and baby feet upon the stairs.

The Hoffman opus went on to relate that the male head of the cosy household, after a "careful dear, we love you so" fro mhis wife, hopped into his automobile and "faded down the street," office bent. Then—

Hurried feet; turning wheels; buildings grim and high.
The screech of brakes—a crash! A human cry.

The poem ended with the scene shifted back to the home, in this vein:

Baby fingers, stubby nose, pressed to the window pane;
Tear-dimmed blue eyes, watching—down the street—in vain.

BUY TIRE MILEAGE IN BIGGER PACKAGES
You know what good salesmanship is!
GOOD BUYMANSHIP
puts dollars in your pocket, too!
● Knowing how to buy the things you need means money to you.
Experience has taught you the economy of purchasing a large package of the goods you use regularly.
Have you considered that this principle applies when purchasing tire mileage?
Goodyear tires are a large package of miles. You pay a little more at the time of purchase to get a much lower price per hundred miles of use.
Some tires that may look like bargains have only a comparatively small mileage built into them. They are small packages of miles—the expensive and extravagant way to buy.
Goodyear mileage cost, in comparison with the mileage cost of "bargain" tires, proves that Goodyear users often get the last several thousand miles for nothing! Remember, too, that Goodyear's FOUR-WAY traction from four-way-pointed diamonds in the centre of the tread, means greater safety every mile you drive.
For tire advice that will leave you money in pocket, consult a Goodyear dealer. He'll show you actual "footprints" of Goodyear tires in use—convincing proof of the long service Goodyears give.

INTERCOUNTY LOOP MEETS IN LONDON

Ex-Manager Of Pittsburg To Address Big Gathering Western Ontario Ball Men

LONDON, April 22. — George "Honey" Gibson, former manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, and now a big league scout will be the guest speaker at the dinner to be held by the Intercounty Baseball League at the semi-annual meeting at Hotel London tonight. Gibson notified S. Reid, vice-president of the league that he would return to London in time to address the delegates of the amateur baseball circuit.

The business session will open at 2.30 o'clock this afternoon when it is expected that more than 70 delegates will be in attendance. The question of groupings will be considered in the early part of the session.

London delegates are concerned regarding the senior grouping. To date only Stratford, Brantford and London clubs have signified their intention of entering the major competition. The three clubs will seek at least a four-team circuit.

R. M. Phin, Hespeler, president of the league, will preside at the meeting. The executive will make a determined attempt to promote a major series. Groupings for intermediate "A" and "B" series will also be arranged.

49 Teams In

Forty-nine teams throughout Western Ontario are affiliated with the Intercounty Baseball League. London will enter an intermediate team in the circuit as well as a senior club.

Stan Gilbert, St. Thomas, Past President o fthe Intercounty League will definitely announce if the Tom Cats will be represented in the senior series. Rumors have been circulated during the last few weeks that St. Thomas would be without an O.B.A.A. entry.

It is understood that Brantford is ready to compete in the senior series and organization plans have been completed. Stratford will have a much stronger team than last year.

The president will submit estimates on a portable floodlight system. The executive at the last meeting authorized the proxy to secure details and the delegates will decide if a portable system is to be purchased by the league.

It is the first time in several years that an Intercounty League meeting has been slated for London. Secretary Shanta, of Kitchener, expects a number of new entries for the minor series.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

LOCAL PUCK fans—yeah, they lost till a July sun causes a run on ice-cream pants, lager and backless bathing suits—were amazed when Toronto Norvocs slapped Barrie silly to win the O.H.A. junior "B" title this week. No doubt Barrie fans were equally astounded. They will now appreciate how our Colts faded in their second play-off game in Barrie. One thing we noticed about both the Red Wings and the Norvocs' wins lately was the manner in which a bouncing defence knocked the ginger out of rival forwards when the games really counted. The bruising rear guardsmen knew it was money time and they bumped every rival hard that came near 'em. We have always maintained—and had to argue about it, too—that defencemen should use the bodycheck legally as often and as hard as possible. There have been far too few bashing birds on local teams in recent years.

SCENE OF the next C.O.B.L. meeting has been switched from here to Belleville this Saturday afternoon. 'Twas felt that it was more central for Kingston, Napanee, Trenton Airport and the loop secretary in Belleville. Frexy Max Swanston, Manager Fred Collins, Jim Doris, local secretary, and the writer, will probably make up the Peterborough party. The moguls will close entries at this meeting, decide on umps, agreed on type of schedule, and in general get set for the opening of the season. We hear the Airport is still interested and will likely be represented at the meeting.

DESPITE a chilly dismal drizzle last eve, a dozen ballsters turned out for the gym drill at the "Y", with Nels Stanger putting 'em through some stiff paces. These fellows will be in fine shape when the outdoor workouts commence. The local club sent off applications for four transfers. Apparently, those of Jakaffy and Long will be passed on okay but the O.B.A.A. requested more information on Brown and Johnston from Western Canada. When this is fixed up, they should be passed. The way things are now as regards work, the Ontario ball executive isn't going to clamp down too hard on guys moving from one town to another for a job.

THE KINGSTON scribe says Johnny Goodfellow is back there after a tryout with Toronto Leafs down south. Says he will be seen on the Ponies' infield this summer, once he gets his transfer O.K.'d from Cobourg—where he played last summer. The lad must have something, if only a drag, to get a trial with the Leafs, but personally we never heard of him till just lately.

SOFTBALL DAMSELS from Lindsay-on-the-Scugog take themselves a bit literally. They think gals' softball should have no man whatsoever connected with the sport, and so the other p.m. at a meeting they objected strenuously to some gees making plans with the result that said gees got up and walked out. And the meeting broke up. There is an ideal situation here where men and girls combine to run the executive and coaching end of the game and the lasses do the playing. We know of no girls' sport anywhere at all where a few guys aren't needed to assist. If the little woman guides the matrimonial ship, it is also true that a man or two is required to pilot a sports' organization. Right from the great Edmonton Grads down. As one disgruntled Lindsay lad remarked: "When it comes time for coaching and umpiring, etc., the girls will be willing to take some assistance." And mere man, we fear, being putty in the hands of the fair ones, will save she.

SOME BADGERS wearing A.A.U. of C. buttons, and having a hatchet to grind, decided yesterday that since Hershey Bars were under suspension in the U.S., the Winnipeg Monarchs—who played 'em in Toronto this week—should also be suspended. It came without warning, though the B'ars were suspended weeks ago in the States, and already several international tilts had been run off in Toronto. Meantime, the Wembley Lions and Sudbury meet in best-of-three finals to decide some sort of silly title before a few hundred yawning customers. Prexy Duncan of the C.A.H.A says his body will pay no attention at all to the amateur Old Boys, who apparently have had an overdose of sour grapefruit. For outstanding performances in All-Canadian boners, you have to reverently doff the felt hat in sheer admiration to 'em.

CITY COUNCIL last night agreed to a grant of a hundred smackers to the Lacrosse Club, toward fixing up their new grounds on George St., with the proviso that the work is carried out okay and to the satisfaction of Aldermen Sloan and Glover. This is a big boost to the gents working so hard to get the game off to a real start again in Peterborough. The grounds may be used for a city rink next winter. Work will commence Saturday at the field and those interested are asked to assist. The officers should not be required to do all the work. Local club meets on Monday while a group session will be held to-morrow evening in Port Hope.

TWO OUTSTANDING cage contests will wind up the season Saturday twilight in the Y.M.C.A. gym. Visiting teams are from King St. East, United Church, of Toronto. The first fixture at 7.45 sees King St Midgets meet the local St. Andrew's. The visitors won the Toronto and Ontario midget church titles while St. Andrew's are perennial juvenile champs here and last year went to the Ontario finals. At 8.45, St. Paul's, winners of the City Loop championship here, and Provincial junior finalists in '36, will clash with the intermediate "A" squad from Toronto. The latter team won out in a 10-team circuit in Toronto and will be the best outfit to be seen here this year. Admission is but 15 cents and the tussles should pack the gallery. A dance follows the hoop frays. From hoop to whoopee, what?

DEE, dem and dose (as we say on de East Side): Town Council of Port Hope will help fix up a box lacrosse field in that town . . . . Dick Turpin will manage Cobourg's ball team . . . . Oshawa writer says: "Toronto gets an O.H.A. title and Peterborough, the team that should have been in there, can now feel that others get tough breaks, too." . . . With so many local sports' banquets this Spring, 'twould look like Prosperity is with us again. . . . Al Bucky Harris, Washington manager, gets per annum is $15,000 . . . . A screwball is a pitch that breaks out and down, twisting fast; it also describes a ball player with nothing in his noggin but bats . . . . Detroit scribes are tickled with the purchase of Babe Herman—he has more color than a cosmetic shop. . . . 'Tis doubtful if the Tri-County Lacrosse Loop will operate this year.

Ski Club Championships Are Presented At Wind-Up Dinner

Nine Directors Are Appointed To Guide Club Next Season

DISCUSS CLUB-HOUSE

A season during which the Peterborough Ski Club operated successfully despite the fact the weathermen provided little skiing weather was reviewed by 100 club members at a banquet Wednesday evening. Club championship trophies and medals were presented and directors were named in readiness for the next season.

Impressive evidence of the place the sport of skiing has made itself in Peterborough was the enthusiasm of the banqueters. The auditorium of the Y.M.C.A. was the scene. Members resolved to make the banquet an annual wind-up feature.

The nine directors chosen by club vote were: Jerry Duffus, retiring president; Otto Laderach, Jack Holland, Ross Thompson, Art Rhodes, Eric Weshye, Andy Rutter, Isobel Reid and Lahring Parsons. The directors will themselves choose their president and executive officers and are to name honorary directors.

Reporting on his stewardship, Jerry Duffus commented that the lack of snow had rendered more difficult the task of the club officers to hold the club together. Enthusiasm prevailed throughout the winter regardless of the fact few organized club runs were possible, he said.

Discuss Club House

He urged that action be taken this year toward habilitating the Jackson Park Health Camp main building for use as a club house in winter. Lights and heating would be needed, he said. He reported the Kiwanis Club willing to afford the club use of the building during its idle winter months providing insurance and other safeguards are given attention.

Secretary-treasurer Lahring Parsons reported the season was successful financially. A surplus of $88.61 remains in the bank, she said.

Jim Rogers was commended for success of the club paper, "The Telemarker" and thanks was expressed to the advertisers who made possible the publishing of the bulletin.

Trophies Presented

The Hall Throphy was presented Otto Laderach as jumping and cross-country champion of the season. To Andy Rutter went the Peterborough Canoe Company Trophy for slalom and downhill honors. Medals for victories in jumping and cross-country at the annual club meet were presented Otto Laderach, for slalom and downhill to Andy Rutter and for the ladies combined downhill and slalom to Norma McIntosh of Bobcaygeon.

The banqueters remained to watch motion pictures shot at the new ski jump at Nassau this winter and a number of reels of European skiing obtained from the Ontario Ski Zone. Chris Sporle was the operator.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MADOC, April 22. — The young people of Trinity United Church of Madoc presented to a capacity audience in the Sunday School Rooms on Monday evening the play, "The Lost Church." LACROSSE CLUB GETS $100 BOOST

Finance Committee Gives Favorable Hearing To "Pete" King's Request

Lacrosse in Peterborough will get a $100 boost as the result of the visit of a one-man deputation in the person of Nelson ("Pete") King before the Finance Committee of the city council, on Wednesday night.

Mr. King told the committee of the plans of the lacrosse club to build a suitable enclosure for lacrosse on the grounds recently acquired opposite the George St. wharf, and asked for a measure of assistance from the council. It was planned, he explained, to build bleachers and the material alone would cost in the neighborhood of $800. He reminded the council that something had been done to provide grounds for baseball and softball and rugby but the lacrosse team had received no assistance. They were not asking something for nothing inasmuch as the grounds would be available for juvenile lacrosse players and in the winter the city could operate a hockey rink there if it saw fit.

Ald. Glover remarked that the request deserved consideration. Lacrosse had received no assistance, while other sports had been helped and he reminded the committee that Canada's national game had once been the leading sport here. Ald. Cotton concurred in that view and a motion by Ald. Stocker, seconded by Ald. Sloan, that a grant of $100 be made to the Peterborough Lacrosse Club, when it has completed its plans to the satisfaction of Ald. Glover and Ald. Sloan was carried unanimously.

Lawn Bowling

By HERB MARTIN

All this about lawn bowling might seem a little premature to some, but what we are trying to do is to impress upon the skips the necessity of having their rinks complete by May 1st.

Even at this late date, if all the rinks were completed it will keep the schedule committee mighty busy to have the groups allotted, and the schedule drawn up and then to have the schedule book printed in time for the bowlers to have the books by May 24th—the date of the official opening.

This we have a membership committee, and they are willing to help, but they cannot do it all—it is up to the skips themselves.

We had the privilege the other day to see the list of rinks that have been turned in—up to date—and we find that some rinks are completed, some are short one player and some are short two players—so you can see some person or persons have got to get awfully busy between now and May 1st.

And then another thing must be kept in mind, and that is that every bowler must sign a membership card, and send their fee with this card, or at least a $2 deposit. We believe that the board is going to enforce this piece of legislation to the last letter. Now that's the case in a nutshell.

We don't think that there is need of any more comment. If the skips are left out of the schedule book—well, don't blame any of the committees.

To all local bowlers, don't forget the annual meeting of the Central Ontario Lawn Bowling Association to-night (Thursday) at 8 o'clock, up in our club-house on McDonnel Street.

George III Silver Cup Is Offered As Special For Coronation Race

CORONATION CUP

By CHARLES "HORSES" AYERS

TORONTO, Apr. 22—The newest piece of race information to flash across the Canadian turf front emanated from the offices of the Ontario Jockey Club when Palmer Wright, secretary, announced that the directors of Woodbine Park had decided to stage a special feature race that would commemorate the coronation of his majesty King George VI.

This turf event will be known as the King George VI Coronation Cup Handicap for a purse of $5,000 added, for three-year-olds and upward, with the distance one mile and one-sixteenth.

There will also be a handsome silver cup presented outright to the owner of the winning horse. This cup has a very interesting background, having been donated to the Ontario Jockey Club in 1911 by Leopold deRothschild. It is a genuine George III piece manufactured in 1771, an example of excellent craftsmanship, and could not be duplicated. It is also very appropriate that this George III trophy be given in commemoration of the coronation of his great-great-great-grandson. The directors of the Ontario Jockey Club received permission direct from his Majesty in include a race at their spring meeting in commemoration of the coronation.

Outstanding handicap horses from Canada and United States will be seen in action for this turf classic, and racing fans in the Dominion may see one of the most hotly contested stakes in the history of thoroughbred racing in Canada.

The King George VI Coronation Cup Handicap will be run on the last day of the Woodbine Park spring meeting, May 29.

BARRY SURPRISED TO WIN BYNG CUP

Star Of Stanley Cup Playoffs To Work And Play Ball During Summer

Marty Barry came home still registering surprise that he had been selected to hold the Lady Byng trophy till next season.

"I was certainly very pleased because I thought my style of play bordered a little too much on the heavy line to win recognition from the writers," said Marty as he dangled his little son on his knee.

In addition, Marty was picked as all-star centre. He was also acclaimed as the outstanding star with Detroit in their final drive against Rangers.

So he goes back to the business of helping his father to stock the Norris boats that ply up and down the St. Lawrence to the Norris grain elevator at Three Rivers.

He will play ball with St. Michae,s and softball with Rosie Menard's Ahuntsic club. Pete Kelly came along with him as far as Toronto.

Old System

He thought one of the reasons why Detroit won out was because they kept to their old system.

"Adams moved Hec Kilrea up, and that move probably won us the cup. I think Rangers were almost as good as Wings and Kerr was certainly sensational.

"I think Neil Colville is one of the coming stars of hockey. He gave us a lot of trouble. Phil Watson too played a standout game."

He thought the Canadien series just as tough as the one against Rangers.

"Paul Haynes, Babe Siebert and Wilf Cude, were certainly wonderful in that series. Haynes I think played the best hockey of his career. He is a mighty brainy player, and clean as a whistle in addition."

Marty thinks Detroit will be very strong again next year when Aurie and Young get back.

"But you have to keep going along because some of those fine youngsters that have come up this year are giving as matured players plenty to think over, and maybe Rangers, Canadiens or Leafs will get really hot and knock us of," he claimed.

A.A.U. SUSPENDS 'PEG MONARCHS WORLD TOURNEY

Ruled Out For Playing Outlawed Hershey Bears—Only 500 Attend

TIGERS MEET WEMBLEY

TORONTO, April 22 (CP).—Finals in Toronto's International amateur hockey tournament will start tonight, several steps ahead of schedule. Sudbury Tigers and Wembley Lions, champions of Canada and of England, will meet in a best-of-three series that follows on an abbreviated schedule.

Winnipeg Monarchs and Hershey Bears, the other two participants, met last night and the Canadian junior titlists defeated the United States senior champions 8-7. Immediately afterward both clubs headed homeward. Hershey hadn't won in three starts, and Winnipeg was under suspension by the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada for having played the Bears, who are regarded by the A.A.U. of C. and its ally, the A.A.U. of the United States, as outlaws.

Wembley has played twice, beating Hershey and Winnipeg. Sudbury has played once, getting back from Allan Cup finals at Calgary in time to administer one of the beatings to Hershey. On that single victory the Tigers were awarded a place in the two-team finals.

Originally scheduled to go nine games before finals, the tourney has drawn gradually diminishing crowds. Before Hershey and Winnipeg played to an attendance of 500 last night, officials announced the rest of the preliminaries were off and Sudbury and Wembley would begin the last round immediately.

The A.A.U. of C. announced any team playing Hershey would be suspended and Monarchs automatically entered the union's black list when they stepped to the ice. The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, direct controlling body over the Winnipeg club, withdrew from its A.A.U. affiliation at its convention this week.

Appointed to the sub-committee of the association are J. W. Scott, Kitchener, as chairman; A. Hillmer, Oakville, vice-chairman; W. J. Snyder Hamilton, secretary; W. J. Smith and A. J. Walsh, Toronto, and N. A. Taylor, Delhi.

A meeting will be held around May 1 to deal with a further list of applications for change of residence and other business.

Crown Canadian Winner At Boston

Walter Young, a comparative unknown from Verdun, Quebec, is congratulated after winning the 26-mile, 385 yd. marathon at Boston. His time was 2 hours, 33 minutes, 20 secs. He defeated the favorite, Johnny Kelley, by a decisive margin.

PITCHING POWER IS BIG HANDICAP TO CHICAGO CUBS

Many Chicago Cub Players On Spot, Especially Grimm And Parmelee

CATCHING ALL RIGHT

By BILL BRAUCHER

CHICAGO, April 22—The firm of Capone & Co. isn't doing business at the old stand, but some people here still are on the spot in a big way, and prominent among these is Charles Grimm, manager of the Cubs' ball club.

Not only is Grimm on the spot for failure to deliver a pennant to the Chicago fans (not to mention Mr. Wrigley) for a whole year, but Pitcher Leroy Parmelee, First Baseman Rip Collins, Outfielder Joe Marty, Pitcher Curt Davis, Outfielder Augie Galan, Outfielder Tuck Stainback and a few others have been placed on the well-known spook, and if they don't come across and win a flag this year it will be just too bad for everybody.

How Will He Do It?

The spot is dedicated particularly to Mr. Parmelee. Over the years he has proved himself just about half as good a pitcher as Lon Warneke, who was sent to the Cardinals for Parmelee and Leroy and Rip Collins to the Cubs. Parmelee's faults, which caused Managers Bill Terry and Frankie Frisch to give up on him, are wildness and a disposition not to care too much about winning.

But Boss Grimm wanted to add punch to his club when he sent Warneke along to the Gas House Gang, and he figures that's what he is getting in the person of Rip Collins, who takes Phil Cavarretta's place at first, while Phil tries his luck in the outfield for a spell.

Thus you have Collins, a 33-year-old ball player joining Parmelee on the spot. The Ripper had a bad year with the Cardinals in 1936, but he's supposed to be a .300 hitter and knocks in some runs. Another bad year for him and the Cubs will have one, also.

Pitcher Curt Davis is on the spot through no fault of his own. Davis was a great pitcher with the Phils before the Cubs bought him for $75,000. After a couple of good weeks last year with the Cubs Davis was stricken with internal miseries and wound up with only 11 games won against nine lost, which is not quite $75,000 pitching. The other day Davis arrived here from the western training base to take treatments for a stiff right arm.

Without Davis, What?

If the Cubs have to start without hope of help from Davis, the pitching duties will have to be shared by Parmelee, Bill Lee, Clyde Shoun, Charley Root, Larry French, Tex Carleton, Clay Bryant and perhaps a rookie. The Cubs have no rookies worth the gamble. Lee, French and Carleton are the big three of the staff as it stands, and Lee won 11 games last year, Carleton 14 and French 18.

The Cubs' infield is quite all right, with Collins, Bill Herman, Bill Jurges and Lonnie Frey or Stanley Hack. Phil Cavarretta has fooled even Boss Grimm by showing himself to be a capable outfielder, giving Stainback and Joe Marty, the kid from the Pacific coast, a rousing race for a job alongside Demaree and Galan. Marty has been caught getting fooled by curve balls during the spring trip, which has taken some of the edge off the nice ballyhoo that preceded him to the major leagues.

Catching Is All Right

Gabby Hartnett is 39, but he still is a fine catcher and he should help the pitchers a great deal, but whether he can help them enough is a question. Kenneth O'Dea is a capable backstop and he will stand in often for Hartnett this year.

But it's pitching that counts, and after all the catcher can't go out there and heave the apple himself. It's my guess that the pitching the Cubs will fail.

'PEG'S CHAMPIONS SEEM UNWORRIED OVER SUSPENSION

C.A.H.A. Head Brands A.A.U. Ruling An Attempt To Embarrass Association

OTHER MINOR UPHEAVALS

TORONTO, April 22.—(CP).—The major question in amateur hockey's double muddle to-day was the effect a suspension by the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada would have on members of Winnipeg Monarchs, Dominion junior champions.

A few hours before Monarchs were scheduled to play Hershey Bears in an International series game here last night and shortly after the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association had concluded its three-day annual meeting, a bombshell was tossed into the ring by a delegate to the Association's meeting.

Leo Burns, of Montreal, Quebec Amateur Hockey Association representative and first vice-president of the A.A.U. of C., issued a statement on behalf of the latter body that meant automatic suspension from any sports controlled by the A.A.U. of C. for players of any team playing Hershey.

Burns said the A.A.U. of C. had been notified by the A.A.U. of the United States all teams in the Eastern United States' Amateur Hockey League, of which Hershey was one had been suspended in March, 1937. Burns said the Canadian body had no choice except to uphold its alliance with the U.S. Union and serve warning to Canadian teams.

Seem Little Worried

After defeating Hershey 8-7, players and club officials of Monarchs hustled to the train, homeward bound. No statement was made on behalf of the players or the club but it was indicated they were not worrying about the situation. It was believed few if any of the boys compete in sports under A.A.U. of C. jurisdiction.

The A.A.U. of C. directly controls track and field, boxing and wrestling, and gymnastics and handball. Most important of its affiliated bodies are the basketball, ski and lacrosse associations.

Following the statement issued by Burns, another was released by Cecil Duncan of Ottawa, president of the C.A.H.A., in which he branded the affair an attempt "at a late hour to embarrass the association in the conduct of the international games now in progress."

Duncan went on to say authorization for the games had been given by the International Ice Hockey Federation, which the C.A.H.A. has just espoused after breaking with the A.A.U. of C. He said any communication from the A.A.U. of C. should have been made directly to the C.A.H.A. or to the I.I.H.F., of which the American body also is a member.

C.A.H.A. officials alleged Burns held up the statement concerning A.A.U. of C. suspensions until a late hour, rather than bring up the matter immediately on receipt of a telegram from John Leslie, Edmonton, secretary of the A.A.U. of C. Burns said his statement was made on authorization of the president, Jack Hamilton of Regina.

A. H. Cox, Winnipeg, president of the Manitoba branch of the association and chairman of the Records Committee of the A.A.U. of C., said last night he knew Burns had the telegram "at least 24 hours" previous to the time he released it in the form of a press statement.

Two minor upheavals were settled in the late afternoon just before the big fuss broke. Both involved Burns and afterward he pledged co-operation of the C.A.H.A. with the parent body after being asked by George Dudley of Midland, Ont., second vice-president, what the policy of the Quebec branch would be in relation to the association.

Dudley's request referred to a threatened resignation last year of the C.A.H.A. if the C.A.H.A.'s famed "four points" were adopted. Three points were passed on the first day of the annual meeting while the association took a stand of believing in the principle of the fourth.

Question of a protest by Quebec Aces of the Montreal senior group against being forced to replay a game with Hull Volants because of a disputed goal was dropped when the executive committee decided President Duncan had handled the affair satisfactorily.

The other incident was a spirited protest by Burns on behalf of the C.A.H.A. for what he declared was an invasion of C.A.H.A. territory by the C.A.H.A. in dealing directly with the Montreal senior group without consulting the branch first. This also was dropped.

SOCCER NOTES

An open practice of the C.C.F. soccer team is called for this Saturday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock in King Edward Park. Prospective players wishing to workout are invited.

Rider and Horse Land Safely

As the camera clicked, it looked as if the young lady were about to abdicate from the saddle, but she and the horse rose to the occasion and they made a safe four-point landing. The rider is Miss Dorothy Green, of Durham, N.C., a participant in the annual Pinehurst Horse Show.

INTERNATIONAL OPENER TODAY

Over 70,000 Expected Out In Four Cities If Weatherman Smiles

NEW YORK, April 22 (AP). — If the weather man is willing, the International League will get away to a flying start today in its 54th season, with one of the best races the circuit has had in many years on tap for the fans. 70,000 of whom will witness the four openers at Jersey City, Newark, Baltimore and Syracuse.

Much interest is centred on the Jersey City opening, against the Rochester Red Wings, where 30,000 fans are expected to open the new stadium. The home team returning to the league under the aegis of the New York Giants has Stoney Jackson, for many years a great infielder across the river for the New York Giants, as manager, and tremendous interest by local fans to give it impetus in the pennant race.

The Newark Bears, owned by the New York Yankees, figure 19,000 will watch the Bears open against the Montreal Royals, while about 10,000 were anticipated for the Syracuse-Buffalo game and 8,000 for Baltimore's opener with Toronto.

Sports Spice

By EDDIE BRIETZ

NEW YORK, April 22—(AP)—It may not be news that Slen Suvio of Finland 1936 Olympic champion, has turned pro.... But it is news that he has been guaranteed $2,000 per year, plus 66 2-3 per cent of what he earns, by his American manager, Emil Sarbo.... This is just about tops for an unproved fighter.... Most of them sign up for $800 per year or the customary 66 2-3 per cent.... Apparently Sarbo believes the nice looking Suvio has what it takes.... Van Lingle Mungo, who turned in 18 wins for the Dodgers last season, thinks he'll repeat because his auto license adds up to 18.

Lou Ambers, the lightweight champion, and his manager, Al Weill, are in Tampa to second Lou's stalemate, Red Guarino, against Chino Alvarez, to-night.... Connie Mack says his young Athletics are the best hustlers he has directed in five years.... Latest hot baseball tip is to watch Chicago Cubs.... Reason: Phil Cavarretta is doing a swell job in the outfield and Augie Galan, Marty has been caught getting fooled by curve balls during the spring trip, which has taken some of the edge off the nice ballyhoo that preceded him to the major leagues.

Catching Is All Right

Gabby Hartnett is 39, but he still is a fine catcher and he should help the pitchers a great deal, but whether he can help them enough is a question. Kenneth O'Dea is a capable backstop and he will stand in often for Hartnett this year.

But it's pitching that counts, and after all the catcher can't go out there and heave the apple himself. It's my guess that the pitching the Cubs will fail.

In raising salaries of its employees a large company at Tokyo, Japan, omitted all secretaries because they were thought to not be affected by rising living costs.

HORNSBY'S HOMER FEATURES VICTORY

Grandaddy Of Big Time Paces His Browns To 15-10 Win Over White Sox

By Alf Feder
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

ST. LOUIS, April 22 (C.P.).—Old Pop Time is scarred ally. Rogers Hornsby has the old fellow ready to wrap up his whiskers, toss away his scythe, and give up.

The sage of St. Louis stayed on the bench for all but two games last year and Pop figured the Rajah at 40 and with 22 years in the big-time book of him, was all washed up.

So Hornsby, the "grand-daddy" of big league baseball, stepped up to the plate yesterday, banged out a homer and two singles, and generally was there in the clutch as his Brownies opened their 1937 baseball wars with a 15-10 clouting conquest of the high regarded Chicago White Sox.

The one victory didn't change the status of the Browns in this year's American League race. They held the day's spotlight, largely because all the other clubs in both leagues were rained out, but they remain 100 to 1 shots in any book, strictly because the Brownie pitching staff is anything but that.

In addition to his backwork Hornsby played an errorless nine innings at second base, but it was the big stick he wielded, and the definite evidence that he's still the shrewdest trafficer in the business that stole the show.

Wrestling Last Night

(By the Canadian Press.)

Montreal. — Danno O'Mahoney, 235, Ireland, defeated Rube Wright, 238, Texas (strangle hold).

Wilmington, Del. — Ernie Dusek, 215, Omaha, pinned Bill Sledge, 215, Houston, Texas (14.30).

will be Stanley Cup contenders for the next three years.

The way the Giants are running against Brooklyn makes 'em look like the Giants of the John McGraw days.... Hot spots controlled by Jack Dempsey and Tony Canzoneri are fighting for business almost next door to each other.... A block away is a place operated by Mickey Walker and Benny Leonard is looking for a spot in the same Broadway neighborhood.... Bill Terry, who used to sport No. Three, now wears No. 30....

Members of the fair sex were first in line at three of the unreserved gates in Brooklyn for the opener.... Beginning in 1934, the Yankees have lost every opening game by one run.... Before Tuesday's inaugural, Lefty Gomez had been trimmed twice by 1-0 scores.... (1935.) Al Simmons was the villain Tuesday.... It isn't true that Primo Carnera is coming back to the shores as a wrestler.... What did Mickey Cochrane think when he read the Washington box score and saw what Aloysius Simmons did?

TUCKER—In loving memory of our dear sister Gertrude, who passed away on April 22, 1936.
Peacefully sleeping, resting at last,
Her weary trials and troubles are past.
In silence she suffered, in patience she bore,
Till God called her home to suffer no more.
Sisters and Brothers.

TUCKER — In loving memory of Mrs. Gertrude Tucker, who passed away, Thursday, April 22, 1936.
Our mother is sleeping, so free from all pain,
Oh wake her not, sweet spirit, to suffer again.
She slumbers so soundly, oh let her sleep on,
Her sickness is ended, her troubles are gone.
Just think how she suffered and moaned with pain,
In the long night hours we soothed her in vain,
Till God in His mercy sent down from above,
An angel that whispered a message of love.
Every remembered by her daughters, Mrs. Milton Drain and Mrs. Hilliard Darling.

READ THIS FIRST:

Charles Stuckey, of a London law firm, reluctantly has agreed to a scheme to defraud the daughter of one of his few respectable clients, Jacqueline Smith, of an inheritance of $1,500,000 from an American uncle. In keeping with the plan, Colonel Alex Lutman—who has a hold over Stuckey—Jim Asson, an ex-convict, and the lawyer are stopping at the same hotel in Cobenzil with Mrs. Smith and her daughter. In dire financial straits, Mrs. Smith has persuaded Jacqueline to marry Asson, posing as a wealthy Englishman, unsuspectedly falling in with the plan of the three men to have Asson cultivate the girl, have all of her property assigned to him before their marriage, then splitting up the inheritance before she learns of it. Lutman, as Jim's "trustee", has hurried Jacqueline's decision by revealing a check he cashed for her mother returned marked "insufficient funds". After meeting Jacqueline, Stuckey is more reluctant than ever to go through with the scheme and stalls by telling them all the property deed must be signed in London. Back in London Charles leaves Lutman in his office while he goes after Jim Asson.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER 10

CHARLES STUCKEY strode out of his office and, as the door closed, Lutman crossed to the desk and began methodically going through the various papers that littered it. More than once in his past he had found that inspecting papers on desks, in drawers and if he was fortunate, in safes, was a profitable occupation for any moments in which he might be left alone in someone else's office. But on this occasion he had hardly begun his inspection when the door was flung open and Miss Harringay, with a filling basket filled with papers in her hand, came jauntily into the room, saw him, and halted abruptly.

"Looking for anything?" she inquired. And before the Colonel could adjust his spectacles and bestow the stare with which he intended to frighten her: "All right, don't mind me. But there's nothing there worth reading; I've had a look myself."

She went to the safe, tried the handle, found that it was locked, crossed to the desk and pulled at the top left-hand drawer. That, too, was locked, and with a groan of exasperation she set down the filling basket, produced a hairpin from her unruly mass of hair, and thrust it into the lock of the drawer.

"Looking for anything?" smiled Lutman.

"The safe key."

"In that drawer? Rather a dangerous place for a safe key, isn't it?"

"You'd better tell Mr. Stuckey," advised Miss Harringay. "He keeps it here, not I. But there's nothing in our safe worth pinching. We only keep our tea and sugar there. Our clients are terrors for tea and sugar if we leave them about."

"And do you make a habit of picking the locks of Mr. Stuckey's desk? That's what you're trying to do, isn't it?"

"It's what I'm doing if this darned hairpin doesn't bend," replied Miss Harringay. "It's one of my accomplishments. One of our regular clients taught me. Care to learn? But I don't suppose there's much you don't know about it. What's your line—blackmail? It's dangerous, but you ought to be all right with Mr. Stuckey. He's extra hot stuff on blackmail, so they say."

"Thank you for the tip," smiled Lutman. "And now I'll give you one, sha'll I? Eyes off Jim Asson!"

Miss Harringay lifted her chin.

"I don't know what you mean."

"Just that if you go on looking at him the way I saw you looking at him at the Empire Cinema the other night, you're riding for a broken heart. He's going to be married."

Miss Harringay shrugged a shoulder, inspecting the bent hairpin thoughtfully.

"I should worry! I suppose you haven't got a hairpin, have you?"

Before the Colonel could reply, the door opened and Mr. Bells' head appeared.

"Two ladies—highly respectable—to see Mr. Stuckey, as per appointment, he announced; and, as Miss Harringay hurried, as a gesture from Lutman, toward the door, Mrs. Smith, with Jacqueline following, sailed gracefully into the room.

"My dear Colonel Lutman, what a dreadful neighborhood!" she exclaimed. "It smells of fried fish and hops."

"The staple diet in these parts, Mrs. Smith," Lutman informed her. "I should starve," said Mrs. Smith. "Where's Mr. Stuckey?"

"He won't be many minutes. He has just gone out."

"I have an appointment for 12 o'clock and he has no right to be out. Who was that girl?"

"That's Mr. Stuckey's typist, Miss Harringay."

"How dreadful! And that's what you wanted to be, Jacqueline—working here all day and going home at night to a lonely little bedroom. You'll be much more comfortable married to Jim. Where is Jim?"

"He'll be along in a minute, Mrs. Smith," said Lutman.

Mrs. Smith sighed.

"Everybody seems to be coming along in a minute, and I'm quite tired of the place already."

The Colonel waved her toward the armchair.

"Sit down, Mrs. Smith," he invited. "It won't take many seconds to fix things up when Stuckey does turn up. I've told him to have the contract ready for signature."

"You've told him, Colonel?" said Jacqueline. "You're rather taking charge of things, aren't you?"

"My dear Jacqueline, don't be so ungracious," reproved her mother. "After all the Colonel has done for us! I'm sure I don't know where we would have been without him."

"In some other hotel, mother," said the girl, and at that moment Charles and Jim Asson came in.

Mrs. Smith fixed Charles with a disapproving stare.

"I have been waiting for five minutes, Mr. Stuckey."

"Sorry Mrs. Smith." Charles apologized. "I've been doing a humble job of work."

"And now that you have been good enough to put in an appearance, please let's get to business at once. I have arranged for the marriage of my daughter and Mr. Asson to be solemnized on Wednesday next at 11 o'clock."

"In the forenoon," laughed Jacqueline. "At the office of the duly appointed registrar for the district of Pimlico. Solemnized! How do you fancy being solemnized, Jim? You don't look too happy about it."

Jim's answer was a sullen frown.

"Jim is very happy indeed," announced Mrs. Smith. "I'm sure he ought to be. He's a very fortunate young man. The deed, I presume, Mr. Stuckey is ready for Jacqueline's signature?"

Charles nodded.

"Quite ready, Mrs. Smith."

"Then nothing remains but to—er....."

"Get it signed," interrupted Jim irritably. "For heaven's sake, Stuckey, let's have the deed and get it signed. I've been hanging about for over an hour already."

"Just a minute, please, Jim," interrupted Jacqueline. "I'm probably going to be married to you for a long time, and it's worth while spending a few minutes to know just how I stand." She turned to Charles. "Suppose I sign this deed, Charles," she said, "and then don't marry Jim—what happens?"

"Nothing," Charles told her. "The deed would be inoperative. Marriage is part of the consideration."

"I say, Jacqueline!" exclaimed Jim anxiously. "You wouldn't—after all this—you wouldn't do a mean thing like that?"

"Quite right, Mr. Asson," said Charles. "Miss Jacqueline certainly would not do a mean thing. But even when the contract is signed she is at perfect liberty to decline to marry you."

"Oh, it's all right, Jim," laughed Jacqueline. "I'm not backing out. I only want to know how I stand, Charles, without signing the deed?"

"I can tell you that, Jacqueline," volunteered Lutman. "In that case you would be dependent on what allowance Jim chose to make you. He would be under no legal obligation to make any allowance at all."

"Either to you or to your mother, Jacqueline," added Mrs. Smith.

"I see," said Jacqueline. "So it's all for my sake, is it? It seems rather ridiculous—all this fuss with deeds and contracts and signatures and the rest of it, just to make sure that I should be fairly treated."

UNCLE WIGGILY AND JINGLE'S TEARS

"Attention now, pupils, if you please!" squeaked the Lady Mouse Teacher in the Hollow Tree School.

The rabbits, the pussies, the puppies, the ducks and all the other animal children sat up very straight at their desks.

"As Uncle Wiggily told you," went on Miss Mouse, "he is going to give a prize for the best piano player. Many of you take lessons and I hope do your practising at home. Practice makes perfect, you know, so now we shall see who plays the best from having done the most and best practice."

If Jingle's little heart was beating faster than usual because of the trick she had played with Buster's marbles, to get out of her practice that morning, we can't blame her, can we?

One after another the animal pupils went to the school piano and played the little pieces they had practiced.

The Program

Jackie Bow Wow played one called "Please give me a juicy bone and never at me throw a stone."

Johnnie Bushytail, the squirrel, played: "Nice, sweet nuts with shells I crack and I then put them in a sack."

"Very good, Johnnie and Jackie," said Uncle Wiggily.

"Next!" called Miss Mouse.

Alice Wibblewobble, the duck, played: "In the water I love to swim. I have a brother whose name is Jim."

"Now, Jingle, it's your turn," said Miss Mouse.

"I suppose Jingle has practiced?" said Uncle Wiggily feeling in his pocket for Buster's bag of marbles, "Oh, Jingle is always very good at her practice," said Miss Mouse.

My how fast the heart of the tricky little rabbit girl was now beating! She wished she hadn't let Buster's marbles drop on the piano keys to fool her ducky. She wondered if he had found her out.

"Before Jingle plays," said Uncle Wiggily, "I want to play."

"I didn't know you could play, Mr. Longears," said Miss Mouse.

"I can't play very well," said the rabbit gentleman sadly. "But this morning I saw Buster's marbles playing the piano, like this:"

Mr. Longears put Buster's bag of marbles on top of the piano near the edge. Then he made a hill of a slanting book. When the bag of marbles was opened they rolled out, one by one, and fell down on the piano keys! "Plink! Plank! Plunk!"

Her Trick

That was how Jingle had fooled her daddy.

"That's a funny way to play!" laughed Miss Mouse.

"Isn't it," agreed Mr. Longears. But he never said another word. He didn't tell Miss Mouse and the others how he had found out the trick Jingle had played instead of doing her piano lesson. But Jingle knew her daddy had found her out. And, Oh, how sorry she was! She made up her mind never to do it again. And she was going to tell her daddy so as soon as school was out.

"Now, Jingle, you may play," said Miss Mouse.

Well, I am sorry to say Jingle didn't play at all well. One reason was she hadn't practiced. The other reason was she felt bad at the trick she had done. She just made discords on the piano.

"Jingle, my dear, what's the matter with you?" asked Miss Mouse.

"Oh, I'm so—so sorry, daddy! So very sorry!" said Jingle and she hopped, crying, to Uncle Wiggily who put his paws around her.

"Never mind, my pet," he said, kindly patting her, "I know it will never happen again. Let me wipe away your tears. I forgive you."

"And now for the prizes. I have a prize for every one, those who played and practiced and those who did not. Here they are, Miss Mouse." And he gave her a cake of maple sugar for every pupil in school, including Jingle.

So everything happened for the best. And if the dill pickle doesn't put sauer kraut in the potato pancake, I'll tell you more about Uncle Wiggily's bean flower.

Mother And Eight Children Killed In Explosion

A mother and her eight children were instantly killed at Muskego, Wis., when a store of pyrotol kept in the cellar of their two-storey home exploded. The charge was thought to have been set off by a three-year-old baby who found the explosive where it had been placed for safe keeping. Previously it had been stored in the milk house, but fearing that some of the children might find it, the father had moved the explosives to the cellar of their home. The father, John Waszak (RIGHT), was feeding the chickens when the powder exploded, and was unable to give an explanation for the detonation which was heard two miles away. The wreckage of the home in which the nine persons were killed is shown at the LEFT.

LAKEFIELD UNION SETS SOCIAL DATE

Proffers Invitation To Attend To Presbyterian And Baptist Societies

(Examiner Correspondence)

LAKEFIELD, April 22—Mrs. Wm. Millage, Christian Culture convener, was in charge of the program at the regular weekly meeting of the Young People's Union of Lakefield United church, which was held in the Sunday School room on Monday evening, April 19. A large number of members weer present.

Robt. Spence conducted the hour of games which was held before the meeting in the absence of Rev. G. F. Kelly, Recreation convener. After the recreation, President Clifford Hurl called the meeting to order.

During the business period which followed, it was decided that Monday, May 3, would be set aside as a social evening when the young people's societies of St. Andrew's Presbyterian and the Lakefield Baptist churches should be guests of the Society.

Mrs. W. W. Yale addressed the meeting regarding the holding of a Temperance Contest, at a future date. It was decided that the Temperance Contest would be held at a meeting of the Society to be held on Tuesday evening, May 11, when members of the Society and those interested will have the privilege of listening to the young elocutionists of the Loyal Temperance League in the contest for the prized silver and bronze medals.

The attendance for the night was taken, and results of the drive for new members announced. The Tecumsen Group were highest with a total score of 74 members present. The Mohawks came second with 69 members and the Hurons and Iroquois trailed with 68 and 47 members each. According to the agreement, the Tecumsehs will be guests at a social evening to be held next Monday, April 26. The Mohawk Tribe will provide the program and the Iroquois and Hurons will serve lunch.

Mrs. Wm. Millage, Christian Culture convener, then took charge of the meeting, opening the program with a call to worship. Miss Nora Webster led in prayer and Clifford Hurl gave a reading entitled: "Send down thy love, O God," and Mrs. D. MacMillan and Mrs. Wm. Millage sang, "In the Garden" as a vocal duet. They were accompanied by Mrs. J. R. Hull.

Miss Muriel Bullock read the scripture and the topic was taken by Robt. Spence. The subject of Mr. Spence's address was: "Whither are Missions Going?"

Scout Jamboree

The Boy Scouts, of Lakefield, will act as hosts to Scouts of Peterborough, Lindsay and District on Monday, May 24, when a Scout Jamboree will be held in the village exhibition grounds.

The program will commence with a parade of Scouts, to leave the Govarnment Dock, Lakefield, at 12.45 p.m., and proceed up Queen St., to the grounds. Here they will be welcomed by village officials and the local troop, and a splendid program of sports run off. A picnic supper will be eaten on the grounds after which the finals of the softball contest will be held.

As darkness approaches the different troops will gather round a large bonfire and entertain those present with stunts or musical numbers.

Some features of the afternoon's sports will be a jilting contest in which opponents balance on tiles and attempt to oust their opponents by means of jilling poles; a three-way tug-of-war, and knot-tying races.

Scout Master J. W. McKerrihar, and the local scout committee consisting of Reeve C. S. Tanner, and Messrs. S. J. Charlton and E. W. Bailey are in charge of arrangements.

ANGLICAN CHURCH FESTIVAL

A special St. George's day service will be held in St. George's Anglican Church, Hastings, on Friday of this week at 8 p.m., in remembrance of the patron saint of England.

Saint George, according to tradition was born of a noble Christian family in Cappadocia. He became a soldier and served under the Roman Emperor, Diocletian, with distinction. He rebuked the Emperor for his persecution of Christianity and suffered a martyr's death at Nicomedia.

Eusebius, the church historian, who was Bishop of Caesarea in the early part of the 4th Century, writes of a nameless martyr under Diocletian in Nicomedia; and a still earlier record speaks of the martyrdom of the holy George in 225 A.D.

Saint George was adopted by the Genoese as their patron saint and in 1222 the Council of Oxford ordered that his day (April 23rd) should be observed as a national holiday in England. He was made the patron of the Order of the Garter, by Edward III. in 1350. The red cross of St. George, as seen on the Union Jack on a white ground, was formerly worn by the English soldiery.

An impromptu debate by two sides of five debaters each, led by Alan Dawson (affirmative) and Willis [illegible] (negative), was very interesting. Blum Blushing Now At 1912 Love Advice

Paris, April 22. (UP).

PREMIER Leon Blum blushed a deep crimson last night and said he wished people would forget about the book he wrote twenty-five years ago urging young men to "sow plenty of wild oats" and not to love their wives too much.

But now that he's the Premier of France everybody is reading it. It has gone into its twentieth edition; become a best-seller.

SOCIAL SECURITY FOUND IN SWEDEN WITHOUT PARALLEL

Conditions In Sweden Subject Of Address Of Denton Massey

SWEDE IS AMAZING

"There is a sense of social security in Sweden that in its depth and width and height is without parallel," declared Denton Massey, M.P. of Toronto, in addressing a very large audience in St. Paul's church on Thursday night on his observations of conditions in Sweden during his visit to that country last summer. The visit of the celebrated leader of the famous York Bible Class was under the joint auspices of the Fraser Women's Missionary Society of St. Paul's church, the Women's Auxiliary of All Saints' church and the Women's Auxiliary of the Young Men's Christian Association.

Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr, of St. Paul's church, "as chairman, and a musical interlude was provided by Master James Mawhinney whose excellent soprano voice was admirably displayed in two much enjoyed vocal numbers. M. B. Chenhall was at the organ.

Mr. Massey's address proper was followed by some very interesting lantern slides that were fully described by the speaker. They include views of public buildings, the stores of the Swedish co-operative societies, some of the country's leading industries and typical scenes illustrative of the housing program that has been so successfully carried out.

Stressing the fact that Sweden had come through the depression more smoothly than any other country and that unemployment there had perhaps been less than anywhere else, Mr. Massey remarked that a most amazing job had been done by the Swedish people. There existed all sorts of social legislation in Sweden, regulating hours of work, social benefits insurance, a co-operative system both in merchandising and industry more advanced than in any other country, a housing program had been efficiently carried out and all these things had been brought about without disturbances or bloodshed. The most interesting feature to him was how all this had been accomplished, how was it that Sweden could climb back to a greater prosperity than ever before and what was the foundation upon which these things had been built.

An Amazing Person

The Swede, he said, was a most amazing person. His hospitality knew no bounds. A visitor to the country was regarded as honoring

REBEL SHELLS FAIL TO BLOCK FOOD VESSELS

Insurgent Cruiser Stops Three Britishers—Changes Mind As Battleship Hood Plows Up

ONE WARNING SHOT

Starving Basques Rejoice With Arrival Of 6,100 Tons Of Supplies

BILBAO, Spain, April 23 (AP)— A fleet of three British food ships, under the protection of British men-of-war and the barking guns of Basque shore batteries, ran a gauntlet of insurgent fire today to break through the blockade of Bilbao with desperately needed supplies.

Frantically cheering crowds of Basques lined the docks to greet the sturdy Merchantmen as they came into view down the lower reaches of the broad Nervion River that has made the Basque capital the first seaport of Spain.

Crammed into their holds were 6,100 tons of foodstuffs for the starving population of the city, swollen to almost 400,000 by the steady influx of refugees from the surrounding country.

The three cargo vessels, the MacGregor, the Hamsterley, and the Stanbrook, captained by veteran British seadogs, defied the shells of the insurgent fleet during the night and docked this morning.

Halted By 2 Rebel Ships

Just before dawn, the skipper of the Hamsterley said after their successful break through the blockade, the Insurgent cruiser Almirante Cervera and the armed trawler Galerna halted the miniature fleet.

Crashing into the seas just off their bows came one shot from the Cervera to be followed by a terse note from the Insurgent commander:

"We shall sink you if you do not halt."

The hovering battle cruiser Hood, mightiest warship afloat, was quickly advised of the situation and steamed to the scene with the destroyer Fiolilla under her command.

From then until they reached Spanish territorial waters the British warships covered the Merchantmen and there at the three-mile limit turned them over to the protection of the government armed trawler Bizkaya.

McLeod of Chapleau in defending Simon Jackpine, 45, a Sultan Indian arraigned here on a charge of illegally killing a cow moose. The charge was dismissed.

It was stated in court by defence counsel Ontario had passed an act prohibiting Indians from hunting and trapping as permitted under the Dominion Indian Act. Jackpine said he lived in the bush, hunting and trapping for a living. The Department of Indian Affairs gave him $6 a month to provide for his wife and two children, he said.

McLeod said it was unfair tourists could come into the country and remove a head on payment of a license, leaving the carcass to rot, while Indians are forbidden to kill.

First Of Coronation Liners Steams Off

Montreal, April 22. (C.P.)

A BLAZE with ribbons and streamers the Duchess of York—first liner to sail from Montreal for the Coronation ceremonies in London next month—swung away from her pier to-day. A warm sun beamed good will after a day of heavy snow and rain.

Shortly after the Duchess started down the St. Lawrence a second liner, the Andania, joined her in the stream with a full quota of Coronation passengers. Her sister ship the Alaunia was delayed until to-morrow by heavy freight loadings.

Eighteen Cities Over Canada Adopt Daylight Saving Time

BENEFIT 2,000,000

TORONTO, April 23 (C.P.). — More than 2,000,000 Canadians in 18 cities—17 in Eastern Canada and one in the West—will enjoy the reputed benefits of daylight Saving time this summer, an hour's additional sunshine, and prospects today were that Winnipeg would fall into line, adding 200,000 persons to the list.

The Western city, Regina, "beat the gun" by advancing its clocks one hour on April 18. Most of the other centres, nine in Ontario, five in Quebec and three Maritime communities, will go on "fast" time on Saturday midnight, April 24. They will revert to standard time on September 25, while Regina returns to mountain standard time on October 3.

Ten cities will advance their timepieces on Saturday night. They are: Montreal, Quebec, Levis, Que., Sherbrooke, Que., Halifax, St. Catharines, Ont., Toronto, Oshawa, Niagara Falls, Ont., and Kingston, Ont. Dates have not been fixed at Brockville, but it was expected daylight time would prevail during July and August.

Winnipeg City Council has given second reading to a by-law implementing advanced time, a controversial subject in that Mid-West centre for years. Third reading was delayed until next Tuesday when various civic delegations will make representations for and against the proposal.

Other centres to adopt daylight time are: Hamilton May 1-September 25, Peterborough May 29-September 6, Sudbury June 6-September 26, Guelph May 9-September 9, Chicoutimi, Que., May 2-September 25, Moncton, N.B., June 13-September 26, St. John May 22-September 25.

ABOUT OLD CARS

Magistrate Gives Youth Two Days To Get Rid of One.

LONDON, Ont., April 23 (CP) — Magistrate Menzies in court today expressed his opinion of old cars that sell for about $20 each.

"Most of them are unfit to be on the highways," said the Magistrate. "They should not be allowed on the streets without insurance."

In expressing his opinion, the Magistrate instructed John Ward, 22, to get rid of his car before Saturday, when he will appear in court on a charge of driving without a license.

Ward told the Magistrate that the car had cost $30.

EDWARD PEEVED OVER NEW BOOK

Objects To Chapters In "Coronation Commentary"—Asks Withdrawal, Apology

LONDON, April 23 (AP). — The Duke of Windsor's London attorney, A. G. Allen, had requested the withdrawal of the book "Coronation Commentary," by Geoffrey Dennis, because of matter in it to which exception was taken.

The paper said the request was made to the publishers, William Heinnemann, Ltd., who were asked also to publish an apology.

The book was published April 12 and has had a wide sale in England.

(Geoffrey Dennis is editor and chief of documents services of the League of Nations Secretariat, Geneva, and author of a number of books).

Exception was taken by the former King's attorney, the Daily Mail reported, to material contained in a chapter entitled "Edward the Eighth" and another headed "Abdication."

Fire Strikes, Is Doused, Blazes Again, Markham Family Flee Twice Into Night

Markham, Ont., April 23. (CP).

MR. and Mrs. James Maynard and their three children were forced to flee from their farm home twice during the night as fire which broke out for the second time practically destroyed the building north of this community 13 miles northeast of Toronto.

Eleanor, aged four, youngest of the children, awoke and found the bedroom filled with smoke. He aroused the rest of the family and they made their way to safety while a call was put in for the Markham fire brigade.

After an hour's work the fire was extinguished with damage confined to the front of the house. The family went back to bed and the firemen returned to Markham.

Three hours later a neighbor awoke to see the reflection of flames from the Maynard home. She put in the second call of the night to the Markham brigade. By the time firemen arrived the Maynard family had once more made a hasty exit from the blazing home.

Only U.A.W. Men Allowed To Ballot On Firm Offer That Bars C.I.O. Affiliation

3,700 Men and Women Workers Go Back To Jobs At 7 a.m. Monday After Walk-out Lasting Sixteen Days Hepburn Has No Comment.

MANY OUT OF TOWN, UNION OFFICIALS GIVE REASON ONLY 2,241 OF 3,700 WORKERS VOTED.

OSHAWA, Ont., April 23. (CP). — General Motors employees to-day voted 2,205 to 36 to return to work Monday, thus ending the 16-day strike which had tied up the vast automobile plant.

Charles Millard, president of the Oshawa union, announced acceptance of settlement to a cheering crowd of strikers who had balloted in the armories here after terms were disclosed to them.

The agreement provides no affiliation with the John L. Lewis Committee for Industrial Organization, but "shall run concurrently with the agreement between the United Automobile Workers of America (C.I.O. affiliate) and General Motors Corporation in the United States," said J. L. Cohen, union counsel.

The agreement provides a five-day, 44-hour week, employees to work nine hours a day for the first four days of the week and eight hours on Fridays. Provision was made for a minimum wage, but the amount was not determined.

Time and a half will be granted for overtime except to certain employees in the maintenance and service departments and arrangements for these will be made at a later date.

A shop committee of nine will be elected by all employees of the company, whether or not they are members of the Oshawa local of the U.A.W.A. This committee will act as a bargaining and grievance committee to represent the employees in disputes that might occur with the management.

Signing Postponed.

The formal agreement will be signed later this afternoon in the office of Premier Mitchell Hepburn at Toronto. Time of signing was originally set for two o'clock, but was postponed for an hour.

Harry Carmichael, vice-president and general manager of General Motors, and James Highfield, Oshawa plant manager, will sign for the company.

Before they were allowed to cast their ballots, G.M. employees were required to show their U.A.W.A. membership buttons. The union claimed 98 per cent. enrollment in their ranks.

While the voting was done by union members only, it was learned reliably the signing of peace terms with the company will be on behalf of all employees, union or non-union.

While the voting was done by union members the agreement called for its being signed by union employees "who signed on behalf of themselves, representing the employees of the company who are members of the local union."

Only 2,241 of the 3,700 employees affected cast their ballots, but union leaders accounted for the discrepancy by explaining a number of employees live outside Oshawa and did not come to the city to vote.

Hepburn Mum.

TORONTO, April 23 (CP).—Premier Mitchell Hepburn made no comment today on confirmation by the Oshawa strikers of the settlement drafted at a conference in his office yesterday. In contrast to numerous press conferences each day of late last week, the Premier passed

DUCE AGREEABLE

Italian Dictator And Chancellor Schuschnigg Busy Drafting Settlement

VENICE, April 23.—(AP)—Formation of a coalition government in Austria, with Nazis taking part, was forecast to-day by the authoritative Giornale D'Italia at the conclusion of a conference between Premier Mussolini and Chancellor Kurt Von Schuschnigg of Austria.

The paper's editor, Virginio Gayda, often the mouthpiece of Mussolini, said Italy approved of such a government. The announcement followed an official communique on the conference which said Mussolini and Von Schuschnigg had agreed Germany should participate in any settlement of problems affecting countries in the Danubian Basin, which includes Austria.

"Nazis in Austria," said Gayda, "will soon be called upon to share responsibility with the (Von Schuschnigg's) Fatherland front, the first step for their direct participation in the Austrian Government.

"We believe the nomination of a National Socialist (Nazi) official for the Fatherland front is imminent. He, together with Von Schuschnigg and the secretary of the Front, Zernatt, will negotiate for settlement of all problems existing between the two national movements." Stockdale Man Held Ringleader In Attempt To Rob Recluse—Pal Gets Year

BELLEVILLE, April 23 (C.P.). — John Osterhout, Stockdale, pleaded guilty to-day to two charges of "conspiracy to rob" and "attempted robbery" in connection with an incident at the home of Charles Manahan near Foxboro, was sentenced to Kingston Penitentiary for two years. Albert Sine, Wallbridge, who pleaded guilty in a previous court, was sentenced to one year in the Ontario Reformatory, and an indeterminate term of two years less one day.

Chafacter evidence was given for Sine, but Magistrate Butler declared Osterhout was the ringleader and that Sine was heading for a life of crime, and a shorter sentence might be a deterrent. Osterhout was on suspended sentence at the time of his arrest.

The two attempted to rob an aged recluse at his home, but were prevented by police, who were in ambush about the home.

BRITISH COMMONS BATTLES THROUGH 20-HOUR SESSION

Bargain Over Relief For Distressed Areas Starts It—Opposition Fights Closure

ONE MEMBER SUSPENDED

By George Hambleton
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, April 23.—(CP Cable)—The House of Commons adjourned at 11.38 a.m. today after sitting for 20 hours and 53 minutes.

As Big Ben boomed 11 this morning yesterday in Parliament became today, Friday's sitting, with its private members' bills for consideration, automatically was wiped out. The bill to amend the divorce law was among them.

Thus weary members were rewarded for their arduous night of debate with a long week-end. Parliamentary rules decree that if the House sits beyond 11 a.m. after an all-night sitting the next session shall be regarded as having been begun. Thus, once the House is adjourned, work for the day is over. The next sitting will be on Monday.

The all-night battle arose over a bargain between the government and the opposition. The government agreed there would be no late sitting Monday if the opposition agreed to pass the remaining clauses of the Distressed Areas Bill Thursday night. But no hour of Thursday night was specified. There lay the rub.

Closure Starts Fireworks.

All went fairly smoothly until 2 a.m. Then, after listening to four hours of obstruction speeches, the government moved closure. The opposition bitterly denounced it as a gag. Closure carried. Almost immediately the government moved closure again. This time it was on another clause.

The opposition's anger centred on Sir Dennis Herbert who, as chair-

Bible's Mystic Number 'Seven' Laid To Lack Of Sixes, Eights

BREACH OF RULE

PHILADELPHIA, April 23.—(AP)—The reason why the number "seven" is the "mystic number" of the Bible was explained today at the annual meeting of the American Philosophical Society.

It has been called the "mystic number" because it occurs so often in the books of Holy Writ.

The reason is, occurs so often, Dr. Frank Benford, of the General Electric Company reported is that it is apparently used in a number of places where the numbers "six" or "eight" actually should appear.

Dr. Benford figured it out by using the law of anomalous numbers," which says that the number "one" should appear most frequently in any set of figures or written reference to numbers. The number "two" should be second most frequent, according to the rule, the number "three" the third most frequent and so on up to the number "nine."

But Dr. Benford found the rule did not apply to the Bible. "Seven" was most frequent instead of "one." This was puzzling until it was noted that there were enough "sixes" and "eights" missing to establish the proper ratio.

Ignore C.I.O. New Strike Peace Offer

Premier Smiles At End Of Four-Hour Session Ending In "Complete Agreement"

DECISION WITH MEN

Former Proposal 5-7 Cent Raise, 44-Hour Week, Other Concessions Included

TORONTO, April 23 (C.P.). — Final decision on settlement proposals that would end the General Motors strike at Oshawa rested today on the 3,700 strikers themselves.

A mass meeting was scheduled at which they will vote on the draft settlement reached late yesterday at Queen's Park. At the peace conference were Premier Mitchell Hepburn and representatives of the company and strikers.

The Premier announced no details of the terms, but said "a complete agreement" was reached.

(The Toronto Globe and Mail today said the terms are reported to conform in practically every detail with the Premier's previous proposals on behalf of the company. In these provision was made for wage increases of five and seven cents an hour, 44-hour week, time-and-a-half for overtime, and other concessions.

On the question of union recognition The Globe and Mail said the reported terms are: "The company agrees to enter into a contract with representatives of its employees, without any mention of the U.A.W.A. or the C.I.O.")

If the workers approve the terms it is expected they will return to work on Monday. The strike began on April 8.

Four Hour Session.

The Premier's announcement came at the end of a four-hour conference in his office. Negotiations proceeded smoothly, in contrast to two previous sessions at which the conference suddenly collapsed.

Preliminary arrangements were made the day before between the Premier and H. J. Carmichael, vice-president and general manager of the company, and J. L. Cohen, counsel for the Oshawa Local of the United Automobile Workers of America.

Status of the negotiators was clearly defined beforehand. Mr. Carmichael and J. B. Highfield, plant superintendent, represented General Motors of Canada. Mr. Cohen and Millard, who is presi-

WHEAT POOL HEAD BROUILLETTE DIES

Saskatchewan Pioneer In Movement Advocated 100 P.C. Compulsory Plan

C. Brouillette, 51, president of the Saskatchewan wheat pool since 1931 died in hospital here last night. Mr. Brouillette, whose home is in Regina, had been ill for some time and recently came here for medical treatment.

Pioneer of the pool movement and advocate of the 100 per cent. compulsory pool and wheat board, Mr. Brouillette worked hand in hand with A. J. McPhail, president of the Saskatchewan wheat pool from its inception in 1924 to McPhail's death in October, 1931.

Mr. McPhail was the Saskatchewan pool's first president and Mr. Brouillette its first vice-president. On Mr. McPhail's death, Mr. Brouillette succeeded him in the presidency.

During Mr. Brouillette's vice-presidency, the Saskatchewan pool developed into an organization handling in excess of 50 per cent of the total Saskatchewan crop. He took over the presidency in the difficult years that followed the start of the depression and interlocking pool and federal government stabilization operations.

Mr. Brouillette was instrumental in bringing Aaron Sapiro, United States lawyer, to Saskatchewan to direct organization of the pool. In 1935 he was named to the Canadian wheat board set up by the government of Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett.

Winter In Quebec Aids Syrup Harvest

Sherbrooke, Que., April 23. (CP) HEAVY snowstorms in Quebec's eastern townships yesterday brought maple sugar producers prospects for a harvest above average.

Although the sugar season was later than usual in this district, already about two pounds of sugar per tree—average production—has been manufactured. Beauce County has been the leading producer.

Winter weather, predicted for the next few days, is expected to bring profitable results to the sugar-makers.

LAPOINTE DEFENDS CANADA'S POLICY NATIONAL DEFENCE

Outlay In 1936 Only $1.77 Per Capita To $2.18 In Denmark Next Lowest Of 13 Nations

BANQUET TO COTE

QUEBEC, April 23 (CP) — Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Dominion Minister of Justice, defended Canada's national defence policy in a speech here last night. Mr. Lapointe addressing a banquet tendered P. E. Cote, elected to the House of Commons for Bonaventure in a recent by-election, said Canada's percapita defence expenditure last year was $1.77 compared to $2.18 for Denmark the next lowest in a list of 13 countries.

Explaining military credits voted during the last session, Mr. Lapointe declared the credits have as an object the defence of Canada. "They are necessary for the defence of the country and I would not have been a party to any other policy," he said.

"The doctrine of Canada's participation in European wars would split our country into irreconcilable factions," said the Minister of Justice, "but when it concerns the defence of the country, the safeguarding of our factories, our exports, our grain elevators, I believe everybody should be united.

"I will go even further and say that this question is not only a truly national policy, but a nationalistic one, in that it is a question of defending Canada. The best friends of this Dominion are those who are ready to make sacrifices to defend it.

Lowest In World.

"Canada has been paying less than any other country for her protection," declared Mr. Lapointe. "I repeat that our policy now in this connection is a Canadian policy for the defence of our country. This is the policy we proposed at the Imperial Conference.

"I have never in my long career failed my province," said the Minister, "and I will not fail in this circumstance."

Mr. Lapointe delivered an attack on Communism.

"Again I engage myself to defend my province and country against Communism and Fascism," he said. "Our Canadian governmental system is based on the liberty of citizens and on representative government. Communism and Fascism are based on force. Canada will never accept the doctrine of Communism because it is a weed which can never take growth in our national soil."

The Royal Road To The Coronation

JUST as many an upper-class Englishman regards racing and horses as part of his recreational life, so does the present King, who, though no sporting page or Sunday supplement will ever carry pictures of him riding in a point-to-point race or topping the timbers in a steeplechase, inherits an interest in good horses from his father. Shortly after he ascended the throne it was indicated that the stables which Lord Derby had taken over following the death of George V, would again receive the attention of the crown. Last fall's racing season saw racing thoroughbreds wearing the royal colors.

But his majesty is also a man who enjoys the feel of a good horse under him, and though the majority of his outings on horseback are confined to gallops along the bridle path, we show him here at a much more strenuous exercise. It takes nerve and stamina and courage as well as good horsemanship to swing a polo mallet aboard one of the swift ponies trained to the sport, and indicative of the King's enjoyment and ability in the saddle is this picture of him at the hard-riding game.

At the left he is shown, with the Duke of Gloucester in the background, as they attended an Ascot racing meet together. King George V was usually to be found in the royal box at the Derby, or at Aintree when the Grand National was being run, and if early indications are correct his son will not be the one to neglect these gatherings, which have become in the minds of hundreds of thousands of Englishmen, national institutions.

REBEL GUNS FAIL TO HALT

Trawler Runs for Cover.

Basque coastal gunners sighted the insurgent warships as the merchant fleet approached the coast and tried to pick them off with a shower of shells. The insurgent trawler Galerna darted between the cargo boats, seeking cover.

The British merchant ships moved apart, leaving the Galerna in open water. Then the trawler withdrew under hot Basque artillery fire.

Adding to the joy of the occasion was news from the Governor-General of the Province of Asturias to the west a fourth food ship had run the blockade and docked with a cargo of food at Gijon.

The Welsh steamer Mary Llewellyn, under the command of bluff Captain "Potato" Jones, arrived at Gijon during the morning.

"Potato" Jones is so called to distinguish him from his colleague, Captain Owen "Corncob" Jones, who commanded the MacGregor during the night voyage from St. Jean de Luz, where he and the other food ship skippers had been forced to flee from earlier attacks of the insurgent fleet.

President Juan Antonio Aguirre of the autonomous Basque state sent a representative to the docks to extend an official welcome to the food fleet when he heard it had sailed into the mouth of the River Nervion, six miles away.

It was shortly after dawn the three ships steamed past the small city of Portugalete at the mouth of the river. They had sailed on the tide from St. Jean de Luz two hours before midnight.

"Social Credit My Duty, Not Talking For Job"--Resign Only If Beaten In House

OKOTOKS, Alta., April 23 (CP)—On a two-day tour of his home constituency, Okotoks-High River, Premier Aberhart made it plain, as he did at the recent session of the Alberta legislature, he would not resign on demands of Social Credit insurgents.

"I am not going to tender my resignation to any little group in any hotel room," he declared at a meeting here yesterday.

(Insurgent Social Crediters during the legislative session in Edmonton held private meetings in a hotel room where they mapped their campaign of attack on the government.)

"I am not out her talking for a job," Mr. Aberhart declared. "I went into Social Credit because I thought it my duty. I am going to stay with it until I am kicked out—but I will have to be kicked out first."

The premier said he would resign only if defeated on the floor of the legislature. He declared the government is proceeding toward Social Credit "as fast as we can."

FOR THE DEFENCE GABLE TO TESTIFY

Lawyers Claim Woman Not Guilty Of Fraud As Actor Never Deceived

LOS ANGELES, April 23 (AP)—Clark Gable, having finished his testimony as a United States government witness, waited today to be called for the defence in the trial of Mrs. Violet Wells Norton, of Winnipeg, who termed her daughter Gable's "love child."

Mrs. Norton is charged with mail fraud and conspiracy.

The government alleges she mailed letters to Gable and other people, asking he contribute to the support of pretty 18-year-old Gwendoline.

Gable has appeared twice for the government. He said the first time he was not Gwendoline's father and never had seen her mother.

Later, he identified salary cheques paid him by a Portland, Ore., lumber company in 1923, the year Mrs. Norton's letters state he was in England making love to her as "Frank Billings."

Her attorneys said they would recall Gable to show he never was deceived by her representations, and never paid her any money. Hence Mrs. Norton could not be guilty of fraud.

On trial with her is Jack L. Smith, a private detective. A third man, Frank Keenan, Whittier, also was named in the indictment.

Ralph Wheelwright, a studio publicity executive, testified Smith mentioned to him establishment of a $150,000 trust fund for Gwendoline.

"He wanted to make a deal to act as go-between for the studio and Clark to Mrs. Norton and her attorney," said the witness. "I told him it was a preposterous frameup. I said it was a shakedown."

Gwendoline testified Frank Keenan paid her way to Hollywood early this year.

17 - Year - Old Girl Accuser Asserts She "Doesn't Like Fat Blond Men"

LOS ANGELES, April 23 (AP).—John W. Hunt, wealthy white follower of the negro, Father Divine, was at liberty today on $25,000 bond, charged with violating the Mann Act, and his pretty 17-year-old girl accuser was in seclusion after asserting "I don't like fat blond men."

"I don't love Hunt—not the way a girl loves a man," said Delight Jewett, whom the United States Government charges was transported by Hunt to California for immoral purposes, the two registering at hotels as "Jesus the Christ" and "Virgin Mary."

Hunt, indicted yesterday, will be arraigned Monday.

Miss Jewett appeared for two hours before the Federal Grand Jury Wednesday to testify that Hunt represented to her she was to bring "a new Messiah into the world."

The girl's father, Norman Lee Jewett of Denver, also testified. He found his daughter in Father Divine's New York "heaven" after an extensive search.

"I hated to have to tell anybody that story," said the High School girl.

"I had heard so much preaching and all that, that I really believed Father Divine was God and that Hunt was everything he said he was."

Unwitting Act Breaks Escape Attempt Of Louis Riel, Rebel

TOOK RIEL'S HORSE

RED DEER, Alta. April 23 (CP)—Thomas H. Ralston's unwitting action may have prevented escape of Louis Riel, rebel leader, after his capture at the end of the Northwest Rebellion in 1885, he revealed on a visit here.

Mr. Ralston, born 75 years ago at Pugwash Harbor, N.S., told of the incident during his 41 days' service with forces fighting the rebels. Member of a party sent to Batoche for supplies, he came upon a pony tethered to a tree and commandeered it. Later he learned that it belonged to Riel and had been carefully concealed in the thicket by his followers to facilitate his escape.

"Food was scarce," said Mr. Ralston. "Hard tack, American salt pork, with an occasional bear steak was the usual fare."

Ralston was one in a party of volunteers sent to break through Indian lines to Batoche for supplies. They were accompanied by part of the Toronto Cavalry and had a hard time negotiating the dangerous journey, pulling heavy wagons over alkali and muskeg.

Within three miles of Batoche they camped for the night. Ralston was scouting about the camp when he found and took possession of the pony.

Entering Batoche the following morning they found General Middleton and his recruits gone, having taken the village a few days previously. They were informed Riel had been caught and it was revealed the mount which Ralston had found was Riel's pony with which he had hoped to escape.

Borden Misses First Red-Patch Re-union

OTTAWA, April 23 (CP)—For the first time in many years, Sir Robert Borden, Canada's war-time premier was unable, owing to doctor's orders, to attend the annual re-union last night of the Ottawa Red Chevron's commemorating the second battle of Ypres. Sir Robert sent a message which conveyed his warm greetings to all "his boys."

Sir Archibald Macdonnell, wartime commander of the famous Red-Patch Division of the Canadian Corps, expressed "an old man's pride in the boys he once commanded." Despite ill-health and his statement that he was "glad to have seen all the boys before I cross over," Sir Archibald was cheered to the echoes to the song "Old Soldiers Never Die."

NON-UNION GANGS UNLOAD STEAMER

Extra Police Are On Hand At Sarnia In Case Of Trouble With Pickets

SARNIA, Ont., April 23 (C.P.)—Unloading of the flour-laden steamer Hamonic proceeded at Point Edward to-day with non-union labor, despite picketing by striking longshoremen.

Canada Steamship Line officials circumvented the efforts of strikers to prevent unloading of the vessel by ordering the Hamonic to the City Dock where more than 200 non-union men were taken aboard and transported to Point Edward where they started unloading operations.

Six additional Provincial Police arrived here during the night to aid Point Edward police in preventing further disorder. Canadian National Railway Police were also augmented to guard railway property in the strike zone.

Apprehension over the possibility of new violence was allayed by the arrival of outside police. About 400 pickets were on duty.

Seven men were slightly hurt on Tuesday when they attempted to run the gauntlet of pickets. Stones were thrown through windows and windshields of automobiles.

More than $1,000,000 worth of American medicine was received in Colombia in the last year.

FLUSH KIDNEYS STOP GETTING UP NIGHTS

WHEN pain over kidneys or bladder irregularities keep you getting up at night; if you feel nervous, despondent, heed the warning. Read what Mrs. T. A. Berney of 905 Wellington St., W., Toronto, Ont., said: "My kidneys would be irregular in action and the too frequent passage of the urine was very annoying, but Dr. Pierce's Anurie Tablets gave me great relief. In fact, 'Anurie' is the only thing I ever used that would relieve these symptoms." Ask any neighborhood druggist now. Consult Dr. Pierce's Clinic, Buffalo, N. Y., for free medical advice.

EDMONTON TO SEA BY BOAT PLANNED

Trio To Travel 10,000 Miles Over Inland Waterways To Atlantic

EDMONTON, April 23— (CP) — A boat trip of 10,000 miles over inland waterways from Edmonton to the Atlantic is planned by three Edmonton men, J. Peters, A. Glaser and Mr. Peters' son, Fred, this spring.

"We will start down the Saskatchewan river to Winnipeg on the first leg of the journey as soon after the ice moves out as possible," said Mr. Peters, who will be captain of the expedition.

Mr. Glaser will act as first mate and Fred Peters, who is 20, will be the camera man and biographer.

Sturdily built and covered with three-ply wood, the boat is nearing completion here. It is 21 feet from bow to stern and four feet across the beam. It is flat-bottomed with shallow draft to facilitate travelling down rapids and thus avoiding portaging.

Oars will be used for downriver travel and a motor for the lakes and upriver going. "We expect to shoot most of the rapids on the way, including the Seven Sisters Falls near Winnipeg," Mr. Peters said.

From Winnipeg the party will return to Lake Winnipeg and then push up Winnipeg River to Lake of the Woods; thence by Rainy River and the Great Lakes—St. Lawrence waterway to the Atlantic.

Nazi Germany Would Finish All European Press Freedom

Defended Only By Reactionaries Of a Past Epoch Says Berlin Special

MOVE FOR PEACE

BERLIN, April 23.—(AP)— A campaign to abolish European newspaper freedom as a check to "the international press terror" was launched yesterday by Germany's controlled press, under direction of Wilhelm Weiss, president of the National Journalists' Association.

In a special edition of the newspaper "12 Uhr Blatt" which published contributions from 20 European editors, Weiss declared "the real revolutionaries of European press reform no longer adhere to the principle of freedom of the press. This freedom is in reality, defended only by reactionaries of a past epoch."

"Nazi Germany has made it impossible for the German press to slander foreign nations or incite their leaders," declared the newspaper without mentioning specific incidents."

"Germany twice protested remarks of the Mayor of New York City, Fiorello La Guardia, widely quoted in newspapers and deemed derogatory by the Nazis to Chancellor Hitler. LaGuardia urged a Chamber of Horrors at the New York World's Fair to include a figure of the "brown-shirted fanatic who is menacing the peace of Europe."

(More recently, references in the British press to an "Italian defeat" in the Spanish Civil War were the subject of an official protest by the Italian Government.)

In an introductory editorial the newspaper, edited by Wilhelm Fanderl, a Nazi Party member, quoted a "noted German authority," believed in newspaper circles to be Paul Joseph Goebbels, Minister of Press and Propaganda, as having complained about an anti-German campaign abroad.

Such attacks should be opposed with good-will, "but lacking this good-will, with all the means of the power of a modern state, is even better," he was quoted as saying.

The article was captioned, "How Can the European Press Serve Peace?"

Must Start Some Place

Young men attending universities in United States decided upon a peace demonstration, and it takes the form of a strike in some cases. The extent of the strike is limited because it means the students will leave their class rooms at 11 in the morning, but they will return.

Last year 500,000 participated in this demonstration, and this year the number will be a million in universities and high schools.

Probably a good many people will look upon it as rather foolish and they may also say there will be nothing gained by such nonsense.

But there is another way to look at it. It is high time some person or a number of persons started demonstrating for peace because there are such an array of people the world over carrying on an eternal demonstration in the interests of war, of hatred, of suspicion, of plotting and of hell in general.

So we are inclined to approve of this youth movement. The thing may spread to other countries where it is badly needed.

Are We Progressing?

Dr. Pitirim A. Sorokin, chairman of the Department of Sociology at Harvard, has been analyzing history, and his conclusion is that the first quarter of the 20th century was "the bloodiest period in all history."

That may come as a surprise as we have been accustomed to thinking we were actually making some sort of advance. We have looked upon the ancients as folk who did nothing else but fight; we may have recalled that many of the great estates in the Old Country had their foundation in the blunt fact that some set of men went out and forcibly took possession of them. And it may be that because such things are not done today we have come to the conclusion that we have a better basis for adjusting such matters, and therefore progress is being made.

But Dr. Sorokin, after completing his study claims this:

Analysis of 902 wars and 1,615 internal disturbances during the past 2,500 years shows that for the 20th century the war index reaches a total eight times greater than all of the preceding centuries.

A great many of the nations of the world claim they are highly civilized; they also claim that culture and science and learning has progressed—and it has. Nations will point also to the strides of invention, and to the number of social and reform laws which have been passed. If they get around to it they will also launch the claim they are Christian nations.

And yet a survey of battles and upheavals of all times shows the first quarter of this enlightened century to have been the bloodiest and the cruelest of all time.

For the Little Folk

The Kiwanis Club present a happy idea in undertaking to finance the construction of a modern and sanitary wading pool for the little folk in the south end of the city at King Edward Park. The plans call for a pool 40 x 40 feet, varying in depth from six inches to one foot and in the equipment will be a spray or shower fountain.

The place will be essentially for the little folk who in warm weather will have a place to congregate without getting into danger, and it is a kindly thought which has prompted the Kiwanians to consider the children and their happiness.

Observing Sunday

Ald Percy Quinn of Toronto has a motion before the City Council, the purpose of which is to force the issue of Sunday baseball to a vote of the citizens of that city, although it is a fact that the citizens of Toronto have no power to say by vote or otherwise whether baseball shall or shall not be played there on Sunday. It is quite likely a good many would vote in favor of the change, but even so it is outside the scope of municipal law.

The Examiner is not in favor of too many blue laws in this country, but before going any further regarding the observance of Sunday it might be well to stop and do a little thinking to see if our present tendency has done much for us. Our own view is that it has not.

We believe Sunday is a day separate and apart from the others in the week. Essentially it is a day for rest, a time when people cease work and gather together to worship Almighty God. Old-fashioned you say? Admittedly so, and so are rest, sleep, eating and many other things. A great deal of the increased activity in which we participate on Sunday has taken away the idea of rest and of worship, and in its place has come movement and excitement.

People in Toronto who are anxious to have ball games on Sunday are not interested primarily in the development of sport: They would have a good attendance and it would aid in making money, and making money is at the bottom of a good deal of the increased activity on Sunday.

It is also a fact that a great number of people who go to church regularly cause others to work on Sunday. There are scores of them who want to do a little driving on Sunday afternoon and before starting they go and buy gas. They could just as well have attended to that on Saturday, but they do not do it. There are many more of the same class of people who do their shopping late Saturday night and then wonder why it is the clerks who wait on them are not out for service on Sunday morning. These people who would resent any open attack on the Sabbath and its observance are actually making such an attack themselves.

We do not believe that as individuals or communities we have anything to gain by trying to crack Sunday liberties to a more wide open condition.

Quite Different

An order has been placed for 50 first-class coaches for the use of C.N.R. main line trains and they will be made in Montreal. Room for 64 passengers in these coaches; everything the newest and strongest. Moreover they will be air-conditioned.

Air-conditioned, as we understand it, means there will be no need for opening the train windows to get a little breeze or air on a warm day. One can just sit back and the air will all be attended to without tinkering with the windows.

Probably people get used to travelling that way, and in time there will come a generation which never knew of anything else. But it is a vast change from things as they used to be. Always there used to be something in the nature of a venture in riding on a train. The first thing was to get a seat next the window and if the weather permitted then the next thing was to get the window up so the head could be stuck out. That of course gave opportunity to get a cinder in the eye. Perhaps two of them.

The open train window also allowed freedom in disposing of banana peelings and orange skins, and one could also finally pop the box out the window in which the lunch had been packed. People always had lunches on the train. Perhaps the new method is delightful, but of course it is a far cry from what riding on a train used to be like.

Will Not Stay Soaked

Taxation in Britain is at new heights and it has been driven there by expenditures on rearmament. The government has increased the income tax rate, and it has adopted the policy of taking a great portion of what it terms excess profits from industrialists. That has been British policy before—let the industrialists make money and then take it away from them.

In its new form and extent a good many observers are commenting that the size of the tax is apt to make its collection more difficult. They say one of two things is likely to happen: (1) the tax will be paid and then passed along to the consumer in higher prices, or (2) there will be efforts made to dissipate excess profits so they will not appear in the records.

Neither of these processes is easy to detect. The passing of excessive taxation of the individual or company on to the people is often done and it is difficult to trace and more difficult to stop. The payment of a heavy tax is not always done with patriotic fervor; more frequently it is accompanied by the decision to proceed at once with the serious business of taking the amount out of other people who are powerless to resist it and who cannot pass it along to others.

It is a pleasant theory with some people and can be stated in the popular phrase "Soak the rich." The one loophole is that they will not stay soaked.

A Two-Way Need

Employees of General Motors at Oshawa went to collect the pay which they had earned prior to the strike. The report from that city said a good many of the men were a trifle fearful lest they should also be presented with slips telling them their services were no longer required. There were no such slips handed out and we consider it was good business to have things done that way. It produces a little bit of toleration and reasonableness and such things are badly needed in any situation such as Oshawa is facing.

There is something more to it: General Motors could not very well tell the men their services were no longer needed, because their services are needed, and they have been needed since the day the strike started.

The men went to get money which was due them for work performed, and they would need it. We dare say they would be glad to get it.

So there is that two-way need. General Motors needs the working power and the skill of its employees—and they are still in that class—and the employees need the money which comes as a result of their work. And that two-way need is the force which will eventually bring them together.

Recent developments may tender to convince some of those American organizers that C.I.O. really means Canada Is Out.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Several editions of the New York Times have been confiscated by the Nazi police. Next thing we know those fellows will be seizing copies of The Examiner.

As a rule we do not become disturbed about changes in time tables, but when we read that a train which leaves for Toronto at 5.15 in the morning will now depart at 4.45 we find no reason for joy.

Canada's military contingent to the coronation is so top-heavy with higher rank officers that it promises to be quite a problem to keep the steamer on an even keel.

Florida man has a collection of over 2000 bricks which he is keeping as a souvenir. It would be interesting to know just how and where these were thrown at him.

"The rich are soaked here as well as in Britain", says a news heading. Perhaps so; anyway anything we might have to say on that point would be merely hearsay.

A Berlin art dealer says that Hitler has exquisite taste which at least serves to show that the art dealer is a good business man and might also have done well in the field of diplomacy.

Troops have been called out in Maine to deal with a strike situation precipitated by the C.I.O. Whatever else may be said of the Lewis agents they can never be accused of being doves of peace.

The Examiner's weather man is on his way to the coronation and with the rain and cold that has been handed out this week he can scarcely be blamed for wanting to disappear from his usual haunts for a while.

Mrs. Vincent Massey is planning a sherry party for the Canadian delegation to the Coronation and that suggests an interesting resolution on the agenda of the next meeting of the Ontario Temperance Federation.

When it comes to direct action in dealing with problems Russia is entitled to favorable mention. Thus the Soviet has dealt with the nuisance of old automobiles by simply banning rattle-trap machines from Moscow streets.

A Winnipeg youth who voted in the name of his father at a municipal by-election has been remanded for sentence. Nowadays it is difficult to get young men to vote even in their own names.

Whitby has started a drive to collect its tax arrears thereby refuting the rumor that the town expected to get out of the red through its share of the Oshawa money that is being spent in the beverage rooms these days.

A story from Ottawa says there are only four privates in Canada's military contingent to the Coronation and it would be still more interesting if it explained how they happened to be included.

A mass meeting in Toronto has condemned the Heburn government's attitude in regard to the Oshawa strike which suggests the thought that the only thing easier than condemning a government is asking it to spend money.

Uncle Sam expects a deficit of $418,000,000 at the end of the next fiscal year and the folk in Maine and Vermont will probably hasten to point out that they cannot be blamed; they did not vote for Roosevelt.

At least the Oshawa strike must be speeding up the sale of letter paper among the folk who seize upon such a situation as a legitimate reason for directing a letter to their favorite newspaper.

CAREFUL

(By A. R. K.)

¶ When it comes round to merry spring, I have to do some crazy thing, it's always been the same; for strange chores come this time of year, that strike me as uncommon queer, they're full of ache and pain.

¶ This stove pipe business beats them all, because I did them just last fall, they seem to have a flaw; and they're stuffed up with soot I guess, and that stuff makes a nasty mess, and they don't seem to draw.

¶ My tactics never seem to change, when I stand on the kitchen range, and pull the pipes apart; they all come tumbling down on me, and so much dirt that I can't see, I'm not so very smart.

¶ I take them out behind my shack, and knock out piles of winter's black, I paint them so they shine; and I feel rather proud just then, and walk with other clever men, for they are looking fine.

¶ But when I try to put them up, they wiggle like some playful pup, and they won't stay in straight; I take great chunks from out my thumb, before I get the job half done, and chant my hymn of hate.

¶ When I am doing that job each time, I stretched my gizzard and my spine and pain is there to stay; I shut the doors and windows though, so neighbors as they come and go—can't hear the words I say.

Relief Costing More Than Wars

(From Ottawa Journal)

PRESIDENT Roosevelt yesterday asked the United States Congress for $1,300,000,000 for relief in the year beginning July 1. It brought the total of United States expenditures on direct relief and works projects to the staggering total of $10,307,000,000. This in six years.

Between 1775 and 1815 the United States fought five wars—the Revolution, a war with Mexico, a war with England (1812) over the freedom of the seas, the great Civil War, the war with Spain. Their total cost—with debts growing out of them and accumulated interest—was $17,000,000,000.

Six years of depression have cost $2,907,000,000 more than all these wars.

Indeed, United States relief expenditures, as compiled by David Lawrence's United States News, seem all but incredible. Figures and comparisons show—

That one month of fighting unemployment at current rates of spending for public works and relief is equal to the cost of the Revolutionary War and the War of 1812 thrown in for good measure.

That one relief agency alone spends in one month almost as many dollars as were spent to fight the whole war with Mexico.

That the Spanish-American War, including post-war expenses, cost little more than the Government has spent for CCC camps for American youths in five years of depression.

That one out of every six families in the United States is found to have been aided directly by the money the Government has paid out for relief.

Not all of this money, of course, has been lost. Billions of it has gone in direct relief, for the "dole," but other billions went for what is known as "pump priming." On their way around the circle these dollars left behind them highways and buildings and dams and housing projects and improved forests which can be of value to the nation. Jobs were found for millions and much of the money must have found its way back into the banks as deposits.

Yet the "pump priming" has not been as successful as its sponsors hoped. Mr. Roosevelt, asking $300,000,000 less this year than the year before, thinks that spending must begin to contract. His expressed conviction is that the depression is approaching an end and that spending to combat it can be checked. His difficulty is that, according to the latest reliable estimates, there are still 8,000,000 in the United States unemployed, many of whom are dependent upon the Government for existence—or who think they are.

It is all, come to think of it, a baffling thing. Within the past six months the United States industrial machine has been geared fairly high. Major industries, such as United States Steel, have been reasonably profitable. The automobile industry is turning out practically as many cars as in 1929. Yet despite all this, what Finance Minister Dunning recently called the "hard core of unemployement," continues to persist. Persists in the United States as it persists in Canada. It is the challenging problem of these times.

To The Editor

UNION MEMBERSHIP

Editor Examiner,

Sir: Your correspondent's query as to what difference does it make to Premier Hepburn whether the men at Oshawa want to join the C.I.O. (Committee for Industrial Organization) or any other labor organization, to my mind it is quite reasonable and one you are in full agreement with, admitting it deserves a fair enough reply. In your reply you are in accord with Premier Hepburn. His objections to the C.I.O. is its record in the land where it had its origin and where it has been operating. When you class the citizens of Ontario with the followers of the C.I.O. in the U.S.A., you are discrediting their loyalty and sense of good judgment in the selection of their leaders. While the Examiner is favorable to the workers being in labor unions as a safeguard to their working conditions, it may be pointed out that craft unionism has served its day and is no longer a dread to the employer of labor, the only alternative being O.B.U. (One Big Union.) This was clearly demonstrated in the Winnipeg general sympathetic strike May-June, 1919, where leading lawyers, members of employers, committee of 1000, with a subscribed capital of $100,000, were engaged by federal government to prosecute workers. When the combined forces of labor become such that the federal government is stirred to action then the worker becomes a recognized factor in labor disputes.

A Bit of Nonsense

Everything Fixed

"Mrs. Buntie," said the bank cashier, "your account is overdrawn $42.29."

"Dear me," exclaimed Mr. Buntie. "I'll attend to it right away."

As good as her word, she straight way wrote and mailed to the bank a cheque for $42.29."

"While I think of it, darling—hadn't I better ask your father tonight?"—Humorist.

Drastic Methods Necessary.

(From the Port Arthur News-Chronicle)

A magistrate in London, Ont., has declared he will recommend that a motorist who is convicted of a breach of the Highway Traffic Act. This may sound all right at first, but it is not inconceivable that the whole thing before long would be treated as a joke.

Who would there be to see to it that the red tags were kept in place for the proper time limit? They could be pasted on the windshield with a heavy penalty for scraping them off without the authority of a police official, but that would mean, more than likely, that few drivers would take their cars out during the time the tag was required to be kept on. This would be all right for the time, but they would be back again, and it is doubtful if their frame of mind on getting into the driver's seat again would be inducive to careful driving.

Denying a person the privilege of driving an automobile during his lifetime is drastic, but events of recent years show that only drastic measures will serve to eliminate the unnecessary danger that exists on the highways because of careless, reckless, and drunken drivers.

THE MEDICINE CABINET.

(Sarnia Observer)

ALTHOUGH the purpose of the home medicine cabinet is the protection of health and life, it frequently becomes a source of illness and even death.

The handling of poisons seems to have ample safeguards thrown around it everywhere except in the home. Utmost care is used by the manufacturer who makes it, the physician who prescribes it and the druggist who dispenses it. But as soon as it reaches the home, the safeguards seem to break down. The box or bottle is placed in the medicine cabinet along with a conglomeration of other boxes, bottles and whatnots.

Along may come a child whose attention is attracted to the mysterious collection, and before the mother or father is aware of it a poisonous tablet may have been swallowed. Even adults are not immune to the serious possibilities of the medicine cabinet. Reaching for a harmless remedy in the dark, or with attention diverted elsewhere, may bring fatal results to the man or woman doing the reaching. Many such cases are on record.

AUTO CARCASSES.

(The New Yorker)

OLD, dead automobiles, moldering in roadside graveyards, have long been a worrisome sight in this country. We peer into glade and glen, and find bodies decomposing there, stripped of tires and batteries. Foreigners, visiting us, are appalled at the spectacle, and write letters home to their papers about American wealth and waste. But today these carcasses lie uneasily in their burial grounds, preyed upon by grave robbers of a new sort. The price of scrap iron and steel has risen tremendously—it seems there is a European demand: iron is wanted for the wars, and the stealthy junkman arrives to pluck the ancient Overland from the caress of raspberry vine and nettle. At his approach, field mice flee their nest in the cushions. Iron for wars! Somewhere a peasant saves his broken spade for the government collector; somewhere a bride melts down her wedding ring for God and country; somewhere someone's old family sedan goes to its great adventure. The iron we could not quite destroy will serve destruction yet. Scrap iron, scrap steel, scrap gold. Scrap life.

BRITAIN'S EXPERIENCE.

(Niagara Falls Review)

IT is eleven years since the general strike in Great Britain, which looked as if it might paralyze Great Britain. It did cause great and severe inconvenience and it is interesting to note what Right Honorable J. H. Thomas, in his autobiography, has to say about it:

"The challenge to the public had been taken up. We all know now that England will never allow itself to be coerced; it is a lesson that must never be forgotten by any section of the community however powerful.

"When the Strike came, the general public faced it with a courage that amazed the outside world. Many of the working wives had to take back the bitter things they had said about the pampered upper classes. Off came the black coats. Sleeves were rolled up. Too bad with the idea of revolution! These fellows — clerks, dandies, even tackled any sort of job; they drove trains, piloted motor buses, and even unloaded ships in battle. That is how England tackled her first General Strike."

In other words no strike has any chance of succeeding unless it is supported by public opinion.

PEOPLE WHO SIGN PETITIONS

(Guelph Mercury)

If people sign promissory notes as readily as they do petitions no wonder if they fall easy marks to bogus cheque artists who come along and touch them up every once in a while.

IN A SHORT TIME.

(Belleville Ontario-Intelligencer)

CONSIDER the telephone—developed within the lifetime of the average citizen of middle age. A toy in 1877, a world-wide necessity in 1937, something it would be rather difficult to do without in business and social circles—so dependent is the life of the community on the telephone for social calls as well as contact with local business houses and emergency calls. In business the telphone offers a service which is world-wide, instanced a few days ago when a Belleville citizen conversed with his wife in Berlin, Germany. With the telephone as with most modern services folks are apt to take as a matter of course and cease to wonder at the wonderful magic of it all. Those of us who have good memories can recall with a smile the first telephone exchange when one girl ran the switchboard and it was considered the thing to call her up and pass jokes, there seeming to be ample time for fun and frolic on the new gadget which must necessarily be limited in scope and more or less of a trial to manipulate. Memory also recalls the flickerings of the first incandescent lamps in the homes and the sputtering of the carbon street lights. Gosh! all hemlock! but we have come a long distance in a comparatively short time when we consider all the comforts of home and business.

A GOOD SIGN.

(Kitchener Record)

CONTINUING indications of a decrease in the number of people on relief locally is among the more encouraging signs of return to better and more stable times. The fact that a large percentage of those dropping from the relief list is absorbed in industries indicates a healthy condition.

For six years local taxpayers have been feeling the heavy burden of supporting the fellow less fortunate and to some property owners, close to relief themselves, the burden has been intense.

Diminishing of relief costs means a drop in the tax rate eventually as the one vital demand on the taxpayer has been the relief account.

While it is not to be expected that relief will suddenly vanish, it is evident it is steadily decreasing toward a point where an appreciable difference will be felt by taxpayers ultimately. The list is now upwards of a thousand less than in peak days and while it seems fairly safe to figure relief as a permanent cost the trend is definitely in the direction of a more moderate burden for all.

WORKING FOR RELIEF.

(Winnipeg Free Press)

THE attempt of the Unemployed Association to prevent married men who had lately brought their families to the city, from working for the relief which they receive, shows the utterly unreasonable lengths to which these people are ready to go. The men who has been asked to work for the maintenance of themselves and their families, and had agreed to do so, has lately completed their necessary year's residence in the city. They had moved in to Winnipeg for the purpose of going on relief.

This movement has been going on for some time, and many hundreds of families have come on relief in Winnipeg in this way. There is evidence that the movement has been deliberately encouraged and aided by various municipalities in the province, and that it has been aided by individuals and associations in the city, helping to maintain the families during their qualifying year of residence.

The latter aid has been given with good intentions, perhaps, but without considering the great injustice to the Winnipeg taxpayers of making them pay for the relief of outsiders.

THEY MUST AGREE.

(Ottawa Journal)

PREMIER Mitchell Hepburn asked and compelled the resignations of two of his Ministers—Minister of Welfare Croll and Attorney General Roebuck. Mr. Hepburn's power to do this, apart from the merits of the disagreement among them, is undeniable. It is ordinary cabinet practice.

Cabinet Ministers may disagree as much as they please behind cabinet doors. They can't disagree outside its doors. That is what is meant by collective cabinet responsibility.

Cabinets—behind closed doors—do disagree. Mr. Tarte said of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's cabinet that "we fought like blazes." Yet when Mr. Tarte carried his disagreement from the inner cabinet room to the platform, Sir Wilfrid threw him from the battlements.

This practice is as old as British parliamentary government. "What is it?" snapped Melbourne as a meeting of the cabinet dispersed. "I don't care whether it is yes or no, but we must all say the same thing."

TARIFFS AND THE WEST.

(Hanna, Alta., Herald)

ACTUALLY Quebec and Ontario have built up on Canadian tariffs and no amount of persuasion from Western Canada is going to cause any Canadian government, be it Liberal, Conservative, C.C.F., or Social Credit, to lower the tariff wall sufficiently to adversely affect that industrial development. In all fairness it must be conceded that industrial development is extremely important to Canada. No nation which clung to agriculture, purely and simply, ever became great. Russia was the nearest approach to a purely agrarian country, and we now see terrific efforts being made to industrialize that country in order to bring about advancement. If Ontario and Quebec were forced to sacrifice their industry and would turn to agriculture they would offer tremendous competition to western agriculture and the entire country would suffer a reduced standard of living.

ESTATE TAXES.

(Windsor Star)

IF John J., working hard for forty, fifty or sixty years, managed to accumulate a hundred thousand dollars, by what possible logic can it be established that part of that money—all of it, if some persons had their way—should go into the State treasury at his death?

Ah, someone says, the State provided him with an opportunity to make that money!

Humorist!

The State did nothing of the kind. On the contrary, John J., instead of being in debt to the State, was the State's benefactor and helper. He paid large taxes. He gave employment. He provided business leadership. He shelled out for private charities and public projects.

All down the line he paid "through the nose" for the privilege of living and operating his business and giving work to men and women and generally contributing to the maintenance and improvement and expansion of his city, his province and his country. Then, dying, he is expected to suppress thousands more for public purposes.

NEWS FOR CROLL.

(Detroit Saturday Night)

HOW Labor Minister Croll of Windsor ever got into the Ontario cabinet is now perplexing them how he got out on his premier's invitation. He now writes the premier that he "never heard until you made it any suggestion of an alliance between the Lewis unions and the communists." We commend to him a reading of a booklet issued by the Constitutional Educational League of New Haven, Conn., carrying a $1,000 reward for any untrue statement therein, and entitled, "How the C.I.O. and Reds Build a Soviet America."

SCHUSCHNIGG SEES IL DUCE IN VENICE

Chancellor Reported Aiming To Learn Where Austria Stands With Italy

VENICE, April 23 (AP)—Chancellor Kurt Von Schuschnigg came to Venice to-day to learn from Premier Mussolini where Austria stands in the light of rapidly growing Italo-German co-operation and increased Italian diplomatic activity in the Danubian basin.

The meeting between the dynamic Italian and the mild professorial-appearing Austrian took place in historic surroundings once part of Austria and often a target for her bombers during the Great War.

Official sources termed the conference a normal exchange of views on the Rome protocols but Fascist statesmen, counted on it to dispel rumors of a cooling of Mussolini's zeal for the role of Austria's guardian angel.

Diplomatic circles, on the other hand, felt for some time Mussolini was willing to abandon Austria to German demands for Anschluss (union) to further his close accord with Chancellor Hitler.

Fair support failed to produce optimism and trading was erratic on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange to-day as liquidation of old crop holdings continued. A final burst of selling found offerings scarce and prices recovered from a four cent loss in some to cent lower to ¼ cent higher with May at $1.32⅜ to $1.28⅜-¼ and October $1.17-$1.17¼.

Weakness at Liverpool, following irregular fluctuations recently gave the market here an easier trend from the start, when prices opened around two cents below yesterday's close.

Some investment support brought October wheat back after the first hour when export buying of approximately 300,000 bushels of Canadian wheat was reported.

HEART OF MADRID SHELLED TO RUINS

Rebels Pour Destruction Into Heavily Populated Areas 11 Days Without Halt

MADRID, April 23 —(AP)— Gen. Francisco Franco's versatile gun crews, who have adapted anti-aircraft weapons to a bombardment unmatched in the experience of any other capital in 20th century warfare, stabbed at the heart of Madrid to-day—the 11th consecutive day of artillery attack.

At least 25 shells were blasted into the populous districts along the Gran Via and connecting streets.

They wrought their havoc as the toetos of more than 22 persons killed in yesterday's attack were being carted to cemeteries.

The spring sky, pitiless in its brightness, afforded the insurgent gunners splendid visibility.

Men, rushing to shelter from the streets, said they saw men and women hurriedly carried to emergency hospitals by stretcher squads or hastily commandeered automobiles.

Gen. Jose Miaja, the capital's defence chief, flung defiance at "the men who are doing this are heartless tyrants," in heated response to the evacuation of at least 200 men. Injury to about twice that number and widespread property damage.

Three thousand of Franco's crack troops have been under siege in University City, the north-western suburb, walled up from reinforcement, ammunition, food and water for more than a week by a circular screen of machine gun and artillery fire.

Reports from the Teruel front, about 140 miles east of Madrid, told of a one-mile advance by a Government column from captured Celadas toward the Teruel-Saragosa highway, a little more than seven miles to the south-west.

LONDON RAILWAY MEN VOTE STRIKE

Decide To Force Action In Demand For Higher Wage Scale

LONDON, Ont., April 23 (CP). — Employees of the London street railway, in a unanimous vote early to-day, decided to strike and force action in their wage demands.

With a full attendance of employees, the meeting, after two hours, announced the vote in favor of striking was passed without dissenting vote. Time of the strike was left to the local union executive.

In an announcement after the meeting, President James Axford said the union members were determined to force the issue at once.

The strike date was not fixed. Mr. Axford said, and the matter was in the hands of the union executive which will be in conference with the general executive on the situation.

The operators, shopmen, barn workers, linemen and crafts members in the shops are affected by the strike vote.

man of committees, was presiding. Aneurin Bevan, livid with rage, shouted:

"Get out of that chair! Your conduct is abominable. I have been in this House for seven years. I have never seen anything as bad."

Sir Dennis "named" Bevan.

"Your conduct is abominable and I refuse to withdraw," Bevan retorted.

A message was hurriedly sent for the Speaker, Captain E. A. Fitzroy. It was a long interval before he arrived and it was suggested he had been taking a rest. When finally Captain Fitzroy appeared Sir Dennis formally reported he had been compelled to name Bevan.

Ernest Brown, Minister of Labor, thereupon moved Bevan's suspension. The motion carried. Bevan bowed and withdrew. His suspension will last for five days.

And the faithful Commons continued to talk. Several members looked odd in evening dress in the sunshine. The measure was finally adopted and the longest session since last July ended.

DISPUTE SETTLED BY LONGSHOREMEN

Montreal Union Is Granted International Charter—Ends Boycott Of Cunard Line

NEW YORK, April 23 (CP)—Joseph P. Ryan, president of the International Longshoremen's Association, today announced settlement of the dispute with the National Independent Union of Longshoremen and an end to the strike against the Cunard White Star and Furness-Withy Steamship Lines.

Ryan emerged from a conference with officers of the NIUL to say the Montreal union had been granted an international charter.

J. B. Labelle, president, and J. St. Pierre, business manager, represented the independent organization in the negotiations.

The two French-Canadian officials had polled other officers of the independent after holding preliminary conversations with representatives of the international yesterday. Peace came after a second inter-union conference.

The settlement came less than 48 hours after the president of the ILA declared a boycott against the Cunard White Star Line for using members of the NIUL to unload at Montreal two of its vessels—the Andania and Alaunia.

OSHAWA PLANT 44-HOUR WEEK

partment in which both men and women are employed they should be divided into separate non-interchangeable occupational groups. Seniority shall start from the time of hiring and shall be by departments or non-interchangeable.

Occupational groups within departments by agreement, except where changes in methods, products or policies would otherwise require the permanent laying off of employees, in which case seniority shall become plant-wide for the employees involved and they shall be transferred to other departments on work they are capable of doing and at the standard rate for such work.

Up-to-date seniority lists for each department or occupational group shall be maintained by the supervisor of such department or group and shall be available to any affected employee.

No Loss of Seniority

When an employee is transferred from one department or occupational group to another for any reason, there shall be no loss of seniority. However in case of temporary transfers not exceeding sixty days, an employee will retain his seniority in the department or occupational group from which he was transferred and not in the new department.

Twelve (12) consecutive months of unemployment or a voluntary quit or discharge breaks seniority.

If an employee is notified to report for work and does not report within one day, or give a satisfactory explanation for not reporting, he shall be considered as having voluntarily quit.

4—Grievance procedure:

(a) The management of the Oshawa factory recognizes a shop committee, consisting of nine members who shall be variously elected from their fellow employees who are members of the local union. The factory manager shall be advised of the personnel of the shop committee and any changes made from time to time.

(b) Any employee having a grievance in connection with his work, or any group of employees having a joint grievance in connection with their work, should first take up the matter with the foreman of the department. The foreman will attempt to make a satisfactory settlement.

(c). If the employee or group of employees is not satisfied with the foreman's decision they may then take it up with the superintendent or such convenient higher authority. If further action is desired, they may refer the case in writing to be considered by a meeting of the shop committee. The members of the shop committee may, upon receipt of such written request, investigate the circumstances of the complaint.

(d). If the committee is unable to adjust the grievance the matter will then be taken up with the factory manager or such higher authority as in the opinion of the committee is deemed necessary to deal with the case.

(e). Any cases not satisfactorily settled between the shop committee and the factory manager, may be referred to a delegation from the committee to the highest officers of the company, when, if the matter is of such importance that it still remains unsettled, the case may be referred to an impartial umpire by mutual agreement of both parties.

5-Rest period:

It is agreed that the employees shall be allowed a five minute rest period after the first two hours in the morning and after the first two hours in the afternoon.

6—Pay day:

Commencing May 7, all employees shall be paid every other Friday.

7—Production basis:

Beginning with the production season of 1938 models, the objective of 140 will be reduced to 120, thereby increasing the base hiring rate in proportion. The company will co-operate to bring it down to one hundred per cent.

8—No discrimination clause:

Both parties agree that no discrimination of any sort will be practiced either by the company or the employees, by reason of any activity, past or future, of any employee with, or in respect to, trade union activity or trade union membership.

Neither the company nor the employees shall intimidate employees either against or in favour of trade union membership.

This agreement shall continue in force until and so long as and concurrent with the agreement between General Motors Corporation in the United States, dated February 11, and the United Automobile Workers of America.

This agreement covering the Oshawa factory of the company is signed by the union employees hereunder who signed on behalf of themselves, and their successors in office representing the employees of the company, who are members of the local union.

(Signed)—H. J. Carmichael,
Vice President and General Manager
General Motors of Canada Limited.
James B. Highfield,
General Factory Manager,

RURAL STUDENTS GIVE PROGRAMME TO KIWANIS CLUB

How Music Is Taught In Rural Schools Is Demonstrated By Leslie Unitt

PLENTY OF SINGING

Demonstrating the method of teaching music in the rural and village schools, Kiwanian Leslie Unitt presented to his fellow-members at to-day's luncheon meeting of the Kiwanis Club one of the most interesting and novel programs in recent months.

Mr. Unitt had the whole-hearted assistance of twenty-five boys and girls representative of Millbrook, Fairy Line and Matchett's Schools, and while they were singing together as a single group for the first time they acquitted themselves admirably under the skilful direction of their instructor.

The meeting was under auspices of the Music Committee of the Kiwanis Club with Clifford N. Hall wielding the gavel for the day. Another feature of the meeting was a violin solo by George Gatfield, accompanied at the piano by Mr. Unitt.

Carl S. Browne introduced Mr. Unitt as the speaker of the day, and in turn the latter introduced the group of children who had been secured for the occasion from Millbrook district. The children who took part in the demonstration included the following:

Dorothy Sisco, Letha Edworthy, Elsie Theobald, Lorna Riley, Lillian Footill, Emma Peers, Betty Smith, Mary Hanley, Ruth Richards, Megan Abbott, Margaret Foster, Phyllis Lunt, David Hatherly, Evans Hatherly, Robert Ridge, Brenton Dawson, Teddy McDowell, and Donald Kerr, all of Millbrook School; Martha Belch, Donald McKnight, Beatrice Fallis, Isobel Bakin, and Vern Fallis, all of Fallis Line School; and Ernest Hoyles and Nan Fallis, of Matchett's School.

Universal Language.

Mr. Unitt believed that if music can be carried on more fully in the schools and carried on into High School, it would have a great beneficial effect on the world in general. He described music as "the universal language."

The program presented by the children under Mr. Unitt's direction included "The land of Glad To-morrow," a patriotic marching song, as the opening number; "Early One Morning," an old English folk song presumably sung in honor of the fact that to-day is St. George's Day; "For All Thy Care We Bless Thee," a three-part song; "Old Folks at Home," double duet; "Down to Rio Grande," old sea shanty; "The Mermaid," another rollicking sea song; and "Vive la Compahle," old French-Canadian air, as a concluding number.

Mr. Unitt believes that the teaching of music in the schools should consist of ten per cent. talking and ninety per cent. singing, and the manner in which his group of children sang indicates the success of his methods. The club tendered him a hearty vote of thanks on motion of A. B. Gates.

Charles Saunders boosted for Cliff Hall and the booster prize was awarded to Jack Lewis.

Britain Agreeable To Economic Parley

LONDON, April 23.—(AP).—Prime Minister Baldwin told the House of Commons to-day Great Britain is willing to participate in a new world economic conference "provided a comprehensive investigation showed it was likely to succeed and provided there had been adequate preparation."

Baldwin was asked by Arthur Henderson, Labor, whether he was "aware of the declaration of Herr Hitler that the German government was willing to participate in a new world conference."

"Yes, sir," the Prime Minister replied "The government has seen Herr Hitler's statement. The position of the government on this matter has been made clear from time to time."

URGES SUPPORT.

At the Kiwanis luncheon meeting at Empress Hotel this (Friday) afternoon A. B. Gates urged support for the Kiwanis "Jollies" Show to be presented in the Collegiate Auditorium on two nights of next week to raise proceeds for a wading pool in King Edward Park.

Grand Old Man's Eightieth Anniversary

J. P. Morrison of 209 Dalhousie Street, who attained his eightieth birthday anniversary on Wednesday, was honored by a number of friends representative of Knox United Church, who gathered at his home to congratulate him and to present him with two portrait photographs of himself, explaining that one was to grace his home, the other to be placed in the vestry of Knox United Church, where Mr. Morrison has been a prominent and diligent member for many years. The gifts were presented by H. J. McCannan and an address was read by J. W. Buyers, secretary of the church.

The chairman of the group was A. Gillies, and other representatives of the church included Mr. and Mrs. Andrew McKenzie, Mr. and Mrs. E. Benson, Mr. and Mrs. J. Gerard, Mr. and Mrs. R. Hancom, and Messrs McCannan, Buyers, J. Allen, and George Davis. Mr. Morrison made a suitable acknowledgment. Brief addresses were made by several members of the group.

Dainty refreshments were served by Mrs. Morrison, assisted by her sister-in-law, Mrs. Wallace Morrison of North Monaghan, a daughter of the house, Mrs. C. E. Manlece of Mark Street, and a daughter-in-law, Mrs. John Morrison of Donegal Street.

Members of the family who attended the celebration were the two sons, Gordon at home, and John Morrison of Donegal Street, with his wife, and the only daughter, Mrs. Manlece, with her husband. A third son, Edwin Morrison of Baltimore, Ontario, was unable to be present. Mr. Morrison's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Morrison of North Monaghan, were also in attendance.

An enjoyable evening was brought to a close by the singing of "Blest be the Tie that Binds."

The address read as follows: "Dear Brother,—Your brethren in the service of the Lord feel that we cannot allow the occasion of your eightieth birthday to pass without congratulating you, and expressing our high appreciation of the faithful service you have rendered to Knox United Church.

"Not to many is it given to serve as long as you have served, and we therefore fully realize your deep concern in all things pertaining to the welfare of our church. We wish to assure you that your fidelity and voluntary unselfish labor of love has been fully appreciated. We have looked to you for much-needed advice, and your long experience as an elder of the church fitted you well to give us very valuable counsel. When matters of importance were under consideration, you have always shown a kindly spirit of moderation. "We say, as the man of God said in Bible times of his friend: 'Behold an Israelite indeed in whom there is no guile.'

"As a token of our esteem, we take pleasure in presenting you with these portraits of your worthy self, and one is recommended to a place of honor in the vestry of Knox United Church.

"We hope that you and your faithful partner in life will be spared many years to enjoy the blessings of life in health and happiness."

To Honor Miss Mary Nichols

In honor of Miss Mary Nichols of McDonnel street, who was ninety-four years old on Thursday, her associates in the Women's Mission Circle of Murray street Baptist Church prepared a surprise gathering at the church, in the ladies' parlor. They regretted that Miss Nichols was unable to be with them, but a delegation of members left the informal tea to go to her home, where she was able to get up to greet them in her room. Miss Nichols, as her many friends like to remember, is of another and milder generation with manners of a gentle, kindly charm. Yesterday, she welcomed her visitors with her usual kindly graciousness, wearing a black dress and a dainty little shoulder shawl of mauve lacy wool in which was caught a yellow daffodil from a large bouquet sent by Reg Turner, a former pupil of Miss Nichols in the days when she taught school here, coming from Lakefield, where she was born. In those days, Miss Nichols knew Isabella Valancy Crawford, one of Canada's greatest women poets, who lived here then and who, calling on Miss Nichols on one occasion, impressed the latter's memory with a little humorous remark, when, pointing to a fleecy cloud which she wore in the fashion of the period, remarked: "It is a cloudy day."

In Miss Nichols' room were displayed many lovely birthday cards from friends and from the members of the Mission Circle of which she has been a faithful member (and former officer) for so many years, each member of that society remembering her in this fashion. Also displayed were lovely floral tributes, including a big red lily of the 'Amaryllis' variety sent by Gerald Ceed, whose mother, now deceased, had a birthday on the day previous to that of Miss Nichols, and a beautiful plant sent by her neighbors, the Misses Cameron and Florence Edwards.

The ladies took with them the large birthday cake, iced in pink and green, which had been prepared for the celebration. Miss Nichols cut this and kept a portion, the remainder going back to the tea gathering at the church for distribution among the members.

To honor their old friend in a special way and to provide a memorial of her constant and unflagging interest in missionary efforts, a consistent effort was made this year to put the ladies' missionary funds over the top and advance beyond their stated obligations, something which has not been done for some years. This was done through an entirely free-will offering for missions made at yesterday's gathering of approximately fifty members.

Tea was served informally from a table covered with lace and centered by the large cake, on a crystal comport. Four brass candlesticks held pink candles, the d'oyles were in pink and green, and the mints in white of an old-fashioned variety, carrying out an effective decorative scheme of pink, green and white. Around the room were placed pink and green candles in brass holders, with pink Darwin tulips and potted begonias.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Norman Barrie and her committee members: Mrs. C. B. Westbrook, Mrs. Percy Johnston, Mrs. P. S. White and Mrs. E. G. Strickland.

Mrs. F. M. Somerville took charge of a pretty birthday card in which extra leaves were placed, and which acted as a register of the names of the Circle members, as a gift for Miss Nichols.

Receiving the guests at the informal gathering were the president, Miss Mary Barnard, and the honorary vice president, Miss Jane Jackson. During the afternoon, Mrs. L. H. Ingram sang, accompanied by Mrs. P. Johnston. The gathering broke up with the singing of "Blest be the Tie that Binds."

In Lindsay Presbyterial Mrs. G. A. Lucas of Lindsay, reported that out of a membership of 442 there is a subscription of 370 to "the Glad Tidings." Their total givings were $2,300.

Goforth Memorial

Chatham gave a memorial to Rev. Jonathan Goforth when they raised for Rev. J. P. Goforth. Every offer Rev. J. E. Goforth. Every organization contributed and there was sufficient money for a junior membership for the famed missionary's grand-daughter, Miss Marian Goforth. Mrs. W. E. Staunt, of Walkerville also announced that the auxiliaries are finding more pleasure and use for the library.

Mrs. J. M. Campbell of Sudbury, reporting for North Bay, put in a plea for an address by a return missionary. The women in this Presbyterial have not heard from one in three years, she said. The Home Helpers in this northern sparsely populated district contributed over $100.

A total increase of five organizations and 70 members has been accomplished in Guelph Presbyterial, Miss Phyllis Higginbotham of Guelph reported.

INITIALS, USED SINGLY OR IN MONOGRAMS, AS JEWELRY OR ON HANDBAG, ARE THE RAGE RIGHT NOW

THESE ARE NEW AND SWANKY WAYS OF LABELING OUR POSSESSIONS

(By LISBETH.)

IN SPITE of various philosophies of living which say there should be no private property; that each individual should put whatever they own into the common fund, we DO like to possess things more, we like everyone to know that such things are ours.

There are many neat little ways of labelling things so that "he who runs may read" that they are our possessions, and ours alone. Clothes, handkerchiefs, linens, silver, even chinaware, is initialed. But these mild attempts to identify our property is as nothing to the rage for monograms that seems to be sweeping the nation at the present time.

Everything one has may bear one's initials or monogram in gold, silver or other precious metal, if we wish. A company specializes in just that—making swanky looking letters to pin to our effects to tell onlookers that they are ours. Said initials come in the form of letters which may be affixed to our bags; or they may be in the form of ornamental pins or clips that can be attached to dresses, hats, scarfs, bags, etc., or dangle from bracelets.

Pretty Pin.

A very pretty and effective pin is worn by the young woman at the left of our picture, worn at the neck of a smart crepe dress. It is the latest "scroll-it" pin, as the letters are of the good old scroll type.

With a lovely floral print dress and flower trimmed hat, the other model carries a patent leather bag with Victorian letters. A delightful bracelet in this fashion is a daintily woven metal chain that holds the flexible linked letters of old-fashioned script firmly about the wrist. We'll be having our buttons monogrammed next, and wouldn't that be something?

And speaking of buttons, which are stressed in almost every costume you see, designers are being inspired by fruits and flowers, vegetables and insects, in turning out some original and unique buttons for our adornment. Some of you are old enough to remember the strings of utterly fascinating buttons that children used to carry about—buttons that had some time been worn on dresses by mother or grandmother. It has been a long time since buttons were more than a very occasional fastening for a dress or coat, and then they were of the plainest.

But the festive button is again coming into its own, and our grandchildren may again boast of the strings of intricate buttons they possess.

Fashion Service

The soft draped front makes this charming print crepe corsage dress delightfully lovely and feminine. The gathered fulness at the back of the wide flaring skirt does slimming things to your waistline.

Added to its smartness the flattering low vee neck offers infinite variety. It gives you a chance to wear your multi-strand pearl necklace. Again, you can wear a jewel clip at the base of the deep vee.

For another disguise, the pattern includes a cunning rolled collar, which is smart in snowy white pique, flew a bias bind along the inner edge to make it detachable. Merely baste it to the dress. Frilly pleated lace about an inch wide, is dainty as can be tucked into the vee neck.

These little "tricks" make it a grand basic dress for the modest budget.

Style No. 3370 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20 years, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44-inch bust. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 39-inch material.

AT THE CAPITOL
"MAYTIME"

There is still time to see this beautiful picture which was the swan song, as it were, of the late Irving Salzberg. For years he had watched it grow (and spend money), and then he died and the director who had known a great deal about his ideas tried to finish as Salzberg had planned (and spent some more money). At any rate, it is a gorgeous production, not so much from a spectacular viewpoint as from the inclusion of so many lovely tunes and two of the real songbirds of America: Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy.

It may be that the little lady "a canned doll", they call her in Hollywood) does hog the spotlight, but why shouldn't she, when she sings so gloriously and looks so entrancing in those old-time clothes and bonnets, for the story is set in the time of the Empress Eugenie in France. And it may be too that Eddy seems somewhat boyish and a little less virile than usual, in the role. He makes a splendid foil for Miss Macdonald, just the same. We wondered if his resemblance to Gene Raymond, to whom she is to be married this June, made her so very affectionate with him in some of the scenes. It looked like very authentic love-making.

The music is happy throughout, although the tale has a tearful ending and is told in retrospect, instead of in the mode in which Berlin first planned it. What could be sweeter than the singing of "Carry Me Back to Ole Virginny" by those two in the little scene in the French attic room of the hero.

As for John Barrymore, he is a surprise. Perhaps his weird lass romance, which blossomed—and fadedt—while this picture was in the making, contributes to his mood of smoke fire. What an atmosphere he brings with him. His dissolute scion of the great acting family. He is superb as Nikolai, the quiet and vengeful husband of Marica Morosay, the prima donna (Jeanette Macdonald), and his few quiet speeches, in his beautiful voice, are among the highlights of a surpassingly beautiful production.—C.I.M.

LAKEFIELD SOCIAL WELL PATRONIZED

Women's Association Of St. Andrew's Church Sponsors Coronation Tea

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, April 23. — The members of the Women's Association of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Lakefield, held a highly successful Coronation tea Thursday afternoon, April 22, when they entertained a large number of Lakefield ladies in the basement of the church. The tea-room was decorated in Coronation colors with attractive pictures of the Royal family hung at intervals. A large picture of Princess Elizabeth, who this week celebrated her eleventh birthday, was in a position of honor on one side of the Union Jack which was draped above the platform. A portrait of the Queen Mother hung opposite that of the princess and a full-length likeness of the King was placed directly beneath the draped flag. Miniature Union Jacks, floating above the individual salads gave them the appearance of tiny fortresses and even the serviettes were trimmed with Union Jacks in keeping with the spirit of the occasion.

A delightful musical program preceded the service of tea. Mrs. T. W. Chaplin graciously acted as hostess in the absence of the president, Mrs. A. Davis. After a few words of welcome to the guests, she called on Miss Winnie Payne who rendered a delightful solo entitled "Wi' My Ane Folk." This was followed by a violin selection by Mrs. Doris Shewen who was accompanied by Miss W. Payne. Mrs. J. B. Hull brought the program to an impressive conclusion when she sang a most appropriate patriotic solo entitled, "There is a Land." Mrs. H. E. Moore acted as accompanist for the vocal selections.

Despite bad weather, the tea was well attended.

Long's Daughter Imitates Father

BATON ROUGE, La., April 23 (A.P.). — Another political battle was chalked up to the credit of the Long family to-day—with vivacious 20-year-old Rose Long, succeeding her father, the late Senator Huey P. Long, as vote-getter.

She's been elected president of the Women's Student Association at Louisiana State University. Her opinion of the victory:

"Oooh, but I'm glad. Now maybe I can get some sleep."

Rose cut classes yesterday and stationed herself near the polls, soliciting votes.

She drafted the help of her younger brother, Russell, president of the Sophomore Class.

All day long they herded co-eds to the polls, wheedled, argued, harranged, flattered, and back-patted.

Church Of England Primate Commends Form Of Services

Archbishops Recognize World-Wide Audience For Coronation

PREPARE FOR BROADCAST

LONDON, April 23.—(CP)—Having in mind that "by a marvel of science" millions of British Empire subjects and others throughout the world will hear the Coronation service in Westminster Abbey, May 12, the Archbishops of Canterbury and York have suggested forms of service for use in churches the preceding Sunday and on Coronation Day to prepare congregations to listen to the broadcast.

The archbishops commend to the clergy of all parts of the Empire inclusion in the addresses and sermons of some reference to this "manner, hitherto unknown in history, the King will come to his crowning, accompanied by his people." They point out the people of many lands will be able to hear the words which will say the great charge upon the King "as if they themselves were present in the Abbey Church of St. Peter at Westminster."

For services Sunday, May 9 the archbishops suggest an Old Testament lesson from the Books of Kings to include the verse "The Lord our God be with us as He was with our fathers." A second lesson is commended, from the words of St. Paul to the Philippians beginning "In nothing be anxious; but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God."

Prayers would be offered "for our sovereign lord, King George, set over us by Thy grace and providence to be our King . . ." It is suggested the first and third verses of the National Anthem be sung, the second being omitted.

As Opening Hymn.

For services throughout the Empire Coronation day the archbishops suggest as the opening hymn: "All People that on Earth do Dwell" followed by an address to include the admonition: "Brethren, we are met together to add our prayers to the thoughts of countless multitudes whose minds are turning at this time to one of the most sacred places in the history of our race—the Abbey Church of St. Peter at Westminster. Thither our King and Queen are coming to receive from God the anointing which seals their life's service and bestows God's grace for its fulfilment . . ."

Prayers for the King and Queen would follow. Then the minister might say: "Almighty God, who rulest in the Kingdom of men, and hast given to our sovereign lord, King George, a great dominion in all parts of the earth; draw together, we pray Thee, in true fellowship the men of divers races, languages and customs, who dwell therein, that, bearing one another's burdens and working together in brotherly concord, they may fulfil the purpose of Thy Providence, and set forward Thy everlasting Kingdom." The service would conclude with the Lord's Prayer and part of the National Anthem.

HIGH SCORE WINNERS

BETHANY, April 22.—The regular meeting of St. Mary's A.Y.P.A. was held on Wednesday evening last at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Henderson, Lindsay Road, with 14 members present. The evening was of a social nature and after the business and devotional periods, games of progressive euchre were played. Miss Marjory Page and Vernon Young were the high score winners.

Bob Reid moved a vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Henderson for their kind hospitality to which all responded most heartily.

IGNORE C.I.O. IN NEW OFFER

dent of the Oshawa Local and an organizer for the Committee for Industrial Organization, represented "the Oshawa employees of General Motors."

The Premier and the company have consistently objected to the recognition of the C.I.O. with which the U.A.W.A. is affiliated.

The original negotiating committee appointed by the strikers was also present in a room adjoining the cabinet chamber, where the peace talks were held. The committee was called into the conference several times.

In addition to the Premier, government officials attending were Hon. Paul Leduc, Attorney-General and Minister of Mines; Hon. Harry Nixon, Provincial Secretary, and Louis Fine, Ontario Labor Department mediator.

The Premier obviously was cheered by the result of the meeting. He smiled broadly when he issued a prepared statement on the outcome.

Mr. Cohen said the terms reached were "eminently satisfactory."

SOCIAL SECURITY FOUND IN SWEDEN WITHOUT PARALLEL

Sweden and he was welcomed on that basis. Then the Swede was scrupulously honest and he looked up to his government with respect, while his cleanliness was remarkable.

As a further step in tracing the reasons for what Sweden had been able to accomplish, Mr. Massey reviewed briefly the history of the country to show that the development of personal liberty under the law had been a leading factor.

Finally he laid down as the two basic foundations for the happy conditions in Sweden, first, the Swedish church, with its simple direct teaching of the principles of Jesus Christ, and secondly, the sound and effective system of education which the speaker described in interesting detail to show how an important part it had played in bringing about the situation that had inspired in him so much admiration.

It had been said that wages were low in Sweden. They were as compared with those in some other countries but they were ample to meet the simple tastes of the Swede who was satisfied with amusements that did not require the expenditure of a great deal of money.

Much We Could Learn

"There have been some mistakes of course" said Mr. Massey. "No country is perfect, and I am not speaking of Utopia. I am, however, describing a country that has gone a long way in the direction that we will have to go. There is much that we can learn from Sweden."

At the conclusion of the address a vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Massey, on motion of Rev. J. Douglas Paterson, of All Saints' church, and seconded by G. H. Roper, of the Y.M.C.A.

TWO SCHOLARSHIPS.

CORONATION PLANS AT CAMPBELLFORD

Town Officials And Organizations Discuss Plans For Parade

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, April 23.— At a meeting held in the Council Chambers of the Public Library on Wednesday evening plans were made for the celebration of the coronation on May 12. Mayor F. F. Long and Councillor N. A. McColl met representatives of the various churches, Legion and other organizations who it is expected will take part in the civic celebration and parade which is to leave the Post Office at 10.45 a.m. Major J. M. Bygott will be the marshall of the parade which it is expected will constitute members of the council and other civic officials, high school cadets, public school children and the Northumberland Regiment band. Mayor Long expressed the hope that there would be from five to six hundred school children in the parade which will include not only those from the local schools but also from rural school sections to whom an invitation to take part is being extended. Medals will be presented by the council to all the Public and Separate School children while the Legion will furnished special medals to the High School Cadets in honor of the Coronation. It was suggested that the Seymour Township Council also be requested to take part in the ceremony.

Leaving the post office the procession will march to the High School grounds where a short service will be held when it is expected that the principal speaker will be H. N. Carr, M.L.A. The Mayor will issue a proclamation proclaiming the day a holiday and requesting that all merchants and house holders endeavour to decorate their stores and houses in an appropriate manner. The Mayor expressed the hope that decorations would be placed by May 7th. The Town Council has purchased streamers and with the bunting, flags and lights which the Water and Light Commission are planning it is expected that the Town will be well decorated.

FIGHT SUGGESTED OVER TELEVISION

Rival U.S. Radio Systems Appear To Be Speeding Up In Competition

NEW YORK—April 23 (A.P.)—There may or may not be a television "war" brewing in New York between the National Broadcasting Company and Columbia Broadcasting Company System networks. It hasn't got much beyond the statement-issuing stage yet but even so it has all the earmarks of a "beat the other fellow to it" scrap.

The thing began to materialize upon announcement by CBS it was seeking a construction permit for a picture transmitter to be located atop the Chrysler building "to operate at a peak power of 30 kilowatts." Along came an NBC announcement that its field tests of high definition televisions were being "resumed on the largest scale ever undertaken in the United States." The experiments are to continue throughout spring and summer.

This will not be the first time the two networks have vied with each other for television attention. Back in 1931 NBC was running experimental tests with 60-line pictures in New York. Those images were of much poorer detail than is possible today with the all-electrical apparatus that has replaced the mechanical equipment used then. About the same time CBS put in a 60-line transmitter and for a period of about a year kept up program research.

While the newest television spurt continues to stress the experimental nature of the transmissions, with a lot of concentration on program development, it may have the important reaction of speeding up the date of public introduction, particularly after CBS begins to offer competition on an experimental basis something like it does in sound broadcasting.

Sit-Down Strike In Cage With Lions

Sydney, N.S.W., April 23. DETERMINEDLY insisting he was a tiger-trainer and not a lion-tamer, Captain Flager won a 10-hour sitdown strike in a lions' cage to-day against the management of the circus for which he performs.

The management insisted Flager performed with the lions, but the captain, pointing out his contract, called only for tigers, moved into the lion's cage with a camp bed and hurricane lamp and sat calmly down to show he would have nothing to do with the jungle kings.

Commented an official; "Mincemeat might have been made of any man who tried to bring Flager out."

CULT CHIEF FOUND HIDING IN CELLAR

Father Divine Works No Miracle On Police But Gives Up Quietly

NEW YORK, April 23 (U.P.). — Father Divine, Harlem's bald little negro "god," who scuttled out of his downtown "heaven" last Tuesday after a man was stabbed in a riot, was picked up by police last night in Milford, Conn.

The negro messiah was found hiding in the cellar of a small house which one of his "faithful angels" turned over to him after he fled into the night.

Police want him on a charge of felonious assault. He has been sought in a half-dozen States since the riot, in which the little black "god" attacked a process-server who tried to serve him with a summons from a rebellious follower.

One Still in Hospital.

The process-server, Paul Camora, was pummelled by the cult leader's enraged followers, and a friend, Harry Green, was taken to a hospital with a knife wound in his chest. He still is in a critical condition.

New York detectives left immediately for Milford to take Father Divine in tow.

Captain C. F. Douglas of Milford, who made the arrest, said he acted on a tip, apparently from one of the negro cult leader's followers in Milford, where he has one of his numerous "heavens."

The squat, beady-eyed "god" was huddling in a corner of the cellar when Captain Douglas and two other policemen walked in with guns drawn.

Taking No Chances.

"We weren't taking any chances," Douglas said.

"God" didn't bother about passing any miracles, however. He licked his lips, held out his hands, and said: "Here I am. I ain't going to hurt nobody."

He told Douglas he would waive extradition and go to New York.

"Peace—it's wonderful," he told detectives who hustled him to jail.

RED PATCH CLUB HONORS FALLEN AT YPRES IN 1915

Peterborough's Remnant Of 1st Division Hold Annual Dinner

GLORIOUS PAST

Peterborough's remnant of the glorious old 1st Division Canadian Expeditionary Force, who are banded together and known as the Red Patch Club gathered at the banquet table in the Legion Hall on Thursday evening to recall the deeds of valour which won undying fame for Canada in the early years of the Great War.

Under chairmanship of president, Harvey Staunton, a splendid program of speeches and entertainment was presented for the gathering of over one hundred ex-service members of the 1st Division and their guests. Among those who occupied places of honor at the head table were the following: Lieut- Colonel M. R. Sloan, president of Branch 53 Canadian Legion; Lieut- Colonel J. J. Duffus, M.P.; Lieut-Colonel G. G. Winterbottom, M.C., D.C.M.; Lieut-Colonel W. Gordon Hall, V.D.; Lieut-Colonel D. J. Lawrie, Major R. T. E. Hicks-Lyne, Major Fred Hills, Captain J. Ford Strickland, K.C., and Mayor George A. Macdonald.

Introduces Guests

Major H. K. Clifton, M.C., who presented the various guests remarked on the fact that Major-General Garnet Hughes who recently died with tragic suddenness had expected to be present at the dinner. He paid tribute to the late General Hughes by speaking of him as having been an outstanding soldier and leader of men.

Apologies for unavoidable absence were received from Colonel H. Alley, O.B.E., V.D., of Toronto who recently underwent an operation; Lieut.-Colonel Fraser Hunter; T. P. Lancaster, M.P.P., who was stated to have been taken seriously ill; and Lieut-Colonel R. S. McLaughlin, C.M.G., D.S.O., and Lieut.-Colonel J. A. Dewart, M.C., both with the Canadian Coronation contingent.

The dinner was an outstanding success. Members of the Prince of Wales' Rangers bugle band who waited on tables in their scarlet tunics added a pleasing touch of color. A pre-Coronation touch was lent to the general scheme of decorations executed by W. Oracle, Legion Hall caretaker with the festoons of bunting that hung from the rafters of the ceiling and by the deep red stripes (emblem of the Red Patch Club) that adorned the tables.

Pride and Sorrow

"This is an anniversary on which we look back with pride and sorrow," declared President Staunton in his opening remarks as toastmaster. "The purpose of such gatherings is to get the boys together at least once a year with their former overseas comrades."

After the toast to "The King," next on the list was that to "Fallen Comrades" which was honored with fitting solemnity. With the deepest feeling of reverence the large gathering of ex-soldiers stood in the semi-darkened room lit only by the illuminated Cross of Sacrifice while "Last Post" was sounded by a bugler. Before the clarion notes of "Reveille" rang out and signalized the re-flooding of the room with normal light, the gathering sang a verse of the hymn "Abide With Me." As a further tribute to the army of war dead Jack Smith sang a sacred solo "There Is No Death."

Responding to the toast Colonel Sloan declared he had never seen or heard a more impressive toast to the departed comrades, and in this connection he wished to compliment the members of the Red Patch Club.

Job Not Finished

"Our job is not finished with our rising to such a toast," the speaker reminded his comrades. "We have still to look after those who are left behind. We must not forget those who are not in such favorable circumstances as ourselves."

"This duty we owe to our ex-service comrades is not being done as it should be done." He mentioned that in 1940 the government is proposing that soldier pension applications will cease. This being the case he urged it is up to every ex-service-man who feels he is entitled to a pension to get his application before the government without delay.

Proposing a toast to the 1st Division, Major Hicks-Lyne recalled that on April 22, 1915 when the French were in retreat the Canadians were thrown into the line to stem the attack of the oncoming hordes of Germans and it was then that the Canadians faced the first great ordeal of poison gas, and Major Bennett and a number of Peterborough boys among other hundreds of men from the Dominion lost their lives in the service of King and country.

Saved the Day

"For the 1st Division we cannot say too much by way of praise," the Major stated. "They held the line and saved the day, and they also established the glorious tradition that was so well maintained by succeeding Divisions of the Canadian Corps."

Replying to the toast Colonel Winterbottom expressed the opinion, "Any man of the 1st Division who does not go away from this hall feeling bucked up by the message given us by the proposer of this toast, has something lacking in his mentality."

Commenting on the number of guests present, Colonel Winterbottom declared, "Those of us of the 1st Division feel proud we have so many friends who have seen fit to join us at our dinner and get-together."

He remarked on the scarcity of medals worn by the ex-servicemen present and believed that their lack indicated an inferiority complex on the part of ex-soldiers generally. Speaking personally and calling attention to the row of decorations adorning his own breast, he said, he always had entertained the feeling that he shared those medals with the members of the company he had commanded overseas. "You chaps who have only one or two medals, put them up and be proud of them," he urged.

Support Militia

He took the opportunity to bespeak on behalf of the local militia unit of which Major Hicks-Lyne is in temporary command, the support and co-operation of all present. "In supporting that unit," he said, "you are upholding whatever unit you may have belonged to overseas and are helping to preserve all that is best in Canada."

Captain Strickland proposed the toast to "The Empire" and in so doing commented that in an Empire such as ours every month and every day of the year held some special significance to some portion of it. The month of April was of particular significance to Canada, he said, having in mind the anniversary of Ypres which the dinner commemorated. He felt that Canada should be proud of the record of her part in the Great War but criticized the fact that the Dominion continued to ROMANCE, INTRIGUE, pleasure and social functions may be factors in luring this day from paths of the sordid and commonplace. A sudden and possibly spectacular wedding or other romantic or social sensation may add to the pleasure and enjoyment of the day. An element of the furtive, expedient or strategic, as well as proclivities toward extravagance, indulgence and display may tend to tax the financial status.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year in which tendencies to the romantic, pursuit of pleasure and personal indulgences in extravagance, show improvidence or financial hazards may take precedence over the commonplace activities and interests. Artistic, affectional and social engagements should flourish.

A child born on this day may attain prominence or position through its gestures of pomposity, display, prodigality and personal ambitions rather than its sound efficiency. It may attain its social high spot or figure in promotional enterprises with a flourish. An early hint of thrift and frugality might be advisable.

DRAMATIC CLUB OF ALL SAINTS' PRESENTED PLAY

Enjoyable Three-Act Comedy Drama Is Presented In Parish Hall

MOUNTAIN SETTING

Talented character work was afforded by the All Saints' Dramatic Club as it produced "Mammy's Lil' Wild Rose," an enjoyable three-act comedy-drama, in the Paris Hall Thursday evening. The reception accorded the play by the large audience indicated the club had again chosen a piece well suited to its veteran talents.

Enacted in a rustic mountain setting in old Virginia, the roles of the play were exacting but no member of the cast of twelve failed to equal the demand. As Mammy Celie, tender, loving, coloured woman who is the prime mover in the piece's action, Edith Abraham had, possibly, the heaviest part and discharged it admirably. Difficult was the part of Rose O'May whose character evolves from that of a simple, mountain girl to city sophistication during the fourteen months covered by the play but it was handled well by Margaret Pitchford.

Difficult Parts

The play concerns the effort of swaggering foppish Lester Van to obtain the hand and money of Rose, and the love which Rose has for Daniel French, cultured, studious young man who fears any advances to Rose would be interpreted as a play for her money. Thus heavy responsibility fell on the shoulders of Bert Lacey in the key role of Lester Van and James Price Jr. in the Daniel French role. They demonstrated the ability of veterans.

Excellent acting was done in other parts. Wilton Hillier portrayed Wade Carver a blustering, self-important native and unwelcome suitor. Veteran of many previous All Saints' plays, Harry Carter did well the comedy bit as Orpheus Jackson, a rustic Romeo. Again James Price Sr., director of the play, called upon his black-face talent for the part of Old Joe, shiftless old negro, and Mrs. Gordon Webb enacted cleverly the difficult part of Hester O'May, Rose's autocratic maiden aunt.

Fine Set

Sybil Hall and Gwen Dobbin carried their share of the performance in the respective parts of Peggy French, Daniel's quiet, attractive sister, and worldlywise Letty Van, depicting Baby Joan, an ignorant mountain girl who is smitten with the charms of the community pals. Marjory Lacey was good, and Mrs. A. W. Heckman got the best out of the lesser part required of Mrs. Courtwene, a kind, elderly woman who aids in advancing the action.

In no small way was the success of the show due to the excellent outdoor garden set constructed by Mr. Price. Lighting effects rarely afforded in amateur productions enhanced the attractive set.

Stage manager was Gwen Dobbin, Homer Lundy serving as master of properties. Harry Carter was stage carpenter and Jessie McConomy served the production as treasurer.

During the play and between acts, Mrs. E. W. Glover provided piano accompaniment. George Levell entertained on the accordian and Lyle Glover and N. Todd a song and ukelele number.

The play is to be repeated tonight and is to be available for presentation elsewhere during the coming weeks.

The Old Red Patch

How well it is named—The Old Red Patch—true,
It's the sign of a bipod-drenched Volunteer crew
Who fought for peace in the Flanders mud,
Stained through the ages with human blood.

You men who stood 'gainst that first yellow mist
That poisoned the lungs of young men in their prime,
Keep green their memory, honour their name—
And how can you do it? By playing the game.

The grey hairs now showing on many a head,
Sown in the horrors of mutilated living and dead,
Remind us of years that these men in their prime
Dared the foul slaughterer many a time.

Wear the RED PATCH with the pride that's its due;
Take heed—for in time 'twill be worn by so few,
That the laddies now asking us why it is worn
Will remember with pride when we are all gone.

You who are wearing the PATCH as your right,
With memories green of the clamour of fight,
Carry yourselves through the days that remain
To the honor and glory of RED PATCH fame.

LORNE E. CONWAY STORE MANAGER

Former Peterborough Man Appointed Head Of Grafton Store In Brantford

BRANTFORD, April 23 — The name of Conway has been associated with Grafton clothes for 57 years and less than a week ago the Brantford store was honored by permanent appointment as Manager here of L. E. Conway, formerly of Peterborough, who has been a member of the firm of Grafton and Company, Clothiers, for 30 years. He is the son of the late W. E. Conway, who was Manager of the Peterborough store, and a nephew of H. E. Conway, Managing Director of the firm, who for a number of years was Manager of the local store and made a host of friends during his time in Brantford.

L. E. Conway started as a cash boy in the Peterborough store and has worked his way to the front, being Assistant Manager of the Peterborough store before coming here last June in the capacity of Acting Manager during the long illness of the late Thomas D. Lunn, Manager.

The appointment of Mr. Conway as Manager was made last Wednesday at a meeting of the Board of Directors at Dundas, head office of the firm. His father was for 6 years a member of the staff and his uncle has 41 years of service behind him. The name of Conway has for more than half a century been synonymous with the manufacture and sale of Grafton clothes.

Mr. Conway stated yesterday that he was proud to know that the Grafton store here had for so long received the support of Brantford shoppers looking for the best at the best prices in men's and boys' clothing and he expressed appreciation for the confidence the buying public had shown in Grafton's.

"We here at the store will continue to give the fine service and show the same courtesy and efficiency the Brantford public has always been worthy of," Mr. Conway said.

Czechoslovakia has appointed a commission to adjust working conditions of those who make musical instruments at home.

REFINING OF OIL RELATED TO CLUB

George Cunningham Addresses Kinsmen On Refining Of Petroleum

George Cunningham, district manager of the Imperial Oil Company, addressed the Kinsmen Club at its regular dinner on Thursday night. Mr. Cunningham took for his subject "The Refining of Petroleum" and by means of diagrams explained the various methods.

Past President Dr. Robert Nott presided and Howard L. Shimer, manager of Selden's Book store was initiated into the membership of the club. Mr. Shimer is the seventh man to join the club in the past three months.

Mr. Cunningham first told of the many products which come from crude oil and also mentioned that to-day the greater part of the Canadian supply has to be imported from the United States for the available Canadian supply would only last six weeks.

Three methods of refining were explained by the speaker, and he also told about the many new products which are being found annually in the various forms of refining the crude oil passes through.

H. H. P. Johnston added encouragement to the club in its service work and in retiring as chairman of the Sunshine Committee he urged the members to support the eye clinic for a real worthwhile work was being done among the children of the city.

Following the meeting President Don Lowrie, Don Scott, Vern Sellrik, Emmett Sheehy and Dr. E. M. Cowgill left for Montreal to attend the district convention.

FIVE GENERATORS BUILT FOR ABITIBI SET PROUD RECORD

W. E. Ross Addresses Peterborough Branch Of Engineering Institute

OF INTEREST TO CITY

When the five big generators built by the Canadian General Electric Company in Peterborough were installed some years ago in the immense power house that harnesses the Abitibi River, they whirled into operation without a flaw in their test runs and subsequently in their regular service of producing electric power, W. E. Ross, manager of the company's contract department, related in his illustrated address to a largely attended meeting of the local branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada in Paragon Hall Thursday night.

To engineers and other men of the Canadian General Electric Company's staff it was probably an old story by this time, an accomplished fact of expert designing and production, but to the layman listening to this highly interesting sequel to the shipment of the big machines from the factory it seemed an amazing achievement, of which, to quote Mr. Ross, "the fellows in Peterborough have good reason to be proud."

Of Interest To City

Like most of the "talks" that are delivered to the engineers during their season of winter meetings, the account given by Mr. Ross of how the big dam was erected and the power house constructed with its massive and complicated machinery defies adequate reporting, especially lacking his illustrations. Much of it would have been far over the heads of ordinary citizens, but as neighbors of the big plant in the south end they would have been deeply interested in the general outline of the progress of this "job," and would have gained a clearer appreciation of the engineering skill, snap craftsmanship and ability in assembly and erection of the men who put all this work in their stride, creating in Abitibi canyon one of the largest and most efficient power developments in Canada.

Mr. Ross' address provided a splendid answer to the average Peterborough man's vague wondering about what happens to the big "stators" and "rotors" after they leave Peterborough securely boxed on railway cars. And briefly the answer in this instance was to the effect that the giant machines were put together again, hooked up to the water power, and settled down to actual operation as smoothly as when they were tested in the shop.

In Northern Ontario

The Abitibi Canyon Development is located on the Abitibi River 560 miles north of Toronto, and about 70 miles north of Cochrane. The construction of dam and power house is a separate story. The contracts for the electrical equipment were concluded in December, 1930. They included five turbines, each of 56,000 horse power at 150 revolutions per minute, under a 238 foot head of water. Five alternating current generators with main exciters and pilot exciters, control board, current breakers, transformers and so on. The transformer sets were made in the Davenport factory of the C.G.E. Company, Toronto.

Five turbines driving the generators were made by the Canadian Allis Chalmers Company. The cast steel runner of each turbine is hit by 67 tons of water per second, equivalent to the energy of a 10 ton truck doing 300 miles an hour; and that energy is absorbed by the runner in 1-16 of a second, Mr. Ross said.

Massive Machines

Slides showed the progress of setting up the generators of vertical shaft type, each driven by a water wheel. The size of each machine unit may be imagined from the approximate weight of 220,000 pounds. In the winding of the stator or stationary part of the generator 67 miles of wire were used; and 3½ miles of copper strap in the revolving field winding.

Details described by Mr. Ross included the special brakes by which the rotating part of each machine may be stopped in an emergency or otherwise; the bearings on which the rotor revolves; the details of insulation in building each machine; and a ventilating system. Cool air enters each generator at the top, and the hot air it causes is discharged through an opening in the side of the stator and carried outdoors, or in winter it may be discharged indoors to heat the power plant. Mr. Ross mentioned that an exact cardboard model of this ventilating system had been made by Hubert Sills of the Peterborough plant, but it had been almost destroyed in handling by engineers and others who had examined it. Devices for the extinguishing of fire that might break out in a machine were explained, and in addition to the ventilation ducts, Mr. Ross outlined the piping of each generator for supplying oil and water. Details of the transformers and other equipment were supplemented by a brief review of the tremendous "rigging" job by which the parts of the big machine were assembled in the power house during winter weather north of Cochrane.

No Engineering Worry

In his conclusion Mr. Ross said: "When we consider that these units have the highest horsepower rating of any Canadian hydro unit, and in size of unit and plant capacity this installation ranks well up among all Canadian installations, it would be expected that during the construction period there would be a normal amount of grief. Therefore it is surprising to note that the plant was installed, started up, tested, and has been operating continuously with probably less attention from our engineering department than any other similar plant ever constructed.

"Ordinarily in the construction of a plant of this size, it is necessary for the engineers responsible for the design of the equipment to visit the site on one or two occasions. This has not been the case in this instance."

RECALLS FISHING TRIPS

As a sidelight in his address at St. Paul's Church on Thursday night Denton Massey, M.P., referred to the many pleasant trips he had made to Peterborough and the fun he had enjoyed fishing and duck-shooting with Chris Graham and Sid Black, both of whom were, incidentally, among the large audience which heard the leader of the York Bible class.

WANT PARK BUILDING

Although no action was taken the other night the Peterborough Cricket Club are still hopeful that they may be able to have one of the buildings that are to be taken out of Inverlea Park moved to the Oval to be used as a store room for their equipment. They suggest that it could be painted neatly in green and put in a position where it would not detract in the least from the appearance of the park.

AUTO CLUB DINNER

Ladies are to receive a special welcome at the annual dinner meeting of Peterborough Automobile Club to be held at Empress Hotel on Monday evening next, it is announced. The guest speaker for the occasion is to be Lumsden Cummings, president of the Ontario Motor League, who will be accompanied on his visit here by officers of the League from Toronto, and by members of Hamilton and Oshawa Auto Clubs.

TRANSFERS APPROVED

The Transfer Committee of the United Church of Canada, composed of the Moderator, Right Rev. Dr. Peter Bryce; the Secretary, Rev. Gordon A. Sisco; Presidents of the Church Conferences and five laymen, met at the Wesley Buildings, Toronto, to consider transfers of ministers from one Conference to another. Among the transfers approved were Rev. C. V. McLean of Peterborough from the Bay of Quinte Conference to London, and Rev. E. W. Young, who will become pastor of St. Andrew's United, from London Conference to Bay of Quinte Conference.

Trinity Men's Club Hears Denton Massey

Denton Massey, M.P., was the guest speaker at a very enjoyable banquet held on Thursday evening under the auspices of Trinity Church Men's Club in the basement of the church with some 120 guests in attendance. Mr. Massey spoke on the origin of the York Bible Class and its aims and objects and also stressed the debt that the men of a church owed to the church and to the pastor.

Clifford Hall contributed a solo that added greatly to the enjoyment of the occasion and the Sunday School orchestra of fourteen pieces was also heard to advantage. Wilfrid Derry, secretary of the club expressed thanks to the ladies of the church for their assistance in staging the banquet and Rev. George Easton voiced appreciation to Mr. Massey for his address. The ladies did the catering with Mrs. B. Moore as convener.

DIXON IS GIVEN 3-MONTH TERM SELLING COUNT

Charge Of Selling Liquor To a Minor Withdrawn By Crown

BELIEVES YOUTH

When Ross Dixon, 810 Sherbrooke street appeared for judgment before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., this (Friday) morning, His Worship declared that after a careful review of all the evidence he found the accused guilty of unlawful sale of liquor. Dixon was sentenced to 3-months imprisonment, while a further charge of selling liquor to a minor was withdrawn when Crown Attorney V. J. McGiderry, K.C., intimated he did not propose to offer any evidence on that count.

A week ago when the evidence was presented, the court learned a surprising story of liquor drinking on the part of two minors. One of them a youth of 17-years testified that he had bought rye whiskey from Dixon and that afterwards he and a 15-year-old companion had gone to a nearby sand pit and later up near the Orange Hall to drink the liquor.

The accused who was represented by T. J. Carley, K.C., offered a complete denial of allegations made by prosecution witnesses, and said that at the time the youth was stated to have called at his house to purchase liquor, he (Dixon) was at the city weigh scales with a load of junk.

Giving his reasons for judgment this morning, His Worship declared that he accepted the evidence of the youth that he did buy liquor from Dixon and disbelieved that part of Dixon's evidence in which he said he had not made a sale.

He congratulated both Mr. Carley and Mr. McGiderry for the able manner in which they had handled the case, and believed, "The case has been well tried and well presented."

WILLIAM LANG TO GIVE ADDRESS

Winners In Essay Contest Will Be Presented With Awards

Lovers of wild life and the lake district are due for a thrill of enjoyment this evening when William Lang, famed pictorial sportsman, of Toronto, shows his colored motion pictures on the screen in the Public Library lecture room at 8 o'clock. Through the movies the audience will journey into some of the lakes in Algonquin Park where few white men rarely penetrate and see fish and wild game sport themselves. Mr. Lang used an airplane in reaching these lakes.

Several other reels will display Mr. Lang's experience fishing in the Rockies and in California and will show how the Hollywood stars enjoy angling. Ladies will be keenly interested in these pictures.

Mr. Lang will be accompanied to Peterborough by Tom Jull, of Toronto. Both these men are known throughout Canada as anglers extraordinary, and local sportsmen will recall their previous visit here when they told of a fishing trip to Newfoundland.

Another highlight of the program, which is sponsored by the Peterborough Fish and Game Protective Association, will be the presentation of prize awards to school pupils who were winners in the association's essay contest.

A number of members of the Oshawa Fish and Game Association are coming here this evening to see Mr. Lang's movies.

Rev. M. C. Parr Gives Address Campbellford Church Banquet

Men's Club Of St. John's United Holds Father-Son Event

150 IN ATTENDANCE

(Examiner Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, April 23.—Rev. M. C. Parr of George Street United Church, Peterborough, was the guest speaker at a father and son banquet held in the basement of St. John's United Church under the auspices of the Men's Club on Thursday evening. President of the club, C. W. Ballier, who acted as chairman, welcomed the 150 men and boys who sat down to the banquet which was prepared by the ladies of the congregation. The orchestra under the direction of Albert Hazel, supplied music during the banquet, following which Arthur Southworth led in community singing. Douglas Lucy, Jack Connor, Roy Young, Gerald Sloggett and Harold Neal constituted a boys' chorus, who sang accompanied by Mr. Hazel, after which Jack Cassan gave a piano solo and a selection on the piano and mouth-organ.

Boy Member Speaks.

Jack Carr, local member to the Ontario Older Boys' Parliament, was then called on for a few words, and spoke briefly of the work of the Older Boys' Parliament, which although modeled from the Provincial and Federal Parliaments, was conducted along somewhat different lines in that it was quite in order for one cabinet minister to oppose a bill presented by another minister. A guitar solo by Roy Young and a violin solo by Earl Nelson were followed by a one-act play depicting the scene among the disciples in an upstairs room following the crucifixion of Christ. Those who took parts in the play were Jack Carr, Charles Bushner, Ross Richardson, James Bennett, Harold Neal, Jack Cassan, Jack Connor, Gerald Sloggett, Gerald Duncalfe and Douglas Lucy.

The toast to the fathers was given by Lloyd Richardson, and was replied to by M. S. Mowat, who suggested that the best in a boy could be brought out by the companionship, co-operation and example set by his father. "Don't wait till the boy becomes a man to get acquainted with him, and don't make promises which you do not intend or cannot fulfill," was the advice he gave.

Rev. Harold B. Neale introduced the guest speaker, who expressed a welcome to the guests, saying that he was most happy to be present under such pleasant circumstances, as it was through organizations of this kind and through the churches that the boys were being guided through life. "Fellowship of dads and lads is imperative, and we need more occasions of this kind," said Rev. Parr. "In this day and age we seem to be so busy making a living that we haven't time to make a life." Saying that fathers should analyze themselves to see how they measured up, the speaker stated that the father and son banquet idea received its inception in Providence, Rhode Island, in the year 1907, and now 30 years later were still effectively carrying the father and son into closer relationship. It is estimated that a boy spend 3,000 hours outside of school and eating and sleeping, and it is the duty of the father to capitalize on these leisure hours by forming a comradeship which is worth far more than exhortation. The father who has no time for companionship usually has plenty of time for golf, bowling and other forms of personal amusement.

It is during these leisure hours that the father should be working on the hidden possibilities in their boys which is the highest type of work they can do. "Boys are nuggets from which the crown of manhood is made bearing the image of the king."

"What is a boy worth?" asked the speaker. "He is worth just what you make him through the years of culture and toil on the part of those looking after him." The actual cost of raising a boy and looking after him until he is old enough to make his own way has been set at $10,000, which means sacrifice, care, attention, and planning on the part of those who do it. "You boys are potentially men in the making and we must try to shape and form you into the best kind of men."

A Hard Labor Talk.

"Hard work and staying on the job are the way to get through this world," continued the speaker, quoting Van Dyke's famous lines:

"Four things a man must learn to do
If he would make his record true,
To love his fellow-men sincerely,
To act from honest motives purely,
To trust in God and Heaven securely."

Nearly all boys are inherently good, but they sometimes go wrong through bad handling. Constant repression means an ultimate explosion, asserted Rev. Mr. Parr. "Make the right things pleasant and the wrong things costly, which thereby teaches the boy character, which is not only desirable, but that it also pays."

In conclusion the speaker stated that there was no such thing as a boys problem, but instead it was a man's problem. A. J. Armour moved a vote of thanks to the speaker, which was seconded by Dr. R. O. Richardson. A vote of thanks to the ladies was made by R. E. Dolman and T. J. Crainshead, while B. N. Carr moved thanks to the Men's Club for making the occasion possible.

Bonus Advocate

A bill providing a cash bonus of $75 to all mothers and fathers, regardless of their needs, has been passed by the New York state assembly. The money awarded to the parents is for the care of every child born in the state, and unless rejected by the parents, is to be used for pre-natal, hospital and general medical expenses. Assemblyman Emerson D. Fite, Vassar College professor (ABOVE), is the author of the bill. He is pictured, smiling, after hearing of his victory.

LATEST MACHINE BRINGS LIFE BACK TO HUMAN HEART

Made To Function After Organ Ceased Beating As Long As Six Hours

SUCCESS ON OVER 100

By Stephen J. McDonough
(Associated Press Science Writer.)

ST. LOUIS, April 23 (AP)—A new machine in which human hearts are revived after death and made to resume their normal blood-pumping function was demonstrated today before the American College of Physicians.

Dr. William B. Kounts of Washington University described how he had brought more than 100 hearts back to normal functioning after they had ceased beating in the human body for as long as six hours and induced them to again take up their rhythmic beating.

He described the device as different from the "glass heart" developed by Dr. Alexis Carrel, Rockefeller Institute Nobel Prize winner, and Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. The Carrel-Lindbergh device acts as a pump to carry nutrient solutions to a piece of tissue to make it continue living, Dr. Kounts declared.

How It Works.

In the Washington University apparatus, however, the heart is the pump which forces blood through a system of pipes and reservoirs similar to those of the body and a recent modification makes it possible for an entire liver, kidney or other human organ to be connected to the artificial circulation so that its behavior may be studied in ways not possible within the body.

No effort has been made, the Washington University scientist said, to determine how long a revived human heart would continue to beat after it has been started. "We generally stop them after about six or seven hours, at the conclusion of an experiment. The vigor which they show when doing the work of pumping in the apparatus gives some idea of what a tough piece of muscle the human heart is."

NO SPONGE COUNT McCUMBER CASE

Nurse Admits Usual Practice Of Check Before And After Operation, Omitted

KINGSTON, Ont., April 23 (CP)—Evidence for the defence in the case of Gertrude McCumber and Brard McCumber, suing Dr. I. G. Bogart and the Hotel Dieu Hospital for malpractice, ended yesterday, and cross-examination of Hotel Dieu witnesses, conducted by D. G. Cunningham, elicited the information that there was no check made of the sponges used in the operation. The case continued today.

Rita Laurin, who acted as instrument nurse during Mrs. McCumber's operation, told of the usual practices regarding her duties and said that sponges are counted before and after an operation, and a comparison made as to whether any is missing.

She said there was no sponge nurse at the operation on Mrs. McCumber and no check made of the sponges used.

Dr. Bogart, during cross-examination, said that in 21,000 surgical cases he had since starting practice, he could only recall three similar to Mrs. McCumber's.

Instructions Carried Out.

Sister Mary Magdalene said she had been a member of the Order at the Hotel Dieu Hospital for 33 years, and for some time had been floor supervisor at the Hotel Dieu. She said special care was given Mrs. McCumber. The case had come to her attention and she knew instructions of Dr. Bogart were carried out.

Nurse Louise M. C. Dade told of the care given Mrs. McCumber before and after the operation.

Nurse Alice Kearney told of going to Mrs. McCumber with Dr. Shaver when the latter removed two inches of gauze from the wound caused by the operation. She said she informed the floor supervisor and afterwards saw Dr. Boucher, who was Dr. Bogart's assistant, following which Mrs. McCumber was taken to the operating room.

Nurse Ann Fleming said that she was to have been sponge nurse for the operation, but that there was an emergency operation at the time and she was taken off the McCumber case.

QUARTER FOUND IN EGG

One egg she was examining showed a black spot. Miss Moen became curious, cracked open the egg and found a shiny quarter.

Madrid Commander Gives Orders

One of the most renowned commanders of the Spanish government troops which have been defending Madrid for the last six months is 'El Campesion" (The Peasant) shown ABOVE giving an order to a motorcycle dispatch rider. While the seige of Madrid continues with heavy losses on both sides, the defenders are reported holding their positions, gaining little ground but giving none to the rebel troops. Fighting in other parts of war-torn Spain has turned lately in favor of the loyalists who have inflicted heavy losses on Italian, German and Moorish troops at several points.

A Trip To United States

Visit Quaker City.

You may travel to Columbus, Ohio, on Route 42, taking a short cut through many important cities or you may travel from Meadowville through Mercer to Pittsburg. There, many noted places may be visited, but one characteristic I'd like to stress is that Pittsburg, like Philadelphia, is a Quaker City. In every city you will find famous churches of many faiths, but few of the Quaker. It is logical one desires to visit the church of your faith, but it is wise to broaden your views and knowledge of other religions so as not to have a biased opinion. The Quakers are of a class you will never regret knowing. I've known them all my life, never heard a word of harm from them, but the great character study is unique, and in that district you will enjoy both.

Good roads should not be any problem, and at this time of the year little detouring, and so on to Youngstown we travel. Be sure to see it at night, when all the steel mills are at full blast, for you will feel as if the city is on fire, and it is a sight that you will never witness elsewhere. The Vindicator News in Youngstown or any of the chief newspapers in Cleveland would be very enlightening for a traveller to visit and I know you will profit greatly by so doing.

Schools are a subject which is much neglected. A farmer knows all about his pigs or cattle. He knows the age of each, and also all the weeds, while a business man thinks he knows all about his business, and the housewife pays particular attention just what foods go into their stomachs, but one would be surprised if they asked questions and learn how little these elders know about the material being fed their children in the line of education. People too often neglect the vital things in life. If you do not have children, your friends do, so as Youngstown, Cleveland and Columbus are all noted for the most progressive methods in teaching, supervising, building or school equipment, and accommodations, to suit the needs of children and not the pocket book alone, it will be time well spent to see special art, oratory dramatic, physical culture, dancing, music or social science classes of these schools.

Cleveland, Cincinnati, Youngstown, Columbus and Akron are all noted for their interest in advanced musical projects. Don't leave Cleveland or Cincinnati without seeing their great musical conservatories. The great spring opera season opens in Cleveland in May and affords an opportunity not often experienced to witness the better operas.

Leaving Youngstown, you may travel down the Ohio Valley, reaching towns all along the way, and being able to look over onto the shores of West Virginia and Kentucky as you go on to Cincinnati, or you may go north-west to Cleveland, preferably the Ohio route, for if you went to Cleveland first, well, that is so large with all its twenty or more adjoining boroughs, that your time and money may be spent and many other noted points would be missed on your trip.

Flood Destruction.

All along the Ohio Valley southward the distress destruction, heaped debris, etc., may be seen in increasing standard. The smaller villages not previously protected showed a great amount of destruction, and any description of the flood given out by the press or radio would not paint the tragic desolation as those who saw it or who experienced being in the flood. It is most pitiful to ride along with few worries and see sadness, desolation, heaps of debris, buildings in many places jammed against trees. We say sporting flowers blooming up through the wreckage, while occasionally a person with a longing far-away look in her eyes languidly swept or raked to get a space clear of debris, where green grass was almost ready to cut. There they could sit and rest while planning what to do next. You could see their house saturated and covered with mud, windows and doors broken in or nothing left but the foundation.

The flood sufferers remarked on the relief assistance sent from Peterborough district and their Canadian neighbors, and showed their gratitude in every way possible.

On you go to Cincinnati, seeing increasing distress. This famous Ohio city has many outstanding features with the Musical Conservatory and WLW radio station. Study the structure, etc., then see WTAM radio station in Cleveland, and compare. These points of view are most educational. Northward you go, towards the great Indian-Serpent Mound district. Various cities may be seen on the way to Columbus if a side tour is taken, but the direct route through to Dayton is advisable. Dayton's pride is her Cash Register Corporation, which products are worldly known. For instance, think of all in Peterborough who possess Dayton cash register products which go to all parts of the universe. See this place, and don't be afraid to ask questions, for a lot of valuable information can be obtained here. Inquire about their co-operative plan and the work at the plant with certain college plans. This gives a student a chance to study and educate himself by working in the plant. Dayton has other features, but that locality, as in Xenia, the next city, are noted for children's, old soldiers', sailors' and blind people's homes. You would enjoy seeing them, and they you. Mrs. Florence Hale, a great leader in the Children's Home at Dayton, is a wonderful personage to know. Wilbert-Orville Wright's aviation field is the most noted spot to visit out of Dayton. They, you may recall, were the first to successfully fly a plane. Orville is still living in Dayton.

Educational Centre.

In the Xenia section tobacco and rope factories may be seen, together with the second largest colored college in the world, and on to Cedarville, where a large paper mill and a college is located, and the Antioch College at Yellow Springs is nationally known. This section has the great distinction of having more than 16 colleges (some nationally known) within a 75-mile radius. Students are found there from all parts of the world, for all types of colleges are represented, including Miami University. Near Selina is one of the oldest Quaker churches in Ohio, and it is wonderful to compare it with the one William Penn attended while living in Philadelphia. The surrounding country is greatly noted for agriculture. Statistics show, is a great farm tool manufacturing centre, and that of electrical supplies as well as an automobile centre. Look over your appliances at home, you may find Springfield, Ohio, products, including electric fans. On through Charleston to London, and beyond, many great cattle farms may be seen. Columbus is entered with the most beautiful new insurance company building towering over eight 47 stories high. Visit the Ohio State capital buildings, and if possible call on Governor Martin L. Davey. You all remember him for his great speeches over the radio, telling us how to protect our timber and explaining tree surgery. Compare these government buildings with ours at Toronto and Ottawa.

Many sights are great to see there, but on to Akron. We go via Mt. Vernon and Wooster, where a great experimental farm and college are located. Akron, the world-known rubber production city, has the Seiberling, Goodyear, Firestone and Goodrich as chief interests in this line. It is interesting to visit the Goodrich plant, for many of their employees are college graduates or from all walks of life, showing the highest standard of skill, constant vigilance, and superior workmanship through all lines embracing the production of more than 30,000 rubber articles. Visit the Goodrich president, and he will help you in your tour of the plant. Don't fail to ask to see how other articles are made besides a tire. If Firestone, the president of the Firestone Company would be nice to you, but there, as in all other plants, excepting the Goodrich, you could only see a tire or tube made as these two articles are all any other plant makes. We just recently received a most interesting letter from the president of the Goodrich Company, and a visit to his company you'll never forget. The Goodyear Zeppelins Aircrooms just out of Akron is known the world over. It was there that a few Germany sent some of her most skilled scientists to study the workmanship of our own Quaker Oats plant and others.

Now to Cleveland, where so much time is necessary to see all the great things. It is not like Chicago, etc., greatest in the world for so many things, but for greatness it is stepping along at a rapid rate.

In Cleveland parking space is at a premium, and costly. You will also find the traffic rules different all over the city in points where a rush of traffic, the various ways streets intersect, etc., till it may be a problem for the stranger to get anywhere during the rush hour. For instance, the main square with 28 different corners in sight to watch pedestrians and the seven streets enhanced plus 76 eight cross-sections you might wonder which way to go and at the same time wishing you could fly straight up. At such hours you can ride on a slow street car, speedy rapid transits, double-deck busses, electric trains, etc., but if you know how it does not cost much. Inquire about their weekly pass system, even if you don't expect to stay more than two days. On such you can ride all day or night as often as you like. Special price on tickets and a penny transfer will take you miles when using them. The middle of May finds Cleveland in full bloom, with rhododendrons, azalias, etc.

Don't fail to call on some of the great clubs, theatres, churches and business organizations, for it is there, as in other cities mentioned, many of such are found according to population. If you are interested in building improvements, take your time in going through that cities, exclusive boroughs, walk into any mansion or home having a sign out, "Open for inspection," and you surely will get your eyes full of beauty specs and plenty of new ideas just for the seeking. Don't hesitate to ask questions, and don't fail to see the great Home in the Sky at the worldly-known 54-story Union Terminal Building, where you see a city within a city. Go through the model home in the Higbee or Sterling Welsh Stores. There you'll see new housing plans to your liking. While at the Sterling, ask them to show to you their finest furniture and rugs; you will think you are in New York or Chicago, for in such stores money flows from the pocket-book where buying goes on as rapidly as water flowing in a stream. You may not see much value in such an inspection, but it is enlightening to compare the business with other cities.

(To be Continued Tomorrow).

ABERHART FIGHTS ON

Confident Social Credit Possible For Alberta.

RICH RIVER, Alta., April 23 (CP)—Even if technical experts are not obtained to assist in implementing Social Credit in Alberta, it will not halt the Government program, Premier Aberhart said here last night.

On a visit to his home constituency of Okotoks-Rich River, Mr. Aberhart said:

"I have never said—nor do I believe—Social Credit cannot be introduced in Alberta. I am willing to support anyone who will work on it and, if nobody will come, we will go ahead alone."

The Premier declared he made many enemies "because I wouldn't give in."

SWAYING BRIDGE IS DISMANTLED AFTER LONG USE

Unique Span Linking Canada With U.S. Earned Profit For Builder

THRILLS FOR USERS

CLAIR, N.B., April 23 (CP) — A unique "bridge of sighs" for timid souls has vanished into the limbo of memories, some of them alcoholic. Remains of the once thrill-providing span connecting Canadian and United States territory have been dismantled.

Unused since 1930, the apparently flimsy structure suspended over the St. John river between this Madawaska County village and the town of Fort Kent, Me., was wrecked by a wind storm last October. Dismantling, begun in February and continued this spring, was considered necessary to remove an obstacle to lumber drives and to avert danger of ice and log jams damaging a new international highway bridge nearby.

The old suspension bridge, of wire cable and for pedestrians only, was first supported by only one cement pier, set in mid-river. This proved inadequate. Distance between the pier and either bank was 400 feet, and swaying of the bridge made crossings almost impossible.

Two other piers were built, boards formed the flooring and guide cables were added as stabilizers. Although diminished, the swaying continued and crossings were unsteady under the best conditions. Timid persons crep along on hands and knees, as did United States residents returning after imbibing Canadian liquor. At times of strong wind the bridge swayed alarmingly. Anxiety increased when flood waters almost touched the unsteady floor boards.

The unusual type of span was built at a cost of $20,000 by the late Joseph R. Long, who had an eye for business. Permits for erection was obtained from the Canadian and United States governments only after many requests and help by the late John Costigan, Dominion representative for Madawaska-Victoria, and J. A. Laliberte, then Aroostook's representative in the Maine legislature.

First Built In 1902

Construction began in the winter of 1902-03. The structure served for eight or nine months of the year until 1930, when the new, substantial highway bridge was opened. Few repairs were necessary. The cable bridge had only enough room for two persons to walk or crawl, as occasion required, side by side. In winter, when crossings usually could be made over the river ice, the bridge was generally unused.

Long was one of four liquor vendors in Clair who fared well owing to prohibition in Maine. He accurately decided that a bridge ending near his door would attract a larger number of customers and that in a few years the toll returns would repay construction costs. Liquor was cheap. Fort Kent's thirsty citizens were accustomed to getting their supplies at Clair and thousands of lumbermen had to pass through the two places on their way to or from the woods.

Cable ferries charged foot passengers 10 cents for a single crossing and five cents for return. Those using "Long's Foot Bridge" paid five cents per passage. The largest day's collection he ever made was $165 on a Fourth of July holiday, when horse races were held at Clair. Opening of a departmental store at Fort Kent increased the toll collections. Saturday returns varied from $60 to $80 and on other days from a few dollars to $30.

The collection was made at the Canadian end by an employe stationed in a little building at the bridge entrance. Until 1918 the bridge remained open all night but no collector was on duty from midnight until morning. In that year the United States immigration department ordered fitting of a gate to close the structure from 10 p.m. to seven a.m., but late imbibers frequently turned acrobat in order to get around the gate and reach home.

Clark Gable Appears In Court To Testify

Handsome screen actor Clark Gable caused an uproar among feminine admirers, gathered in the courthouse corridors at Los Angeles, when he appeared in federal court there to testify in the mail fraud trial of Mrs. Violet Wells Norton, Winnipeg, who allegedly sought to extort money from him, claiming he was the father of her 14-year-old daughter, Gwendoline Norton. Mrs. Norton is said to have written several letters to Gable, representing him as the father of her child, and asking for his help with her play writing. Jack L. Smith, said to be a private detective, is co-defendant with Mrs. Norton on the mail fraud charges. The above photographs, taken as the central figures appeared in court, show, Upper Left, Mrs. Norton and, Lower Left, Jack Smith, the detective. At the Right is Clark Gable with William H. Gable, the screen celebrity's father on the Left, and U. S. Assistant District Attorney Jack Powell on the right.

LIFE TOUGH IN FOREIGN LEGION ESCAPES CLAIMS

Manitoban Served Two Years In North Africa With French Soldiers

ESCAPED OVER DESERT

EDMONTON, April 22.—(CP) — Hardships in the French Foreign Legion from which he made a daring escape were described by Fred Connell, Manitoba-born adventurer, when he stopped here recently while enroute to northern mining fields.

In 1932 he signed up for a five-year term in the Legion on outpost duty in Morocco. After two years of menace and privation during which the heat almost drove him mad, he made a desperate escape on foot over 300 miles of enemy-infested rock and sand.

"If you can find glamor in thirst, dirt, hunger, forced marching over monotonous miles of sand, heaping shale for endless desert roads, or existing for days on rice and macaroni diet in an outpost surrounded by native snipers, and all for two cents a day, well, I guess you can have it," he said.

Romance in the Foreign Legion was confined to creations of Hollywood scenarists. He had seen scant evidence to support the tradition of dark-eyed Arab beauties enticing handsome legionnaires from duty's stern path.

Early in 1935, Connell and his partner, Jack Marshall, of Dublin, began to plan their escape. Returning in headwaters at Sidi Bel Abbes after an encounter with native snipers, the two Britons succeeded in purchasing civilian clothing from the "forbidden quarter."

They fled the barracks late one night and set out on the 300-mile journey to the port of Algiers, travelling mostly at night without map or compass and with only a meagre supply of food and water. They knew they would face a firing squad if caught.

After 14 days of slow torture as they toiled over desert and mountains they reached their goal, not much caring whether they lived or died, Connell said.

They stowed away on a British freighter bound for Liverpool and for the first time drew an easy breath. "In Canada," he said, "we are about the most fortunate people in the world. You don't know what it is to live in a human hell, but if you did you could understand just how precious freedom is."

PIONEERED FAST TIME

Prime Mover Of Daylight Saving Time Dies In United States.

NEW YORK, April 23 (AP)—Mrs. Marcus M. Marks, 67, pioneer in the daylight savings time movement, died yesterday. Although her late husband, a former Manhattan borough president, was called the "father" of daylight saving, Mrs. Marks was credited with first noticing the idea in a German newspaper and suggesting its adoption in this country. Since then it has spread to Canada.

Prospectors are flocking to the spot in the interior of British Guiana where a diamond weighing 203 carats was found recently.

FAMOUS VESSEL ENDS HER DAYS

Bark W. B. Flint Carried First Cargo Of Tea From China To Vancouver

VANCOUVER, April 23—(CP)—A heap of ashes is all that remains today of the famous W. B. Flint, United States bark, first vessel to bring a cargo of tea to British Columbia waters, at the same time supplying first freight shipment from west to east over Canadian Pacific Railway lines in 1886.

She was set afire at Seattle a few days ago so that her metal could be salvaged. The old vessel was still handsome despite many scars of conquest.

It was mid-afternoon of July 27, 1886, that she first reached Vancouver and continued upstream to Port Moody, then western terminus of the newly-finished railway. She carried 1,740 half-chests of tea, and these were soon rolling across the Dominion as the first paid transcontinental freight shipment.

The W. B. Flint was a wooden vessel built at Bath, Maine, in 1883. She had been laid up on Lake Union in Seattle since 1924.

WAITRESS SLAIN CLUB VESTIBULE

Police Hunt Former Lover — Squabble Over Victim's Present Mate

NEW YORK, April 23 (AP)—An attractive 30-year-old waitress was found stabbed to death today in the vestibule of the Columbia University Residence Club, where she lived with men they described as "a Greek," and former lover of the victim.

The murdered woman, who worked in a downtown restaurant, was Irene Wadis, a resident of the Columbia Club for a year.

The murderer, according to Inspector Michael P. McDermott, apparently accosted Miss Wadis as she was leaving for work and, after an argument in which he tried to persuade her to leave a man with whom she had been living for the last six months, plunged a knife into her abdomen.

ALL GIRLS GIGGLE

That Is What They Do When Young Men Talk.

NEW YORK, April 23.—(AP)—A judicial opinion of the younger generation:

"All girls giggle nowadays. That's what you do while the young man talks."

This dictum was offered by Supreme Court Justice Edward J. Byrne, hearing the $25,000 damage suit of Margaret Darnell, 21, who claims that ever since an automobile accident she has been subject to hysterical fits of giggling.

"SING-ON" STRIKE

Jews Lock Themselves in Building And Spend Night Singing.

SOFIA, April 23 (C.P.-Reuters)—A new kind of protest—it may be described as a "sing-on" strike—has been carried out here by local Jews, offended by British policy in Palestine.

Three hundred Sofia Jews assembled in the largest synagogue here, heard fiery speeches, and then locked themselves in the building for 24 hours. Thy spent the night singing Jewish religious songs.

LAD FROM ARCTIC TRIMS CITY BOYS

Was Reared At Reindeer Camp, Only White Boy At Aklavik School

EDMONTON, April 23 (CP)—Accomplished trapper and dog-musher at the age of 11, Paul Verville, who has lived at Aklavik, N.W.T., since he was five years old, showed versatility on his arrival here by winning a pocket full of marbles from Edmonton lads in his first introduction to the game.

Paul, whose home is at the reindeer station at the mouth of the Mackenzie River, was the only white boy at the Mission school at Aklavik, and he will complete his education here.

Since he went north with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Verville, he has become a good trapper, learned to handle dogs and gathered a knowledge of the Canadian north's newest acquisition, the reindeer.

"When I first went north we lived out in the bush near Aklavik where my father was trapping," he said. "I used to go with him on the trap line with the dogs."

Just before leaving for Edmonton he had caught five muskrats and sold them so that he would have pocket money when he reached the outside.

"A number of reindeer have been broken to pull sleighs," he continued. "They hitch them with a sort of wooden yoke and have sleighs especially built for them."

His father and mother work at the reindeer camp where there are about 40 people, including two families of Lapianders. He found Eskimo and Indian boys to be rough football players with a liking for fighting.

One of Paul's big ambitions is to see a real cowboy show, about which he had heard. Street-cars were a complete novelty to him, but seemed rather tame after his 1,300-mile airplane flight to the city.

"I enjoyed that breakfast of new milk and fried eggs," he said, and explained that dried fish and raw meat were the big food items at the reindeer camp. The only eggs he saw there were preserved and rather tasteless.

People of France are calling American canned asparagus.

BOXING NEEDS A CZAR LANDIS

Jack Dempsey Claims Something Must Be Done To Save Sport

JUST BIG LAWSUIT

DALLAS, April 23 (AP). — One more year at its present pace and the fight game will be washed up, Jack Dempsey bluntly predicted today.

"Something must be done, and if it isn't done within the next year we just won't have any boxing," flared the 42-year-old former heavyweight master. "In the past five years boxing had deteriorated so much it's all other sports have gone far ahead.

"The game needs a czar—a Judge Landis of boxing—some one who can supervise the washing of boxing's dirty linen in its own backyard. Run the game like organized baseball is handled—that the idea."

Manassa's noted mauler, warmed up to his subject by citing the current Braddock-Louis-Schmeling tangle as one of his major claims that boxing is on a one-way path to the rocks.

"Boxing isn't boxing any more—it's just a big lawsuit, he said. "If contracts and promises are no good, what good is the fight game; they promised Maxie Schmeling a shot at the title if he whipped Joe Louis. He did it, and helped save the fight game. He signed his contract to fight Braddock and is most certainly the logical contender. What has he got? A pieced paper!"

YANKS' HOLDOUT DEMANDS $15,500

Club Refuses To Split Difference In Salary To Get Hurler Back

CHICAGO.—Charles (Red) Ruffing, the big righthander who won 20 games for New York Yankees last season, said to-night he was ready to call off his holdout campaign it Owner Jacob Ruppert would give him $15,500 for 1937. Most persistent of the important holdouts, Ruffing had insisted on $16,000. Ruffing said he would need little work to reach playing condition, as he has been drilling with the University of Chicago squad for about two weeks. Col. Ruppert said several weeks ago that the husky hurler would receive no pay, if and when he signed, until he was in shape to take his regular turn on the mound.

Offer Not Acceptable

NEW YORK.—Manager Joe McCarthy and Business Manager Ed Barrow, of New York Yankees indicated to-night holdout Pitcher Charley Ruffing's offer to "split the salary difference" would not be acceptable to the club.

Both said the club had received no word of the pitcher's latest announcement, that he would be willing to accept $16,500 for the 1937 season, instead of the $17,000 the Yankees originally offered him.

"The club has made its last stand" said McCarthy. "Now it's up to Ruffing to come down."

OSHAWA PANNED FOR BALL RAIDS

Comes In For Criticism By Stan Gilbert At Big Meeting Of Intercounty Loop

LONDON, Ont., April 23 (CP) — Delegates to the Inter-County Baseball Association's annual sessions yesterday viewed the transfer situation among their ranks with the executive committee slated to pass a recommendation on the problem, to be forwarded to Ontario Baseball Amateur Association.

The big question popped up last night when delegates approved the transfer of Frank Coleman, former London hurler, to Stratford, and it appeared the association was marching towards wiping out "the unwritten law" prohibiting teams from taking players from other clubs. The executive's recommendation will deal with the Coleman transfer which drew the 80 delegates into debate.

Gilbert Speaks Plainly

Oshawa and Stratford had injured senior baseball Stan Gilbert of St. Thomas told the meeting. A past president of the association, Gilbert charged the senior provincial series suffered through the "raiding" system.

R. W. D. Lewis, president of the London Baseball Club who declared there was no wish to block Coleman improving his position through a jump to Stratford, declared he opposed transfer of players from one Inter-County club to another.

He described transfers as "vicious and discouraging" and then objected to the "gentleman's agreement" being removed from the constitution.

"An unwritten law is a matter of morals," he remarked.

Great changes have appeared in the league since 1918, Norman Siegel of Stratford replied. "I maintain the league has no right to restricting any person from advancing."

Increase Umpires Fees

The association also left to the executive the question of obtaining a floodlight system. Delegates decided to grant umpires an increase of $1 a game with the exception of

Lawn Bowling

By HERB MARTIN

One of the best meetings of the Central Ontario Lawn Bowling Association was held here last night when practically every club in the association was represented by two or more delegates.

President J. D. Fitzpatrick, Peterborough, welcomed the guests on behalf of the Peterborough club and during his address stressed the point that the play-offs for the different competitions were not as largely attended as should be, and suggested night playing as a possible cure for the situation.

When the regular business was concluded the meeting was thrown open for discussion and many useful ideas were put across. It was finally decided to play the singles and doubles at Cobourg about the middle of July and the rink games to take place at Cannington late in August. All games to be played in the evening.

A lively and lengthy discussion took place when some of the delegates introduced the idea of amalgamating the Central Ontario and Provincial Associations under one head known as Central District No. 14. Many reasons were advanced both pro and con but no headway was made and finally the motion was withdrawn and things were left "as is".

The delegates from Cannington, Lindsay, Port Hope, Cobourg, Orillia, and Peterborough all took part in the discussion and all seemed clear on one point, and that was that there is room enough for both associations in their respective spheres.

After lunch was served by the local club the meeting was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

SPORTS DAY by DAY

Dicking Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

JUST chattering about nothing in particular to-day. Like the rugby game in Oshawa last autumn. Colder than a frog in a frozen pool it was and the score too one-sided to be interesting. Some of the scribes retired to the clubhouse at one end and made merry around a fire. Every few minutes one would open the door and roar out to a friend halfway down the field: "Hey Angthing happen since we left?" And the guy obligingly would bellow back: "Naw, they're just messing around in midfield," or "No. 14 for Peterborough made about eight yards on an end run." A bit careless maybe but nobody not even the few frostbitten fans present, seemed to give a hoot what happened. We just stuck around to get the final score.

* * * * *

WE were reminded of this when reading Walter Winchell yesterday. He tells of how a N'Yawk reporter scooped his rivals just before the deadline on a strike story. It was on the third floor of a shop and when he arrived the door was locked, so he backed up across the busy Street as Walter writes: "He let out a bellow calculated to pierce the panes. It did. Heads bobbed out. 'Are you guys striking?' yelled Kelliher, never one to use the subtle approach. 'We sure are,' roared back one of the strikers, who also believed in coming to the point. And from the curbstone before a rapidly gathering crowd, Kelliher conducted the interview with strikers on the third floor. He was the only reporter to get the story in that day." There are a lot of angles to the writing racket—and crust counts considerably.

* * * * *

JUST on more item about a guy we don't know personally. It is that eccentric star outfielder, one time daffiest of the Daffy Dodgers, Babe Herman. He arrived in Detroit the other day and was given the uniform worn by a Tiger rookie, Dizzy Trout. They said there was no significance in Babe getting Dizzy's suit. "Glad to be back," said Herman, "15 years is a long time to be farmed out." He had been with the Tigers in '22, coming from Edmonton in the old Western Canada League. Later he went to the Dodgers and Cincinnati. The husky Babe indignantly denied that he had ever stolen third with the bases full but admitted: "I once did get into a traffic jam at the base with three of us present. But it wasn't a steal." With the Herman influence felt, we expect the Tigers to drive Mickey Cochrane back into the sanatarium before midseason.

* * * * *

WE haven't had any real screwballs on local ball teams in some years. Lots of color and temperament, yes, but no goofy numbers. Lefty Lepper could hurl Big League ball in practice but couldn't find the plate with a lantern during games, thereby driving teammates nutty. Bud Murray was a most provoking gee on occasions. Tansy Foley was as temperamental as an opera singer sometimes but a sweet player. Chuck Kearns' temper was of the hair-trigger variety, especially in a hitting slump. Pat Calladine had enough color to paint a barn and give it two coats. Cy Whatley's excess energy would burst the seams of a suit of armor, and the peppery Eddie Starr also was loaded with energy. The lanky, lazy Spook Scriver was always good copy. There were others of last year's Petes, too, that were easy to watch or write about—but no real screwballs of the Babe Herman type.

* * * * *

SPEAKING of managers who like big ball players, Charlie Good of the Star refers to Knotty Lee, ex-coach of the Petes, as follows: "It is apparently a failing of all oldtimers as witness the fact that Knotty Lee has 10 twirlers on his staff at Ogdensburg who stand better than six feet and scale around the 200-pound mark. Incidentally, the ancient pilot himself possesses a Falstaffian figure but he doesn't boast about it. Twenty-two players are billed to report to Lee on May 1st, 17 of whom are six-footers, two catchers, as many outfielders and three infielders reaching that lofty altitude. It is a certainty that they won't dub the Ogdensburg club the 'Pigmies.' Well, 75 per cent of the Petes' pitching staff this season will tower up around the six-foot class.

* * * * *

WEMBLEY LIONS and Sudbury Tigers went 10 minutes overtime to a 3-all deadlock last p.m. in their puck finals of the Red Ink Tournament. They play again Saturday and on Monday Sudbury had to fight from behind to get a draw with the lads wearing the English livery. Wonder if the players on these teams work on a guarantee basis or a thin cut of a slim gate. Jo-Jo Graboski, one-eyed wonder from Oshawa—beg podden, old chap—of Wembley, tried to break a stick with his beezer. Didn't hear how the stick made out, but the schnoozle had to be removed for repairs—yeah, busted up a bit.

FRANK BUCKLAND, local Hockey Club coach, will be the speaker at the Church Hockey League banquet on Tuesday. It is anticipated that the puckists in recent years started in the Church Loop and some in this circuit now will likely be playing under him in the future. Winning teams—Murray St. Seniors, St. Paul's Juveniles, and George St. Bantams—will receive trophies. Lloyd Parnall is chairman of the spread at Murray St. Church, and presentations will be made by Cres Sprout, Art Mann and Carl Ferguson. Besides managers and players, guests will include members of the Ministerial Association; Len Agnew, Church Puck Loop prexy; Gord Clegg, president of the Church Cage League; and Joe Collins of the Southend Hockey League. Players intermingle in these three circuits. Tickets are available to other church players for 15c and parents or others who wish to attend may do so for 25c.

TEN N.H.L. CLUBS POSSIBLE IN 1938

Pittsburg And Cleveland May Be Added By Next Winter—Last Season Successful

(St. Thomas):

With enthusiastic Detroit still celebrating the Red Wings' retention of the Stanley Cup, directors of the National Hockey League today mapped plans for a 10-club circuit next November. If proposed new arenas are constructed, Pittsburgh will return to the fold, and Cleveland will be an added starter.

The season just closed was the most successful since before the depression. Toronto made the outstanding gain, showing an 80,000 increase in home receipts over 1935-36. Detroit and the Chicago Black Hawks and both Montreal outfits did more business, while the two New York teams and the Boston Bruins ran about even with the previous campaign. Despite the worst conceivable sizing of injuries to topnotch players, the Red Wings became the first club in the United States to capture the Stanley Cup twice in a row and the second squad to perform the feat since the National League was reorganized in 1926. The Montreal Canadiens prevailed in 1929-30 and 30-31.

Capt. Doug. Young, Orville Roulston and Larry Aurie suffered broken legs. Mud Brunetaeu went out with a punctured lung. Marty Barry with a bad side. Syd Howe with a concussion. Ki Macrae with a broken hand, and a charley horse put Scotty Bowman on the sidelines. Normie Smith damaged his left elbow in the playoffs, and Eddie Goodfellow bruised his leg, but there were the Red Wings at the finish of a world title series that went five games, with Earl Cooper Robertson, a substitute goalie called in from Pittsburgh's minor league club, shutting out the New York Rangers in the last two contests.

Napanee Has Lost Two Good Players

NAPANEE, Ont., April 23 (C.P.) —Two well-known Eastern Ontario ball players, Dave Sithaon, catcher, and Bill Prout, infielder, both members of the Napanee Oilskards Senior C.O.B.A. team last season, leave for Melntyre Mines to-day where they will play in the Nickel Belt League. Sithaon has played under the Napanee colors for several seasons and was batting mate of Vernie Bishop in 1934, when they won the Intermediate B championship. Prout played for Picton before coming here last year.

Soccer Notes

An open practice of the C.C.F. soccer team will be held at 2.30 o'clock to-morrow afternoon at King Edward Park. All players wanting a workout are invited.

ADD INSULT TO INJURY

Mosquitoes Spit Into Wound After Biting.

ST. LOUIS, April 23 (AP)—Mosquitoes, Dr. Robert L. Benson of Portland, Ore., said today, add insult to injury when they bite by spitting into the wound.

It is this saliva which makes a mosquito bite swell and itch, he told the American College of Physicians, because human beings are allergic to the insect protein secreted in the saliva.

LACROSSE STARS LEAVE FOR WEST

Hank Munro Latest Senior To Leave Ontario For Game In British Columbia

BRANTFORD, April 23 (CP) — Hank Munro, defense star of the Orillia Terriers, senior Canadian lacrosse champions, left last night for British Columbia to play with the New Westminsters of that province. Munro learned the game here when Bert Lyon, member of the Ontario Athletic Commission and Past President of the Ontario Amateur Lacrosse Association and the C.A.L.A., started the schoolboy league. Another of his pupils was Hugh (Shiftwrench) Kelly, also with Orillia now.

Munro's going means a decided look to sport here generally. He was a member of the Brantford Young Men's Christian Association basketball team that last night in Toronto Elizabeths by two baskets in the home-and-home series for the Ontario intermediate championship.

Two other lacrosse players are lost to the local club. Beef Smith, Six Nations Indian warrier, returned to play with the North Shore Indians in British Columbia some time ago, and Steve Band Oscar Bomberry is expected to follow suit shortly.

Luxurious chair-height seats! . . . Low, level floor! . . . Even stronger safety all-steel body! . . . Genuine equal-pressure hydraulic brakes—the world's finest! And yet you can buy a Dodge priced right down among the lowest priced cars.

There's only one way to really be convinced that these are the true facts . . . Go to a Dodge-De Soto dealer today and ride in a new 1937 Dodge—give it a good test. You'll learn why so many thousands have switched to Dodge and are saving money!

TORONTO LEAFS START SEASON WITH 10-7 WIN

Queen City Nine Score Entire Total In The Third Inning

14 BATTERS STEP UP

Bears Whip Montreal Royals 8 To 5—Only 6,000 Brave Threat Of Rain

TORONTO, April 23.—(CP). — Having disposed of two of their openings under adverse conditions, with the Newark Bears and Toronto Maple Leafs coming through with victories, the International Baseball League hoped for an assist from the weather man to-day so the other two inaugurals might be staged.

While the Bears were whipping the Montreal Royals 8 to 5 and Leafs were downing Baltimore Orioles 10 to 7 yesterday, Jupiter Pluvius stepped in and stopped the Rochester-Jersey City and Buffalo-Syracuse encounters.

Threatening weather held the opening day crowd at Newark to 6,000, but a throng of 7,500 packed the Orioles stadium.

The Bears lost no time getting off on the right foot against the Royals, playing for the first time under the managership of "Rabbit" Maranville. The Yankees' farm team counted six times in the first inning as they drove Lauri Myllylangas from the box with five hits, including a pair of doubles and a home run by Bob Seeds. George Puccinelli was the batting star in the game off Marvin Duke, who pitched for Newark last year.

One big inning also spelled the downfall of the Orioles, although they crashed out four homers, two by Roy Schalk and one each by George Puccinelli and Ab Wright. The Leafs scored all of their runs in the third inning when 14 batters stepped to the plate.

The Leafs-Orioles Game.

The home team got off to a great start in the annual home-run derby, as they knocked four of Nekola's pitches out of the miniature field. Roy Schalk got two of the four-baggers and Ab Wright and George Puccinelli got the others. Schalk's second circuit clout came with two mates aboard in the second inning, but the others were good for only one counter.

Manager Dan Howley stuck to his original intention, and started what was probably the young'st aggregation ever to play in an opening game. Only Pitcher Frank Nekola could be regarded in the veteran class. In the sixth inning Oliver and Comorosky were substituted for Mayo Smith and Bobby Porter to cope with Petitt's southpaw hurling, but the youngsters had already done their chores toward victory.

Leafs Stage Parade.

Toronto's ten-run rally came as a complete surprise, in that only six batters had faced Matuzak in the first two frames. Don Ross opened the third with a hard single to centre, and Heath and Nekola walked as Matuzak's control wavered. From then on it was just a parade. Madura singled, scoring Ross, Gantenbein walked, and Mayo Smith was safe on Schalk's error, as the latter had a perfect double play in order.

Ted Petoskey popped up for the first blow out, but Bobby Porter laced a smashing single to centre, scoring a pair of runners, and when Walsh singled, Matuzak was yanked in favor of Petitt. Ross walked and Heath singled to short rightfield before Nekola was thrown out at first, but Frankie Madura doubled against the centre field fence to send the final pair of Toronto runs across the plate.

Petitt granted only three safeties for the remaining six innings, but the damage had been done, as Nekola tightened up. The only two Baltimore runs after the third inning were on home runs. In the last four frames, only thirteen batters faced the Toronto hurler, Wright's homer spoiling the work.

Ross Starts Double Play.

A fast double play started by Ross helped the Leafs out of a bad spot in the first frame. Schalk started the frame with a two-bagger on the second pitch, and with one out Powers and Puccinelli singled. Ross took Wright's hard smash and converted it into a twin killing.

Tiger Rookie Is Looking Like Sure Bet To Stay This Time

WEIGHS 200 POUNDS

By BILL BRAUCHER

DETROIT, Mich., April 23.—Along the trail to major league fame blazed by Big Chief Bender, Chief Myers and other red men of a by-gone day, comes Rudy Preston York, tall, black-eyed part Cherokee, from Georgia.

The tall York "the Chief," too, in the Tiger camp Manager Mickey Cochrane has assigned the big fellow to third base temporarily. York is a first baseman, and Cochrane regards him as excellent insurance against possible failure by Hank Greenberg to come back to form after almost a year's layoff because of a broken wrist. But the Chief plays well in the outfield, and also can catch. What! Can't be a pitcher?

Big, swarthy, well-proportioned, the Chief moves around the diamond at his tasks with the easy grace credited to his aboriginal ancestors. His Indian blood has been crossed with German and Irish, but his dominating features, especially those penetrating black eyes, are those of an Indian.

Powerful Hitter

He hits powerfully with a free, smooth swing. He has a fine arm and sharp fielding instinct. There is a marked difference between the jumpy hasty style of a recruit, and the practised, well-timed, easy movements of a big leaguer. York has big league all over him.

The Chief brings a respectable record with him. Last year, playing for Milwaukee, he hit .334 in 137 games, smashing 37 home runs driving in 149 runs and finally being voted the most valuable player in the American association. In 1936, playing for Beaumont in the Texas league, he hit .301, led the league in home runs and runs batted in and was voted one of the two most valuable players in the circuit.

At Oklahoma City they still point out where York drove a home run 450 feet. It is easy to understand the power he puts into his swing when you look at his 205 pounds, packed solidly on a six-foot frame.

Third Time Up

Aggressiveness and determination are qualities his various managers have found to admire. Allan Sothoron, former major league pitcher, who was York's manager at Milwaukee, says he "possesses every essential of a winning player," high praise if someone inclined to be a sharp critic of ivory flaws.

The Chief is 24 years old, and a native of Cartersville, Ga. This is his third trip up from the minors, so you can mark down that he is going to stick. He was measured for a uniform in the clubhouse, so the Chief is "in."

BUSINESS BOOMS AT HOARY TOWER

May 12 To Be Busy Day For Gunners In London's Famous Old Fort

LONDON, April 23—(CP) — The Tower will play an important role in Coronation ceremonies, for 248 salutes will be fired from its grim battlements. At dawn there will be a salvo of 62 guns, another 62 will be fired when the King and Queen leave Buckingham Palace, a further 62 will boom on their arrival at the Abbey, and another 62 when the King is crowned.

The salutes will be fired by a detachment of the Honorable Artillery Company, now the Tower gunners. The 62-gun salute is made up of 21 guns for the royal salute; 21 for the Tower as a royal palace and fortress; and 20 for the City of London.

ST. LOUIS CALMS ROUGHHOUSE REDS TO TUNE OF 14-11

Two-Sided Hurricane Sees 8 Pitchers Compete As Cincinnati Takes Beating

PIRATES DOWN CUBS 4-2

By Hal Fuller
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

CHICAGO, April 23. (CP). — No matter how many others shout for the honors, there's still only one gas house gang.

Charley Dressen's Roughhouse Reds from Cincinnati were supposed to muscle in on the Cardinals' exclusive territory this year, but so far, they've been little better than rookies at the game of rough, tough and nasty as originated in St. Louis. Other clubs also intimated that they'd be infringing on the Cards' copyright, but they're obviously going to have a tough time proving it.

The No. 1 gashouse gangster, Dizzy Dean, polished off the Cincinnati clowners in his usual style in Tuesday's opener. Yesterday, however, Dizzy was taking a rest, so the Reds decided they'd get tough. The result was interesting—but unchanged. When the smoke of a nice quiet knock-down, drag-out brawl had finished, the Cards were still in the saddle. Final score: St. Louis 14, Cincinnati 11.

The two-sided hitting hurricane, put on at the expense of eight pitchers who gave up 26 safe blows, easily featured the day's program, curtailed again by rain. Only two other games got by old Jupe Pluvius, with the Pirates and their new left-hander, Dutch Brandt, making it two in a row over the Chicago Cubs, 4-2, and the Chicago White Sox reversing their Wednesday wallopting by taking the St. Louis Browns 6-1.

Parade Of Pitchers

Pitchers came a dime a dozen in that Cincinnati slugging circus, and generally each lasted less time than it takes to say "back to the showers." Each side scored a run by the time the second inning wound up, with Johnny Mize's homer doing the trick for the Cards.

In the third, Gas House Gang No. 1 landed on Paul Derringer, and Don Brennan for half a dozen tallies. Back came Gas House Gang No. 2 with a tremendous nine-run splurge in the fourth. That was the cue for the Cards to roll up their sleeves, stick out their collective chin, and go to the wars. They bombarded Al Hollingsworth and Gene Schott for four more in the sixth, and finished it off with three for good measure in the eighth.

At Chicago, meantime, the Pirates uncovered the left-hander that many believe may bring the pennant to the Smoky City. For the last few years, a portsider has been the Bucs' crying need. Brandt, obtained from Brooklyn during the winter, made his debut in the role against Chicago, and, although touched for ten hits, he fanned eight and was tight as a drum with men on the bags.

DELORO RE-ELECTS SPORTS OFFICERS

Rink Report Shows Balance Of $60 With Over $100 In Association's Treasury

MARMORA, April 23. (Examiner Correspondence)—The annual meeting of the Deloro Amateur Athletic Association was held on Thursday evening in Deloro Hall with W. Simmons, Sr., retiring president, in the chair.

The secretary, M. J. Corrigan, read the financial statement of the skating rink which showed a balance in hand of approximately $60. W. M. Regan was appointed to look after the interests of baseball and in the possibility of a league being formed to represent Deloro at any organization meeting.

G. Brooks was appointed manager of the football section of the association.

The secretary treasurer gave the financial statement of the association which disclosed a balance in hand of approximately $100.

William A. Smith reported for the tennis and Don Robertson did likewise for the bowling.

Officers Re-elected

The officers for last year were then re-elected for 1937, as follows: President, W. Simmons, Sr.; Vice President, D. Robertson; Secretary-Treasurer, M. J. Corrigan; Manager Baseball W. M. Regan, Football G. Brooks, Tennis W. A. Smith, Bowling D. Robertson; July 1st celebration, F. Leal.

Following discussion of some minor matters, the meeting adjourned.

READ THIS FIRST:

Charles Stuckey, of a London law firm, reluctantly has agreed to a scheme to defraud the daughter of one of his few respectable clients, Jacqueline Smith, of an inheritance of $1,500,000 from an American uncle. In keeping with the plan, Col. Alex Lutman—who has a hold over Stuckey—Jim Asson, an ex-convict, and the lawyer are stopping at the same hotel in Cobenell with Mrs. Smith and her daughter. In dire financial straits, Mrs. Smith has persuaded Jacqueline to marry Asson, posing as a wealthy Englishman, unsuspectedly falling in with the plan of the three men to have Asson cultivate the girl, have all of her property assigned to him before their marriage, then splitting up the inheritance before she learns of it. Lutman, as Jim's "trustee", has hurried Jacqueline's decision by revealing a check he cashed for her mother returned marked "unsufficient funds". After meeting Jacqueline, Stuckey is more reluctant than ever to go through with the scheme and stalls by telling them all the property deed must be signed in London. Back in London Charles leaves Lutman in his office while he goes after Jim Asson, Mrs. Smith, and Jacqueline arrive at Stuckey's office to sign the deed.

CHAPTER 20

"MY DEAR," said Jacqueline's mother gently when her daughter, in Stuckey's office, began to grow suspicious about signing the deed, "you must remember that you are dealing with English gentlemen, and they naturally wish that you should be safeguarded in every possible way. If Mr. Stuckey will be good enough to produce the document, we will get it signed at once."

"Just a minute, please, mother. There are one or two points I'd like cleared up before I sign. I want to ask Charles about them."

"Very well," agreed Mrs. Smith. "You and I will have a little chat with Mr. Stuckey, shall we?"

"If you're getting married too, mother, yes. Otherwise, I'd rather talk to Charles alone."

"My dear, that hardly seems necessary."

"It's quite unnecessary," said Jim Asson. "Goodness knows what there is to make all this fuss about. The thing's quite straightforward."

Lutman silenced him with a look. "It seems to me, Jacqueline," he said, "that if Mr. Stuckey assures you that the deed is all in order and very much to your advantage...."

"It seems to be," interrupted Charles, with a sudden harshness in his voice, "that if Miss Jacqueline wishes to consult me in private she is perfectly entitled to do so."

Lutman glared at him; Mrs. Smith glared at him; Jim Asson glared at him. But, since Jacqueline rewarded his outburst with an approving smile, the glarings seemed to Charles of very little consequence.

"It's just a waste of time," grumbled Jim Asson. "It's quite an ordinary marriage settlement."

Jacqueline turned on him with angry eyes.

"Yes, but it's my marriage settlement, and it concerns me more than you, and if I want to talk to Charles about it I'm going to do so, and if you or anyone else tries any more to prevent me, I shall drop the whole thing."

"Quite right," said Charles, and faced another battery of glares.

"I must say, Mr. Stuckey," began Mrs. Smith frostingly, "that your attitude strikes me as most extraordinary."

"You can take it or leave it, mother," said Jacqueline. "Either I speak to Charles alone or the whole thing's off. I can't see what you're all here for, anyway. I could perfectly well have come and seen Charles and signed the deed alone. I don't need three of you to help me write my name."

"So ungrateful!" sighed Mrs. Smith. "After coming all this way through those dreadful streets and waiting goodness knows how long in a musty old office...."

"The best thing you can do, mother, is to go home—by taxi," advised Jacqueline. "I'll be along later. Go and call a taxi, please Jim—and there's no need for you to come back. I'll see you later, too."

Jim went sullenly toward the door, and Jacqueline turned to the Colonel and held out her hand.

"Goodby, Colonel," she said. "Thank you so much for arranging everything. If you want to do another good deed, see mother home with you? If you're very nice to her I daresay she'll let you pay the taxi fare."

The Colonel screwed in his eyeglass and smiled at Mrs. Smith.

"If you will honor me by lunching with me, Mrs. Smith...."

Mrs. Smith visibly brightened.

"I'm really not fit to be seen, Colonel, but if you don't mind taking a rag-bag to lunch...."

At the door, Mrs. Smith paused and glanced back.

"I hope, Jacqueline," she said, "that you will allow no one to dissuade you from doing your duty to yourself and your mother," and, with a parting glare at Charles, she followed the Colonel from the room.

Jacqueline turned to Charles with a smile.

"Charles, we are alone! And now we can talk."

"Fine," said Charles. "I say, it's nice to see you again."

"Do sit down," went on Charles, as he pulled a chair forward. "This one's been dusted this morning. As a matter of fact, the whole office has been dusted—windows and everything."

Jacqueline sat down with a smile.

"Even the old gentleman outside?"

Charles shook his head.

"That is old Bells, my chief clerk. He's been here as long as the river, Thames, and if I had him dusted I'm afraid he would resign. Do you like my office?"

Jacqueline glanced round.

"It is a perfect setting for Mr. Bells," she said.

Charles frowned.

"And for me?"

She shook her head.

"For the 'Mouthpiece' perhaps, but not for you, Charles, are you quite sure you don't drink? Because if it isn't drink, what is it? You can't tell me this is where you ought to be."

Charles gave a shrug.

"Here I am, anyway."

"Yes, I know. You're queer, you know, Charles—such a nice man really, and yet such a dreadful coward."

"Coward?" Charles' face showed pain and indignation.

Jacqueline nodded.

"Yes, a coward. I believe so, anyway. I believe something tremendous has happened in your life to push you down, and now you need something else tremendous to happen to give you the courage to get up again."

"Nothing tremendous ever happened to me, Jacqueline."

"Sure?"

"Quite!"

"I'm not. I'm not so sure, Charles, that something tremendous hasn't happened to you quite recently. And I've an idea that you know it has happened, only you're too much of a coward to face the consequences of admitting it. Isn't that true?"

Charles avoided her eyes.

"Hadn't we better get to business?" he suggested.

Jacqueline smiled at his troubled face.

"Coward again! All right, we'll get to business. I'm going to marry Jim Asson, Charles. You know that, don't you?"

"Yes," said Charles miserably.

"Yes, I suppose you are."

"But it won't last long. I know that. So do you, don't you? And I know you hate the idea of my marrying Jim, but you haven't the pluck to say so—not even when Colonel Lutman isn't here. But I can't help myself, Charles. I'm caught. I've read old-fashioned stories about daughters who married to save their families from ruin, and I used to scream with laughter at the idea. But it isn't really funny."

"No," agreed Charles, "it isn't really funny."

"But I'm swallowing it down with one gulp, and—never mind that, though. Let's be practical and unsentimental and hard-headed and businesslike, shall we? Where's the deed?"

"In my safe."

"Aren't you going to get it out?"

"Right-o," said Charles, crossed to the safe, took out a document, and seated himself at his desk. "Here it is. It needs only your signature." He glanced at the document in his hand. "Ten thousand dollars a year for you and $6,000 a year for your mother. You'd better read it through."

He held out the document, but she brushed it aside.

"I'm not interested, Charles," she said. "Give me a pen and I'll sign it. It's all right, I suppose, if you say so."

Bedtime Story

By HOWARD R. GARIS

UNCLE WIGGILY'S BEAN BLOWER.

"Wait a moment, Uncle Wiggily! Wait a moment!"

Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy loudly called after the rabbit gentleman who was hopping down the front walk of his hollow stump bungalow.

"What do you want, Nurse Jane?" asked Mr. Longears.

"Beans!" answered Miss Fuzzy Wuzzy.

Now please don't, for a moment, think Nurse Jane was impolite or speaking in a way she shouldn't to Uncle Wiggily. It was beans Nurse Jane wanted and, of course, when Uncle Wiggily asked her, she had to tell him.

"Oh, I didn't intend to be so short with you, Mr. Longears," squeaked the muskrat lady housekeeper, "but I really need some beans to bake. Will you have time to get them for me while you are out adventuring?"

"Yes, Jane," answered the rabbit uncle. "I shall bring you beans."

Away He Went

So Uncle Wiggily hopped on his way adventuring and Nurse Jane went back to the bungalow to make sure the clock had washed its face and that the dishes were getting dry after their bath.

It was a lovely day in April. There had been a shower in the night but now the sun was shining and glistening on the rain drops that were clinging to the new, green leaves and a few early flowers.

"It is such a lovely day I should have a lovely adventure," said Uncle Wiggily to himself as he hopped along. "I may have such an exciting and lovely adventure that I may forget to buy the beans for Nurse Jane. I had better get them now."

He hopped to the bean store and the little grocery cat lady who kept it, after putting the beans in a bag, twiddled her whiskers and mewed:

"Don't shoot any at me, if you please, Uncle Wiggily."

"Shoot any what at you, Mrs. Purr," asked the bunny.

"Beans!" was the answer, and the cat lady laughed. "But I guess you can't as you have no bean blower. Ha! Ha!"

Blowing Season

"I say, What's all this?" laughed Uncle Wiggily. "I came in here to buy beans for Nurse Jane to bake and you say I can't shoot any at you as I have no bean blower. What do you mean?"

"Oh, I thought you were going to do what a lot of the animal boys are doing now," said Mrs. Purr. "You see this is the bean-blowing season. The boys buy beans and blow them at one another through long, tin tubes."

"Oh, I used to do that when I was a boy rabbit," laughed Mr. Longears. "But I haven't had a bean blower in a long while. Good-by, Mrs. Purr."

Away he hopped, over the fields and through the woods. He carried the bag of beans with him. Then all of a sudden, just as he was going to hop out from behind an elderberry bush, the rabbit gentleman saw the Bob Cat on the path.

"Oh, my goodness," gasped Uncle Wiggily. "If I hop out now that Bad Chap will catch me. I'll have to wait until he goes away."

So Uncle Wiggily crouched down back of the bush. But to his disappointment the Bob Cat didn't go away. He sat down there, mewing and miaowing and pawing and said out loud:

"I think Uncle Wiggily may hop along soon. If does I'll get him. Oh, miaow, how hungry I am."

Uncle Wiggily looked out of the bush at the Bob Cat. He looked at the bag of beans. Then he wished for a bean shooter. How he wished for it! But he had none.

"I'll have to wait until I get home," thought the rabbit gentleman. "Then I'll get my bean shooter and I'll shoot the beans at the Bob Cat. I'll make him run away. But I'll have to wait until I get home."

So he waited and waited and waited, but the Bob Cat didn't go away. He sat

No Desire In England To Foist Privy Council Upon Dominion

Act By Canada Would End Appeal In Civil, Criminal Matters Says Asquith

ONE OTHER ALTERNATIVE

LONDON, April 22 (CP)—There has never been a disposition in England to foist the authority of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council on a reluctant Dominion, says Hon. Cyril Asquith, K.C., writing in the London Daily Telegraph.

Asquith, fourth son of the late Earl of Oxford and Asquith, and outstanding authority on common law, was referring to the recent debate on the Privy Council in the Canadian House of Commons. Apart from his observations, little has appeared in the United Kingdom press on the criticism of the Judicial Committee's decisions affecting Canada's "new deal" legislation.

If the Dominion dislikes the appeal, Asquith says, it has only to pass an act abolishing it in civil as well as criminal matters. He proceeds:

"There is another alternative. The decisions complained of in Canada are decisions on the interpretation of the British North America Acts which enshrine the Canadian constitution. These Acts could be amended so as to confer on the Dominion Parliament without ambiguity power to carry legislation of the sort which has been held invalid. It could not be done in Canada. But the Parliament at Westminster can amend them with the consent of Canada.

"In the past the Imperial Parliament has been alert to meet the wishes of Canada for any change in her constitution by passing the necessary legislation. If the Dominion and provinces can agree on a new distribution of legislative power between themselves, or some clarification of the existing distribution, it is most unlikely that they will meet with any opposition from Whitehall or Westminster, and this should satisfy them.

Touching On Bennett.

Alluding to statements by Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, leader of the opposition, in the recent Commons debate, Asquith declared: "Some impatience is human and excusable in an ardent reformer whose legislative offspring is declared still-born by the verdict of an irreverent tribunal. New deal legislators in particular are not slow to fulminate against a court guilty of so galling a pronouncement. Without presuming to debate the merits of the Privy Council's decisions, an English lawyer may perhaps be permitted two observations.

"First the remoteness of Downing street from Canada may make for unfamiliarity with Canadian problems, but it also makes for impartiality. Indeed, the more unfamiliar the court the less prejudiced.

"To English practitioners, the suggestion that the judicial committee are affected by political bias is fantastic, and it is to be doubted whether any Canadian in cold blood would seriously suggest that Lord Atkin or Lord MacMillan are reincarnations of George III.

"Secondly, if Mr. Bennett's charges of incompetence or carelessness (astonishing charges to any English lawyer) were well founded, they would involve the Supreme Court of Canada in much the same reproach as the judicial committee, for not in a single one of these appeals was the supreme court reversed by the committee.

"These attacks on the Privy Council Judicial Committee, a tribunal with jurisdiction over 400,000,000 persons, invite broader reflections."

Is Discharged

Solicitor to the Attorney-General's Department of Ontario for the last eight years Joseph Sedgwick, K.C., was dismissed by the Hepburn government following the resignation of Hon. Arthur Roebuck, as attorney-general. Mr. Roebuck resigned his portfolio following differences of opinion with Premier Hepburn over the strike at General Motors plants in Oshawa. Mr. Sedgwick was dismissed following a reorganization of the department under Hon. Paul Leduc who succeeded Mr. Roebuck.

DREW PUNCHY PEN FOR FIFTY YEARS

Cartoonist Retires After Long Career Of Satire On Canada's Great

TORONTO, April 23 — (CP) — Sam Hunter, 79-year-old dean of Canadian cartoonists, has laid down the pen that for more than half a century caricatured leaders of Canada's political life. He has retired as cartoonist of the Toronto Daily Star, but remains on the staff as "cartoonist emeritus."

Hunter, whose stoop-shouldered, gangleshanked, and chin-whiskered "Old Man Ontario" was one of Canada's finest cartoon characterizations, worked for Toronto newspapers since the nineties. His work appeared in The World, The Globe, and The News.

His deft line-work gave a soft, mellow touch to drawings of Macdonald and Laurier, Ross and Whitney in the old days and his skill remained in latter-day caricatures of King Bennett, Henry and Hepburn. He turned to political cartooning when he was past 30, after spending some years in Western Canada.

His art-work was of a high order and his cartoons invariably had their point. Though they were usually good-natured, he once roused the ire of the late Armand Lavergne with a cartoon the Quebec politician called "bold—brutal—stupid."

Slim and scholarly, Hunter worked unpretentiously at his home. There he digested the news of the Dominion and the world, rapidly creating cartoons that found their way to editorial desks with clockwork regularity. They were drawn at reproduction size. Early in his career Hunter often visited Legislative chambers to sketch his subjects at first hand, but later he drew from photographs.

Hunter left his drawing board when the fishing season came and hurried to the woods. His appreciation of nature was reflected in many a cartoon.

PIPE ORGAN USED IN TEMPLE PLOT

Certain Piece Signalled Secret Meeting Aimee McPherson's Daughter Testifies

LOS ANGELES, April 23 (AP) — The story of a strange plot with the soothing notes of an organ as the purported signal to plotters topped the testimony records of the $150,000 slander suit brought by Aimee Semple McPherson's daughter.

Roberta, estranged from her evangelist mother, sued Willedd Andrews, attorney for Aimee's Angelus Temple. She said he accused her of "blackmailing" Aimee and, as a result, she was expelled from the Temple.

The comely 27-year-old Roberta testified her mother told her last year Andrews had discovered a "plot to take the Temple away from her."

"Mother said that Andrews told her every time Miss Fricke, the organist, played a certain piece, it was a signal for a secret meeting at the home of Dean Harriet Jordan to lay plans for stealing the Temple," Roberta told Judge Clarence Kincaid.

She said Andrews told her Rheba Crawford (then associate pastor at the Temple), had formed a secret society among the girls to help drive mother out and the password of this Temple group was "Woe unto the one who breaks the link."

CHARLES TILLEY DIES.

Three weeks ago he broke his leg in a fall at his home and failed to recover.

WEDDING SHOWER

Miss Eva Hendren Honored By Friends at Cottesloe Social Gathering

COTTESLOE, April 22—Miss Eva Hendren, bride-elect of the month, was guest of honor at a cup and saucer shower held at the home of her cousin, Miss Margaret MacDonald on Tuesday afternoon. The living-room was decorated with pussy willows and pink and white streamers centred with a white bell.

A happy afternoon was spent in music and games, after which Miss Wilma Lewis made a neat little speech in presenting the gifts. Miss Hendren replied in a very fitting manner, and all joined in singing "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow." Lunch was served and all extended their best wishes for future happiness.

Those who attended were: Misses Mary Girvin, Ada Clements, Wilma Lewis, Rena Toms, Sylvia Clysdale, Mary Toms.

ARTISTS CONTINUING STRIKE

TORONTO, April 23 — (CP) — The 80 members of Artists' Union, continuing their strike called Tuesday, admitted to-day they feel far from down-hearted. With no settlement in sight, the strikers hired an orchestra last night and gave a dance at strike headquarters.

A. T. Vivash, union business agent, said, "We want to carry out a good-natured strike and have decided to do no picketing for the time being, at least."

NEW CHALLENGE BY C.I.O. FINDS HEPBURN READY

Aberdeen Is Beaten 2 to 1 By The Celts

Celtic Wins Scottish Cup For The Fifteenth Time

TIED 1-1 AT HALF-TIME

Record Crowd Of At Least 130,000 See Great Teams Battle

GLASGOW, April 24 (C. P. Cable) Celtic won the Scottish football cup for the 15th time to-day by defeating Aberdeen 2-1 at Hampden Park. Tied 1-1 at half-time, the Celts came through with the winning goal in the final 45 minutes.

A crowd estimated between 130,000 and 140,000 witnessed a gruelling tussle in fine football weather. Celtic was full value for the victory, monopolizing first-half play and holding out Aberdeen's frequent thrusts after the cross-over.

Strauss Out of Game

Without Strauss, goal-scoring left winger, the Dons forwards failed to attack in the first period with their customary machine-like tactics. The South African missed the game through a leg injury suffered in the semi-final against Morton.

Repeated raids at the opening brought success to the Glasgow squad after 11 minutes, Crum netting from close in. Thirty seconds later the Dons swept down the field and Armstrong beat Kenneway, Canadian-born goalkeeper. Buchan gave the Celts victory after 26 minutes in the second half.

For most of the battle Celtic pressed vigorously, but midway through the second period the Aberdonians settled down to give the powerful Glasgow defence a warm time.

While Johnstone played valiantly in the Aberdeen goal, Cooper and Temple in front of him were guilty of many faults. Falloon, the giver, proved a tower of strength, however, and saved the day several times for the Dons' back division.

Celtic's defence was dependable at all times, but the forwards did not play with their usual brilliance. Crum and Murphy being well held on the left, Delaney, on the other wing, was a clever individualist, being well assisted by Buchan. Mochrie, although centre, proved a source of danger although he did not score.

Manchester City Win.

Manchester City clinched its first English Football League championship. Before a capacity crowd at Maine Road, the Mancunians smashed Sheffield Wednesday, tail-enders, 4-1, while Arsenal went under 2-0 to Chelsea. Charlton Athletic jumped into second place above the Gunners by winning 1-0 over Bolton Wanderers.

Rangers Champions.

Final scheduled Scottish Football League games were played. While Rangers, their fixtures completed, were returned champions a few weeks ago, Aberdeen and Celtic, finalists in the Cup today, are still tied for second place. Each has 52 points and one game to play.

Ayr United and Morton move up into senior company next season as

NOTED ACTRESS MAY IRWIN ILL

Was Born In Whitby, Ontario, June 27, 1862—First Success When 13

WHITBY, Ont., April 24 (C.P.)—May Irwin, the actress, reported critically ill in a despatch from New York, was born at Whitby, Ont., on June 27, 1862.

She is a daughter of Robert E. Campbell and Mrs. Campbell, whose maiden name was Jane Draper. She made her first stage appearance at the Theatre Comique, Rochester, N. Y., as a vaudeville singer. That was in February of 1875. In 1877 she joined Tony Pastor's company at the old Metropolitan Theatre, New York.

She appeared consistently in popular successes after that. May Irwin was generous to young actors fighting for recognition. Walter Huston in a public address expressed his gratitude to her for the encouragement and other help she had given him.

She lives at May Irwin Farms, Clayton, 1,000 Islands, New York, near the Canadian border.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Saylor and a brother and sister, survive.

Youth Shot Dead Playing Postoffice

Grayson, Ky., April 24. (AP) THE "kiss in the dark" death of a boy hitch-hiker known as Jimmy Scott, puzzled authorities here yesterday. Who fired the revolver that ended his life while he was playing "postoffice" in a darkened room with 14-year-old Stella Stevens remained a mystery.

A Coroners jury returned a verdict that the boy, about 18, died at the "hands of persons unknown." Eddie Bruninss, 20, who Coroner C. W. Henderson said was "a sort of jilted suitor", was held as a material witness.

BOARD OF HEALTH HAS SEVEN APPLY AS HEALTH NURSE

Appointment Is Held Over To Determine Who Can Make It

DUTIES EXPLAINED

The Board of Health at its Friday night meeting heard seven applications for the position of public health nurse read and then was unable to take any further action because the point was raised as to whether the Board or the council had the authority to make the appointment. The matter will be referred to the city solicitor and another Board meeting will then be called.

Dr. Fraser read the applications which were as follows: Helen M. Sauve, 287 Reid St., Peterborough; Helen M. Thompson, daughter of Dr. A. S. Thompson, Havelock; Helen E. Gardiner, Niagara Falls; Helen McRorie, Apsley; Betty Robinson, R.R. 3, Oshawa; Susan M. Scales, Wiarton and Zeta Carney, London.

Miss Sauve, the only Peterborough applicant, Dr. Fraser explained had no training as a public health nurse while Miss McRorie and Miss Robinson were students who had not yet completed their course.

Ald. McIntyre asked why a Peterborough girl could not be appointed. He was of the opinion that a local nurse should be selected and later on she could be given leave of absence to take the required course.

Dr. Fraser explained the duties of a public health nurse. "She does not do any bedside nursing at all," he told Ald. McIntyre. "Her work is altogether different."

The M.O.H. said the public health nurse would deal with all the tubercular conducts, educate the families as to the proper methods and similarly handle cases of communicable diseases, part of her duties being to teach mothers what to do in dealing with such cases.

It was pointed out that at present it was costing Peterborough $15,000 a year to take care of tubercular patients in outside institutions.

Ald. Dutton, remarking that the matter was very important, said that he was in favor of appointing a properly qualified health nurse in starting the system. There would be other nurses added later on and that would give Peterborough nurses who were interested a chance to train themselves for the appointment that would follow.

Chairman Ald. Stecker described the manner in which a public health nurse would deal with a case of a communicable disease and contrasted it with the practice now in force. "With the system we now

Oshawa Men Smile Again Hold Dance

Picket Lines Are Abandoned—Stage Parade In Honor Of Thompson's Arrival Back

R. S. McLAUGHLIN HAPPY

Strikers Joke About Extra Day Holiday And "Wealth"—If Plant Runs All Year

OSHAWA, Ont., April 24 (CP) — Smiles replaced expressions of worry on the faces of Oshawa General Motors workers today as they spent the last day of their "holiday" in celebration of the signing of an agreement ending their 16-day strike.

Men who have been away from their jobs for more than two weeks and who worried for a time whether they would have jobs to return to were happy in the knowledge they will start out Monday morning on their usual wage-earning day and under improved conditions.

Decision of the men to accept the agreement yesterday had a noticeable effect on Oshawa. Picket lines which had been the principal point of interest in the town were abandoned and strikers thronged the main streets.

Hundreds went to a strikers' dance and other hundreds packed the movie shows. Gaiety was evident for the first time since the walkout even among the more staid workers who celebrated by taking their wives downtown for a bit of a stroll.

Parade For Thompson

The first item on the celebration program today was a triumphant parade in honor of Hugh Thompson who was to arrive in Oshawa from Washington. The organizer for the Committee for Industrial Organization called the strike in Oshawa and has been a principal figure in its continuance.

Thompson left Oshawa Wednesday, reportedly under an agreement to stay out of Canada until a settlement was reached in Toronto between strikers' representatives and company officials with Premier Hepburn presiding.

The workers planned to parade to the station when Thompson's train arrived and to honor the tall, sandy-haired organizer for the work he did for them.

Satisfaction of the workers in the settlement terms was reflected in their vote of 2,205 to 36 in favor of accepting it. After the vote was taken in the armories yesterday and the result announced talk among

TRANSPORT DRIVER STOPPED ON ROAD

Canadian Complains Men Demanded He Join Truckers' Union Or Avoid U.S.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., April 24 —(CP) — Another complaint was made yesterday to officials of a transport company by one of their drivers that he had been stopped at various points between here and Rochester, N.Y., by men who demanded he join a truckers' union or keep out of the United States.

The driver with his relief man were allowed to proceed after they promised to discuss the union with their employers. Similar complaints were discussed yesterday by Brian Hill, president of the transport firm, with his employees. Other drivers claimed they were interfered with in New York state.

T. Mulholland and J. Cline, drivers, said they were told it would cost $12 to join the union which called for a minimum wage of 70 cents an hour.

Fat Angel Frees Father Divine Clean-up Of 'Heaven' Begins

Finds "Faithful Mary" Plotting To Take Over Throne So He Expunges Her

5,000 COHORTS CHEER HIM

NEW YORK, April 24 (UP). — Father Divine, Harlem's dusky little "god," got out of jail on $300 bail last night only to discover that a lot of "bad angels" had been raising hell in his "heaven" while he was away.

A fat, yellow "angel," who signed herself "St. Mary Bloom," provided bail money, peeling 100 fire-dollar bills off a comfortable roll, and "god" walked free after a night behind bars.

In the street in front of the jailhouse more than 5,000 delirious followers were shouting and chanting: "He's God! He's God! Father Divine is God."

The little negro messiah smiled and chuckled softly as police forced a way through the mass of devotees, colored and white, who nearly mobbed him in their excitement. But as he was shoved into his automobile there was a worried frown on his bald, brown brow.

Faithful Mary Double-Crosses.

He hurried back to the red-brick "heaven" in Harlem to take up several pressing problems — not the least of which was "Faithful Mary," his No. 1 "angel," who already was making plans to take over "god's" job.

In addition to this—and the

Drunk Seeks Sleep —In Police Court

TORONTO, April 24. — (CP) — Looking for a place to rest, Joe Grogan, a drunk, reeled into the City Hall yesterday. After a search he found a big, quiet room, complete with chairs, and seated himself on a long, smooth bench. He stretched out and began to smoke. Then he slept.

A policeman found him there later. For of all places in the world, Grogan had chosen the men's police court as a resting place. A half hour later, when the court opened, Grogan re-appeared on the prisoners' bench, on which he had slept. When he pleaded guilty to being drunk in a public place, he was remanded to April 24 in custody for sentence.

Strong Objection Taken To Appointing Outsider

Alderman McIntyre Wants To Know Who Appointed Acting Sanitary Inspector

NEEDED TRAINED MAN

Strong objection was voiced by Ald. Malcolm McIntyre at Friday night's meeting of the Board of Health because Harry White of London had been appointed to act as temporary sanitary inspector for three months while Inspector Stapleton is on sick leave, instead of giving the position to a local man.

The matter came up after Dr. Murray Fraser, Medical Officer of Health, had read the report of the acting inspector.

"Why did you bring an outside man in to fill this position?" was the opening broadside fire by Ald. McIntyre.

Dr. Fraser replied that if a man could be found in Peterborough with the necessary training to do the work properly he would be very glad to have him appointed. He reminded Ald. McIntyre that at the last meeting it had been decided to write to the Ontario Department of Health in regard to the appointment.

"I didn't agree with that" replied Ald. McIntyre. "How long have you been medical officer of health, Dr. Fraser?"

"Since 1934," replied the M.O.H.

"This is an excellent report," said Ald. McIntyre, "but I would like to know why this kind of thing has not been cleared up long ago."

Dr. Fraser remarked that a stranger coming in could often pick out flaws that escaped the man who was on the job all the time.

"But why should there be such a difference," returned Ald. McIntyre. "Why should we get a report like this now?"

By A Trained Man

"The difference is," said Ald. Dutton "is that this report has been prepared by a trained man. Without any reflection on Mr. Stapleton other reports were not."

"I think this report is a reflection

MISSING WOMAN SOUGHT IN BUSH

Posse Of 35 Hunt District About Throoptown In Grenville County

BROCKVILLE, April 24.—A posse of thirty-five men were engaged Friday searching the woods and bush lands about Throoptown, Grenville County, for Mrs. A. Thorpe, who wandered away from the home of her son, William Thorpe, Throoptown, on Monday, and who has not been heard of since.

Footprints found around a church at Throoptown, a short distance from the Thorpe residence, believed to have been made by the missing woman, indicated she had been wandering around in an aimless manner.

Bush lands abound in the district and fears are held the woman may have become lost. She is 75 years old and wore a long brown coat and black hat, when last seen.

Board Member's Skill To Be Tested Tonight

THE day of dueling may be on the wane but it is still a day when challenges must be honorably discharged. Thus Charles Shaw, member of the Board of Education, will do combat on the wrestling mat with one of the huskier members of his Friday Night Supper Club, Don Ross, at the Y.M.C.A. at 8.30 o'clock this evening.

Undismayed, the prominent manufacturer challenged the author of the raspberry to a wrestling match this evening. Don Ross accepted readily.

It is reported many citizens plan to attend the event. It will go to two falls.

VERIGIN IS GIVEN 3 MONTHS IN JAIL

Doukhobor Leader Is Convicted of Vagrancy And Dangerous Driving

CASTLEGAR, B.C., April 24 (CP) —Peter Verigin, spiritual leader of some 20,000 Doukhobors in Canada, was convicted on charges of vagrancy and driving to the common danger, in Police Court here late yesterday. He was sentenced to three months' hard labor and fines totalling $75.15 by Stipendiary Magistrate R. A. D. West.

The Magistrate ordered that Verigin, twice previously sentenced to jail terms, serve the three months in the Provincial Jail at Nelson, twenty miles east of this West Kootenay community.

On the vagrancy conviction Magistrate West imposed the jail term and a fine of $50 and on the second conviction a fine of $15 and $10.15 court costs or fourteen days in jail in lieu of payment.

Both charges were laid following an incident on the Pioneer highway involving Verigin, his Doukhobor driver, John Konkin and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred M. Erickson of near-by Rossland, B.C.

Mr. and Mrs. Erickson were called as Crown witnesses and testified Verigin had passed them five times as they drove from Castlegar to Nelson, B.C., about thirty miles east of here. Each time he stopped his car, and brought the Erickson machine to a halt.

Erickson testified in each case Verigin was yelling, swearing in English although he spoke mostly Russian.

Bride Sports 11 Kimonos For Wedding To Leader Of 13 Million Jap Buddhists

Kyoto, Japan, April 24. (AP) PERFORMING his own wedding ceremony in the presence of 10,000 guests, Count Kocho Otani the living Buddha of Japan and spiritual leader of 13,000,000 Japan's Buddhists, married a beautiful 19-year-old posters today.

The County hereditary Abbot of one of the largest Buddhist sects, celebrated ancient rituals that united him in marriage with Princess Yoshiko Tokudaiji, granddaughter of the famous Prince Kinmihira.

To celebrate his marriage the Count distributed 1,500,000 yen ($420,000) to the poor while his tall bride gave away 1,500,000 classical fans to the wedding guests and to other friends.

The bride wore 11 vast-colored kimonos, each on top of the others, surmounted by a short embroidered coat, for the ceremony.

WINNIPEG WOMAN STANDS BY STORY REGARDING GABLE

Still Sure He Is Father Of Her Child Despite Jury's Verdict "Guilty Of Mail Fraud"

FACES FIVE-YEAR TERM

LOS ANGELES, April 24.—(AP)—A tall, solidly-built Englishwoman persisted today in asserting Clark Gable is the father of her illegitimate daughter after her conviction of mail fraud.

Mrs. Violet Wells Norton of Winnipeg faced the prospect of a five year prison term unflinching in her belief the film actor was the "Frank Billings" she said seduced her in 1923.

"She hasn't the slightest doubt of it," said her attorney, Morris Lavine. "What happened in that courtroom hasn't shaken her belief in the least."

Gable testified he never saw Mrs. Norton before and never was in England but after her conviction he expressed regret at the possibility of her being separated from her child.

Mrs. Norton wrote letters to Gable, to actress Mae West and many other Hollywood film folk, telling her story and demanding Gable be made to support her 13-year-old Gwendoline.

Jury Out Nearly 2 Hours.

A jury of middle-aged businessmen required only one hour and 55 minutes to find her guilty of mail fraud.

The law provides five years imprisonment or $1,000 fine, or both.

Lavine, her attorney, said he would petition for probation, "so that she can leave the country." If refused, he said he would appeal.

"She's a martyr to her belief," he asserted.

"She should have changed her story after seeing Gable in court yesterday. She should have said she was mistaken in thinking he was the Frank Billings she knew. Then she would have gone free."

Lavine's defence was that Mrs. Norton had made "an honest mistake" in identity.

Returned to the county jail, Mrs. Norton again demanded that the actor submit to a blood-test, for comparison with her own.

Hears Union Lays Plans To Organize 300 Ontario Plants

Premier Does Not Believe Province Willing To Bow Under Lewis Yoke

HURRIES INDUSTRY BOARD

Agreement Indirect Recognition Of C.I.O. Both Thompson And Martin Indicate

TORONTO, April 24. — A new challenge by Premier Mitchell Hepburn confronted the committee for Industrial Organization today while the Ontario government head prepared to set up his industry and labor board to settle industrial disputes.

On the basis of reports that the C.I.O. planned to unionize 300 plants in half a dozen Ontario cities and towns, the premier said last night: "If this is intended as a challenge for foreign agitators then I am prepared to accept it."

The reports said Hugh Thompson, C.I.O. organizer who headed the Oshawa General Motors strike planned a "real drive" for unionization among the 300 industries that supply parts and fabrics to the Oshawa plant.

Declaring his stand in the Oshawa strike had been vindicated, Mr. Hepburn, a few hours after negotiations formally ending the Oshawa strike were concluded, let his future position be known when he said:

"If the people of Ontario are prepared to accept the domination of Canadian industry by Lewis (John L. Lewis, C.I.O. chairman) and his said hirelings, then I will retire to my farm in Elgin county where I can forget responsibilities so far as public life is concerned.

No Lewis Dictatorship

"But I do not believe the people of Ontario will subject themselves to the domination of this would-be dictatorship under the direction of Lewis.

Meanwhile, in his announced desire to prevent future strikes, Mr. Hepburn hurried along the setup of his industry and labor board. Its purpose would be to step in with negotiations before a dispute could reach the strike point.

The premier said he wanted W. H. Moore, member of parliament for Ontario constituency, "the outstanding economist in the Dominion of Canada," for his board chairman. The premier expects Mr. Moore's reply to the invitation soon.

Statements in Washington by Thompson and Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers of America, of which the Oshawa unit is a local, indicated they considered the C.I.O. had been recognized in the Oshawa settlement, if only indirectly.

To this opinion Premier Hepburn replied that the employees' negotiators declared "in a signed statement."

FOOD BOLSTERS BASQUE ARMY

Troops Share With Hospitals Welcome Supplies From British Blockade-Runners

BILBAO, Spain, April 24—(AP), —The Basque government rushed food to its hungry defenders today with mounting hope the supplies brought by British blockade runners would avert victory for Gen. Emilio Mola's insurgent offensive.

While the mountainous Durango front, about 20 miles south-east of the capital, echoed machine gun, rifle and artillery fire, 400,000 inhabitants of Bilbao were jubilant, feeling the desperate hold of the insurgents by land and sea had been broken.

The first supplies brought to the refugee-swollen capital yesterday by the steamers Hamersley, Stanbrook and MacGregor past Gen. Franco's warships, went to hospitals and to troops fighting desperately to hold the El Orrio line, less than six miles from Durango.

The Minister of Provisions announced the food situation was improving and soon would be relatively normal, restoring confidence other supply carriers would defy the insurgent naval control.

The blockade runners came just in time. Bread was completely lacking on the eve of their arrival. The supply was still scant to-day owing to the impossibility of preparing immediately the great quantities of flour required.

C.I.O. SITDOWNERS QUIT FORD PLANT

Californians Expect Company Official To Arrive And Negotiate Settlement

RICHMOND, Calif., April 24. — (AP)—Six hundred sitdown strikers evacuated the Ford Motor Company assembly plant early to-day to the accompaniment of tooting automobile horns and shouting.

Ending the second such strike to close a Ford plant in the United States, the C.I.O. unionists began their exodus 11 hours after workers took possession, charging discrimination in the transfer of 12 men.

Officials of the United Automobile Workers were assured a high Ford official from Detroit would arrive today and settlement was but a matter of a day or two.

Frank Blaby, president of the local of the U.A.W.A. declared he was satisfied with the prospects of settlement.

County Council Likely To Lose Three Members Under New Act

Amendment Made As To Qualifications Of Deputy Reeves

UNITED COUNTIES HIT

Peterborough county council apparently will lose its three deputy-reeves as a result of an amendment to the Municipal Act passed during the recent session of the Legislature.

Townships entitled to send a Deputy-reeve to the county council must have more than 1,000 electors, and these electors shall not include the wives, sons and daughters of the heads of such families. It is understood that the change in the Act does not affect the constitution of a township council, but merely applies to the conditions which qualify a deputy-reeve for a seat in the county council.

From Miss Jennie Batten, the county clerk and treasurer, it was learned that prior to this amendment North Monaghan had 1,410 electors, Otonabee 1,366 and Smith 1,082, and these numbers included wives, sons and daughters resident on farms. It seemed likely that as an effect of the new legislation these three townships would not have more than 1,000 electors who are heads of families, and in that circumstance these townships would not qualify for representation in the county council by their deputy-reeves. They would be members of

Women's Art Association Hears Nancy Pyper At Banquet

Summarized Three Of Plays Given In Hart House Theatre

113 LADIES ATTEND

Nancy Pyper, directress of Hart House Theatre, Toronto, for the past two years, paid her second visit to Peterborough on Friday to be guest of honor of the members and friends of the Lyceum Club and Women's Art Association, at their annual dinner at the Empress Hotel. She was listened to and applauded by one hundred and thirteen ladies, guests at the dinner, which was a delectable repast served in the Empress' best fashion, with a delicious menu and decorations carried out by the ladies in Coronation colors.

Double bandings of red, white and blue and red and white carnations centered the individual tables and the head table, with the same tri-color streamers, had a gorgeous centerpiece in red velvet snapdragon, white carnations, white lilies, and Streptophila, in a blue crystal bowl on an oblong of blue mirror glass. In the bouquet were placed red, white and blue lighted tiny tapers, while tall silver candlesticks held blue candles and the place cards were embossed by tiny Union Jacks.

The president of the Art Association, Mrs. F. E. Hopper, was presiding lady, in a gown of wine velvet with corsage of lily of the valley and rosebuds. Mrs. Nancy Pyper wore a frock of soft sage green satin with full bloused bodice and straight elbow sleeves. Brilliant clips at either side of the neckline matched the bracelet on her left arm and she wore also for a time a black velvet wrap collared and cuffed by soft white fur.

The honorary president of the society, Mrs. W. Blackwell, at Mrs. Pyper's right, was in mauve chiffon with pearls and mauve corsage.

Others seated at the head table were the convenor of the social committee, Mrs. L. J. Leclair, and her assistant, Mrs. H. E. Connolly; the secretary, Mrs. J. E. Middleton; the treasurers, Mrs. A. E. Chalmers and Miss Laura Bellegham; the convenor of the Literary Study Club, Miss Greta Giles; the assistant convenor of Exhibitions, Miss Grace Reinhardt; the Archivist, Mrs. W. G. Green; also Mrs. F. M. Somerville, Mrs. R. J. Kidd, Miss Mary Stratton, Miss Tena Mathers and Miss Cathleen McCarthy.

After dinner and a pleasant interlude of music when Miss Isabel Duthie sang "Lovely Night" and "Annie Laurie," very charmingly, accompanied at the piano by Miss Muza Cox, Mrs. Hooper introduced Mrs. Pyper.

Three Plays.

Three of the plays which were included in this year's programs at Hart House Theatre were summarized by the guest speaker in the manner of the speaker who is infatuated with a subject. Manifestly, the drama, and all that surrounds it, is the darling of Mrs. Pyper's life and thought and she painted with descriptive words and with an emphatic and vital dramatization of various roles, the picture of three differing plays that were alike, however, in one thing, in that they (possibly true to the modern manner) all portrayed unpleasant aspects of life, with some mitigating bits of humor and the intense fashion that belongs to a speed-mad age.

Describing as she progressed the mode of staging, alluding to reactions of audiences, paying tribute at all times to the talent of cast members, Mrs Pyper's address was delivered in characteristic fashion, familiar to those who heard her on a previous occasion. She has the actress' ability to portray emotions without any trace of self-consciousness, to twist her tongue to a national idiom, to include at times the little unconventional expressions that intrigue audiences of a reserved type.

Speaking of her opening play this season, Ashley Duke's "One More River," as based on the divorce problem, taken from the angle of the time between the divorce nisi and the divorce absolute, Mrs. Pyper passed on to review quite extensively the much-talked-of "Insect Play," which is really a diatribe against war, disguised by exaggerated fantasy. In this keen and almost alarming satire that takes human foibles and holds them up to ridicule in clever words, insects are made to war and hate and devour one another, all in the manner of human beings.

A Different Drama.

Pictures brought by the speaker illustrated the fashion in which a weird and astounding play was presented in a stage setting composed mainly of three enormous blades of grass which served the purpose of dwarfing the human figures which were compelled to play the part of insects. Here, a lazy tramp viewed the battle, good or bad, of different insects, he was "sweaty, tired and a little drunk," and he lay supinely regarding the heartless butterflies (portraying the light-minded youth of the day); the scuttling beetles interested only in capital and their oft-reiterated 'pile' of worldly goods; the horrible fly that kills the gentle cricket (the mild mother of the species) in order to feed its equally horrible offspring, the larva, and then, lastly, the ants which, at the behest of a blind member who exhorts them to fast and faster speed, and the orders of a general who commands them to war (to gain the path between the two large leaves) and makes God his honorary colonel as long as the battle honors fall to his side.

'Manon Lescaut' Theme.

The second play was "The Abbe Prevost," written by Dr. Helen Waddell of London, England whose cousin, Mrs. Clarence Manford of Houston, Texas, and her hostess, Mrs. R. M. Waddell, widow of another cousin of the author, were guests at last night's dinner.

This play has to do with the Manon Lescaut story, the old theme of a very good man and a very bad woman. The Abbe Prevost, an unfrocked Benedictine monk, meets at The Hague the little French courtesan, beautiful, of course, who is to make a mock of his life. After she has robbed him of his money and brought him to the shadow of the scaffold, she deserts with a younger suitor. But the Abbe, chaplain in his declining years, tells his patron, an ancient rose, of his undying love for, and belief in, that girl he still regards as a pearl among women.

The third play revolves about additional unpleasant people. It is the final production for this year at Hart House Theatre, "Merrily We Roll Along," in which Mrs. Pyper herself took the part of old Mrs Riley, the rough-tongued fishwife mother of a beautiful and affected actress, Althea Royce (born Annie Riley). This play, in which the action progressed backward through the years, the opening portraying Althea throwing iodine into the eyes of her rival on the stage and in her husband's affections, ends with scenes in the far, forgotten years, where episodes led up to the tragic opening.

After the dramatic portrayals were ended, Miss Greta Giles conveyed the appreciation of the listeners to Mrs. Pyper, who greeted many of the guests as they paused before leaving, to have a word with her.

Debarred Councillor Seeks Seat Again

WINDSOR, Ont., April 24 (CP).—Ten nominations for a vacancy on City Council caused by disqualification of Reginald Morris were filed yesterday. Morris was among the nominations.

Milton McWilliam, runner-up to Morris in last December's aldermanic contest in Ward One, said he would qualify tomorrow. The election takes place next Friday.

Morris lost his council seat when it was shown in court he had not properly qualified prior to the elections because he was in arrears of rent.

WINDSOR CENOTAPH UNVEILED BY KING TO LATE GEORGE V.

Cost Of Simple Shaft Is Raised Jointly By Royal Borough And Canadian City

"NEW LINK WITH CANADA"

WINDSOR, Berkshire, April 24.—(CP Cable.)—In the shadow of ancient Windsor Castle, the King yesterday unveiled a memorial to his father—"George V—First sovereign of the House of Windsor"—and said he regarded it not only as a new association between the Royal family and his Royal borough, but "also as a link with another Windsor in the great Dominion of Canada."

The memorial, a simple cenotaph, is a joint gift of the people of this borough and of Windsor, Ontario. The Mayor of Windsor, Lieut.-Col. A. E. Churcher, declared His Majesty would be glad to know the full cost of the memorial had already been met, "thanks to the generous support given the appeal last year by the inhabitants of Windsor, England, and Windsor, Canada."

Great crowds gathered to watch the ceremony and hear the King's speech, the first of his reign. Before unveiling the memorial, the King said:

"It is with gratitude to the people of the Royal borough of Windsor that I shall unveil this memorial to my dear father, which they have set up in this place.

"They have been foremost in their loyalty and this memorial will be a new link in the long chain of associations which bound together my house and the citizens of Windsor.

"Link With Dominion."

"I like to think of it also as a link with another Windsor in the great Dominion of Canada.

"In itself the memorial seems to me to be finely conceived and finely executed. It is fortunate that it stands on a site against the background of the castle reminding us of the long and wonderfully continuous history of the English monarchy and the English people.

"If I may speak a moment of him in whose honor the memorial has been erected, let me only say that to me the personal memory of my father will always bring the inspiration of his high example.

"I hope that in trying to fulfill our great responsibilities the Queen and I may be supported by some measure of that trust and affection which was so fully given to him and to my dear mother by the peoples of this country and of the Empire."

His Majesty then unveiled the

A. F. OF L. EXTENDS BREACH WITH C.I.O.

President Green Calls War Council For May 18 To Marshal Labor Of America

WASHINGTON, April 24—(AP)—The American Federation of Labor virtually removed today its last hope of reconciliation with John L. Lewis and his rival committee for industrial organization.

President William Green summoned the Federation's high command to a general war conference on May 18 in Cincinnati "to marshal the forces of labor in America."

He placed the blame for failure to heal the breach on "those responsible for having set in motion a group clothed in garments of good faith but inspired by a mind and heart bent upon destruction of the organized labor movement of America."

There was no immediate response from the Lewis group. C.I.O. leaders have watched closely for developments in the Federation Council meeting this week while pressing forward with the organization of mass production workers.

Green invited the A. F. of L. executive council and the heads of all international and national unions to the Cincinnati conference.

A special convention of the Federation will not be called to expel the Lewis unions, he said, adding:

"It would ill-become the executive council to add dignity to a group and to a procedure that from its inception has been steeped in the cesspool of illegality and irresponsibility."

Driver Faces Charge After Cousin Drowns

PALGRAVE, Ont., April 24.—(CP).—A charge of manslaughter has been laid against Roy Rowley, 42-year-old resident of Ballercy, near this community, about 25 miles north of Toronto, after his cousin, James Rowley, 47, of Ballycroy, drowned when their car overturned in the spillway of a mill pond near here Thursday night.

According to police the men were returning home in driving rain when they stopped to get their bearings. In turning the car around, it is believed it backed down a steep embankment, overturning in a ditch used to drain the mill pond.

THE Royal Road TO THE CORONATION

His boys' camp is perhaps the King's closest welfare interest; a potatoe race and amateur photography are part of a camp visit.

"TAKE care of the children and the country will take care of itself." This slogan, coined, it is said, by the King himself, gives a sweeping insight into his view of industrial welfare work. He is most closely associated in the minds of British people with his intense interest in the task of alleviating slum conditions in the industrial areas of Britain, and in particular with the job of making the lot of the younger generation more bearable. Most closely, of course, he is associated with the famous boys' camp which bears the title of the Duke of York's camp at Southwold.

To-day then we picture his majesty in this setting. At the boys' camp each year four hundred boys selected from schools and from the poorer districts of England by the Industrial Welfare society, are gathered. Half are public school boys, and other half from the poorer working sections, who in no other manner perhaps would be able to enjoy a summer in camp, or to meet on a common recreational plane the school boy who looms as such a large part of English life. They camp together, play together, hike and work and rest together on a basis of absolute equality. And each year in the past his majesty as the Duke of York, has been a visitor at the camp. Whether he will be able to spare time from the onerous duties of Kingship is problematical, but certain it is that his interest will continue.

At camp, as our pictures show, he joins heartily into the full round of camp life. He runs races, he swims, he plays games and he strolls with his "charges" who look forward to this visit as perhaps the highlight of the entire camp experience.

The boys' camp is not his majesty's only welfare interest. Anything that tends to alleviate the crimness and drabness of much of England's poorer section, draws him like a magnet. He was first president of the association which was formed to supply more and better playing fields and recreational centres for boys and girls. He has exhibited an amazing interest and an amazing knowledge of working conditions and the workers' problems in industrial centres wherever he has met them on his empire travels and while he is best known for his welfare work among the younger generation, every worthy cause tending to raise the standard of living for his subjects, young and old, will draw the new King's approbation and assistance.

Coronation Spirit Steps Tempo Of London Life To Fever Heat

Business Booms As Thousands Of Visitors Pour Into Metropolis Daily

SPEND $135,000,000

By Edwin L. Johnson
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, April 24 (C.P.). — The Coronation spirit, gathering orderly momentum since the accession of George VI. less than five months ago, is rapidly reaching a climax throughout the land.

On every hand there is indication of stepped-up activity and anticipation of the much-heralded day—May 12—when the King and his Consort will be crowned amid splendor and solemnity within the sacred precincts of Westminster Abbey. He will be the 38th monarch to be crowned there.

The task of preparing for the great event is nearing the stage of finality; city and country is assuming a gala appearance; formal invitations to the Coronation service have been despatched; thousands have already flocked to the heart of the Empire, and thousands more are on their way.

It is estimated 250,000 overseas visitors will be in London for the Coronation proper. Statisticians believe they will spend approximately $135,000,000 during their stay.

Already the official contingents from Australia, South Africa, Rhodesia, and some of the other outposts have arrived. Those from India and other parts of the far-flung Empire are on the high seas. Canada's official party is not due for another 10 days.

Home Folks Arrive

Apart from the overseas and continental guests, London's population will be augmented by visitors from the provinces, Scotland, Ireland and Wales. There will be thousands of troops from the home forces.

Never has the present generation witnessed such scenes as have attended the coronation preparations. Within the space of a few months London has been transformed from a normal pitch of business and home-life to one of seething activity, thronged thoroughfares, crowded hotels and cafes and a blaze of color. The result has been a definite upswing in business.

Meanwhile, rehearsals for the coronation are going on regularly. Every phase of the ceremony has been checked to the most minute detail; principals in the Abbey service and a professional pageant thoroughly drilled.

Last Sunday thousands set the alarm early to witness the first major rehearsal of the coronation cavalcade.

Stop watches recorded the process of the procession and incidents which did not go as planned were noted. Those in charge voted the rehearsal a success.

Before they left London to take up temporary residence in Windsor Palace, the King and Queen visited the Abbey, accompanied by the Earl Marshal, the Duke of Norfolk. Their visit was kept so secret some of the workmen were not aware of their presence. Their Majesties were pleased with arrangements.

Queen Mary also paid a visit to the Abbey, testing the seat assigned to her and showing particular interest in the places allotted to the young princesses, Elizabeth and Margaret.

The King and Queen will remain at Windsor Palace until around May 4, when they will return to Buckingham Palace. They have been occupied with private rehearsals for weeks, but plan a full-dress drill a few days before the actual coronation.

HEAVIER DEMAND CANADIAN WHEAT

Export Sales During Past Week Totalled 4,000,000 Bushels

WINNIPEG, April 24—(CP).— A revival in overseas demand for wheat was credited to-day with imparting a measure of stability to future prices on the Winnipeg grain exchange this week and bringing about partial recovery from recent staggering setbacks.

Price-supporting export sales of 4,000,000 bushels, largely offsetting bearishness engendered by favorable prospects for new crops both in Canada and the United States, accounted for gains of 1¾ cents, net, in all futures. May closed this week Friday at $1.30⅞, July $1.28¼ and October $1.17¼.

The exports followed beliefs expressed in some markets quarters last week that Europe, a heavy importer this season, had virtually completed its 1937 buying program. The reports were a partial influence in the 10-cent-a-bushel boost registered here April 15 and 16, when May wheat rose to $1.31⅝.

Trading volume, however, dwindled during a week of quiet markets with speculators hesitant to re-enter the market in the face of excellent growing conditions in the United States winter wheat belt and good soil conditions in most spring-wheat areas.

Greatest influence in market fluctuations was an adjustment in company holdings, traders throwing overboard May wheat and buying October or July to keep away from the near delivery month, only a week away. Noticeable covering of previous sales was reported in Friday's session.

The Golden Text

Hebrews 11:7—"By faith Noah, being warned of God concerning things not seen as yet, moved with godly fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house."

Sabbath Message For the Shut-Ins

SABBATH MESSAGE By REV. E. R. JAMES Toronto

"The unclean spirit saith: 'I will return unto my house'."—St. Matthew 12:44.

A little known parable but one of the most terrible. The complete ruin of human personality is described by the Lord, "Who knew what was in man". The evil habit or desire had left the man, how we do not know. But the house is empty. The passion no longer has any power over him. He is now a decent, respectable member of society. But one day the old tenant comes back, looks in and returns with seven other spirits more wicked than himself and the last state of that man becomes worse than the first.

Perhaps our Lord was thinking primarily of the Jewish nation. They had been carried away into exile on account of their idolatry. After the exile there was no more danger of idolatry to the Jew was hateful. Instead of passing on the truth of the One Living God, which was their special discovery, they kept it to themselves and despised others. They became worse, not better. The spiritual sins of pride, hypocrisy, hatred of the Gentiles filled their hearts and souls so that when "He came unto His own His own received Him not." They crucified the Lord of Life and the destruction of the nation followed in due time.

It is important to remember that evil is a parasite, which lives on the human heart. It has a remarkable capacity to find a place in the human soul. No honest thinker can deny that in some mysterious way evil grips a man and becomes his master. A man loses his will power, and finally his personality. There was a time when he recognized the presence of the invader as one outside himself. Then slowly as the evil desires grow he finds himself helpless to resist. He becomes vile through and through. It is seen in his face. The evil spirit looks through his eyes. There is a real danger in the empty life. Nature abhors a vacuum. It is true also in the human soul. A man cannot remain neutral. He must be either growing better or worse.

Our Lord teaches us the importance of human personality. Man is made in the image of God. God is our Father and we are His children. We are to become like Him in character. Man is not intended to be a beast. So God became a man and dwelt among us to show us what a high value and dignity He places upon human nature. God's purpose is that man, enriched by the indwelling Spirit of God, may slowly, gradually develop into the Divine likeness. Man is intended to be like God, loving, gentle, unselfish, humble, self-sacrificing. Jesus Christ became the God-Man to show us that man can become like God.

"I will return unto my house," says the evil spirit. It is his house and he does not ask permission to enter. The Lord Jesus also stands outside the door. He will not enter without an invitation. "If any man will open I will come in and sup with him." He says. This is the wonder and glory of the Christian religion. The respect which God pays to our personality. The scrupulous care God takes to protect us from what might be called "The Divine Invasion." God will not enter your soul without your invitation.

When you open the door there enters in the Indwelling God. Who is of human mother. He understands the hesitations of your soul. He asks but one thing that you love Him, you desire Him. Then slowly, gradually He will transform your character that men may see how lovely and beautiful God is. There are too many unlovely Christians. When the evil spirits entered into that man his friends saw the horrible face of evil through his face.

When men see the Spirit of God entering your soul and giving you power to reproduce in you His gentleness. His love, His charity, His self-sacrifice, His humility, then they know that goodness is the most attractive of all powers. They see something of the Glory of God in you. The true children of God are lovely people to meet and to have in your homes.

CATHEDRAL MUSINGS

Cause follows effect even as the night follows the day, and the pitiful tragedies of human life that wring the hearts of those who feel, are the results of our own ignorance, at some time, in some place. On the other hand, those whom life apparently favors are also but reaping the effects of which they have sown the cause. We may not be objectively aware of these things, but none the less there is always a reason somewhere. If we knew ourselves, our past inner history, we would know the "why" of life somewhat better; but most of us are only aware of that shallow level of consciousness in which they ordinarily live and are in utter ignorance of either the depths or heights within themselves. It is not a case of a Dr. Jekyll and a Mr. Hyde, it is a case of God and the beast, and a thousand different wills pulling in every direction.

The fact is that there is but One Will in all the universe and the universe is the expression of that Will, and all the lives inhabiting the universe are but individualised expressions of the One Life. But, when a segment of that One Life becomes associated with "matter" as a living organism, there develops a consciousness capable of reacting more or less to the stimuli of its surroundings. And straightway that consciousness sunk deep in matter develops a self-will, retaining only the Divine faculty of choice. This is where the ignorance comes into play, for the self-will imagining itself a separate things chooses to act in opposition to the One Will and so the cycle of pain and destruction is entered upon. It is impossible to use the little part of the Will of God that manifests in us in opposition to the infinitely greater part outside of us. Such an attempt is bound, sooner or later to end in suffering and destruction. And yet that is what the majority attempt to do, and attempt in vain, binding themselves ever more securely to the chain of cause and effect. Ignoring this chain of causation, humanity perpetually tinkers at effects with little or no effect, but no cosmic law he scotched one evil than another springs up in its place.

And so must it ever be until humanity learns to enter his self-will into the Will of God. Hence the preachers preach in vain, the reformers reform, no one, not even themselves, and man hangs suffering on the cross of his own making. There must be remain until he learns his lesson and becomes a co-ordinated instrument of the Will of God. Ignorance is the one original sin and is inherent in kind, for man is not only ignorant of his God, he is ignorant of his own true nature and also of his relationship to his environment of the material, psychic and spiritual worlds. He is afraid to stir the deep, so he builds up a defence mechanism and takes refuge in the illusionary that there are things it is not intended for us to know," thus denying the wisdom of God who endowed him with a reason to use in the search for truth.

The Obedience of Noah

"BRASS TACKS" ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By DR. ALVIN E. BELL

The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for April 25 is Genesis 5:28-9:28, especially 8:20-22; 9:8-17, the Golden Text being Hebrews 11:7, "By faith Noah, being warned of God concerning things not seen as yet, moved with godly fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house.")

AS MEN multiplied upon the face of the earth sin also increased until "God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually . . . and it grieved him at his heart . . . But Noah found grace in his sight." So here against the black background of antediluvian sin the word "grace" makes its first appearance in the pages of the Bible, in the life of one of God's great heroes of faith.

Noah—A Man of Faith.

The dominant characteristic of Noah's life is his faith. This stands out in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews, where we read, "By faith Noah, being warned of God concerning things not seen as yet, moved with godly fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house." In this faith "Noah walked with God" resisting the temptations and allurements of an ungodly world, and living the life of righteousness before his generation.

Noah—A Man of Obedience

Out of his faith came his obedience to God's command concerning the building of "an ark to the saving of his house". The "seed of the woman" promised in Eden as the remedy for sin must be prepared for, and Noah's faith and faithfulness provided God's only channel in that generation. Through this remnant spared out of a wicked race, God would make a fresh start and a new effort to bring about the world's redemption. "Thus did Noah according to all that God commanded him, so did he." Emerging from the ark after the deluge his first act was to worship God by whose grace he and his had been saved through faith. "And Noah builded an altar unto the Lord; and took of every clean beast, and of every clean fowl, and offered burnt offerings on the altar."

Noah—A Covenant Man.

The justification of Noah is evidenced in God's response to his worship, as "the Lord said in his heart, I will not again curse the ground any more for man's sake." This covenant, originating in God's loving heart, was offered to Noah and his seed, and sealed in typical sacramental fashion in the rainbow. "God spake unto Noah, and his sons with him, saying, And I, behold, I establish my covenant with you, and with your seed after you; neither shall all flesh be cut off by the waters of a flood . . . and God said, This is the token of the covenant which I make between me and you and every living creature that is with you, for perpetual generations: I do set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth . . . and the bow shall be in the cloud: and I will look upon it, that I may remember the everlasting covenant between God and every living creature of all flesh that is upon the earth." That sacramental bow was to Noah the assurance of God's mercy as the sacramental cup of our Lord is to us today, as he says, "This is my blood of the new covenant, which is poured out for many for the remission of sins."

A National Message

How can the statesmen of Russia, of Germany, of Italy, as things are now constituted in the international world, be loyal to the Prince of Peace, Who, after all is KING IN ONE KINGDOM ONLY? . . . IS HE NOT EQUALLY KING IN EVERY KINGDOM OF THE WORLD?

Let Holy Scripture, which voices the truth of God, make answer to this question.

The Lord shall be called "THE GOD OF THE WHOLE EARTH." But He is always, and inclusively—not exclusively—THE KING OF ISRAEL.

Take the names of God as a guide. As El, Elohim, He has revealed Himself as the universal Creator and Sustainer of the material universe.

As Elyon el (the Most High God) He has revealed Himself in His relations to all the human family.

As El Shaddai (God Almighty) He has revealed Himself as inclusively the Father-God of the Abrahamic race.

As Jehovah He has revealed Himself as KING IN ISRAEL (including Judah) for ever. THE NAME IS NOT USED IN CONNECTION WITH THE OTHER NATIONS AND KINGDOMS. All nations shall ultimately come into the kingdom of Israel; But He is the King of Israel.

Jesus Christ is the REDEEMER of Israel. He has made atonement for the sins of the world; as to individual salvation. But He is the Redeemer of Israel alone.

He is coming specifically to take THE THRONE OF HIS FATHER DAVID, and He shall rule over THE HOUSE OF JACOB FOR EVER, and of His Kingdom there shall be no end.

When He does come, IT WILL BE TO TAKE THE THRONE WHICH WAS ESTABLISHED OVER ISRAEL FOR EVER.

Let statesmen and churchmen realize the fact now being referred to. It is insisted on inexorably throughout all the Bible.

If, then, we are to be loyal to the Prince of Peace we shall primarily see to it that our citizenship in the Israel Kingdom is in order.

I had the privilege of acquaintance with the Governor of one of the great States in the American Union. He graduated at the same college from which I have a much valued degree. We each spoke at commencement exercises on one great occasion.

The time came when he had been elected in his office as State Governor. It was necessary that he should produce the evidence. But, alas, his father had never taken out his naturalization papers as an American citizen. Therefore, my friend was still a citizen of his father's country—Norway—and could not, until qualified, assume office. Immediate application for full nationalization met the need of the case.

SUPPORT IS URGED OF KIWANIS SHOW

Mayor George Macdonald Asks Citizens To Support Worthy Project

Expressing his deepest appreciation of the work that has been accomplished in the past and efforts that are being expended at the present time by the Kiwanis Club members, on behalf of the city's underprivileged children, His Worship Mayor George Macdonald urges the hearty public support of the forthcoming play to be presented under auspices of the club in the Collegiate Auditorium.

Having in mind the great need which the Kiwanis Jackson Park Health Camp, operated each summer, is fulfilling in helping to build sturdy, happy children who will be the future citizens of Peterborough, Mayor Macdonald declared: "Money is required to help forward this worthy work and the general public can help in a very material way to supply that need by patronizing the Kiwanis "Jollies" show which is being staged next week." His Worship pointed out that the primary purpose of this particular effort is to raise funds for the erection of a wading pool for under-privileged children in King Edward Park.

AIMEE'S MANAGER HAPPILY MARRIED

Flare - Back Comes After Lawyer Claims Mrs. McPherson in Love With Knight

LOS ANGELES, April 24—(AP)—A flare-back from earlier testimony that Aimee Semple McPherson was "in love" with Giles Knight, her Angelus Temple business manager, came yesterday in the trial of her estranged daughter's $150,000 slander suit against Willedd Andrews, Temple attorney.

Jacob Moidel, former Temple lawyer and suitor of Mrs. McPherson's daughter, Roberta Semple, said Wednesday he accused the evangelist of being in love with Knight during a quarrel last Labor Day when he and Miss Semple protested Mrs. McPherson's proposal to confer wide powers on Knight.

The middle-aged Knight took the stand yesterday and testified his married life, "going on 16 years," has been a "happy" one.

Miss Semple testified she gave her mother some warning advice about appointing "flattering" men as business managers of the temple during one of three unsuccessful attempts to arrange a reconciliation.

WARRANT ANNULLED

Bannister's Declaration Is Called Deceiving.

QUEBEC, April 24 (CP) — Warrant for the arrest of Ann Harding, blonde stage and screen star, was annulled here to-day by Judge Lactare Roy. It was issued last May on complaint of Miss Harding's former husband, Harry Bannister, that she was endeavoring to abduct their nine-year-old daughter from the United States.

Bannister's declaration, said the French-Canadian Judge to-day, was "in some parts deceiving, highly inconvenient, and as far away from the truth as possible."

The Obedience of Noah — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—Genesis 5:28-9:28.

By the Rev. Alvin E. Bell And Alfred J. Buescher

From the time of Adam to Noah wickedness increased among men until God determined upon a course of judgment through a flood. He commanded Noah to build an Ark for the saving of his family.

Noah believed God and obeyed his commands and "found grace in God's sight." Thus Noah and his family were spared in the ark. "By faith Noah—prepared an ark to the saving of his house."

Noah's first act upon emerging from the ark was to build an altar and worship God for the salvation God had given them from the deluge.

God made a covenant with Noah that he would never again destroy the earth with a flood. He made the rainbow the sign of this covenant.

SATURDAY, APRIL 24, 1937

It Is Good News

EMPLOYEES of General Motors at Oshawa were making cars prior to April 8, and it is their intention to resume their occupation. They voted to return and the majority in favor of going back to work was so impressively large that one can but wonder how much genuine enthusiasm there was in favor of a strike in the first place.

Looking over the terms of the agreement signed by the company and its employees we can see nothing which could not have been secured at the inception of the trouble, but then strikes are usually settled that way.

The C.I.O. as such was not represented in the final negotiations by an official from United States, but reports indicate that only members of the union were allowed to vote on the strike settlement, ballots being issued only to those who had the official button. It does seem that all employees should have been allowed to vote. Looking at the same question from another angle it is in the union membership that one might have anticipated the strongest feeling against resumption of work if the agreement did not include recognition of the C.I.O., as that seemed to be the one point on which the strike hinged.

IT IS NOT possible to know at the moment just how strong the C.I.O. feeling is in Oshawa. Hugh Thompson, the C.I.O. official from United States, appeared during the first stages of the strike, to have the situation pretty much in the hollow of his hand, but when he found he was facing stiff opposition from Premier Hepburn, he decided to leave. His senior officer, Homer Martin, had also failed to put in an appearance, but a lesser emissary was despatched to Oshawa, arriving there shortly before the vote was taken. He had not been sent for, and when he arrived it was necessary for him to explain who he was and why he had arrived. He was a field officer, and had come to make the Oshawa workers feel they had not been deserted by the C.I.O. headquarters, and in order that they might have the sensation of having an under-shepherd in their midst.

The plain facts are there, though—Hugh Thompson moved out in the last stages of the struggle.

There was no financial support coming from the parent organization.

The fair deduction is that the C.I.O. did not regard Oshawa or Ontario as good territory in which to operate.

THERE HAVE been no end of opinions expressed regarding the course followed by Premier Hepburn, but a careful and fair analysis of the entire situation leads only to one conclusion, and that is he was right in his contention that he did not want the C.I.O. in Ontario. He said so in such a way that there could be no possibility of misunderstanding what he meant, and he kept on saying it, and nearly every paper in the province agreed his course was right. And so it was.

The C.I.O. domination of the industrial situation in Ontario would mean foreign domination, and if a strike were to be called in this province to bring pressure to bear upon a company operating across the line, then we would indeed be in a miserable situation. We are quite certain there are enough clear-headed labor men in this province to settle their own differences with their own employers without having the settlement pass to other and foreign hands.

IN THE broader sense of the situation the securing of an agreement between employers and employees does not in itself guarantee that the best of relationships shall prevail. If it brings with it the feeling "I have to do this and you have to do that" then the working atmosphere is not likely to be the best. The ideal condition is where there is complete understanding and the maximum of confidence between the two parties concerned.

* * *

PETERBOROUGH is pleased that Oshawa has the strike cloud lifted. We hope it does not return. We believe the workers there are just as reasonable as those in any other city. They will respond to kindness and consideration and fair treatment, and right there is the material with which to erect the most formidable kind of barrier against the strike menace again making its appearance.

The Case of Dr. Hett

Dr. John E. Hett of Kitchener, after having practiced medicine for 46 years, has had his name erased from the register by the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and that means he is through as far as medical practice is concerned. The reason is that Dr. Hett has been working on cancer, and the charge against him is that he had discovered a cure. This Dr. Hett denies. The word "cure" does not actually enter into the recorded proceedings, the words used being "that the said John Emil Hett claims to have discovered a specific for cancer, which claim is unsubstantiated."

The case seems to be that Dr. Hett has not proved to the satisfaction of his fellow practitioners that he has discovered this "specific," although he had witnesses in the person of five women whose medical record he submitted for examination, and three of the five had been previously declared to be beyond hope of recovery.

This paper understands quite well how necessary it is to protect the public against all those who would willingly cash in on the intense desire of afflicted people to be cured of cancer, but in the case of Dr. Hett it appears his actual offence was in refusing to reveal to the College of Physicians and Surgeons the nature of the serum which he has developed and which he has been using. Dr. Hett is reported to have changed his mind on that point and has declared his willingness to comply with that request.

We have every respect for the manner in which doctors regard the ethics of their profession. It is an honorable one and it is one where people who are sick trust entirely to the wisdom and skill of their attending physician, but we believe the statement is fair that when it comes to the treatment of cancer apart from surgery and radium there are few in the profession who would claim to have that expert knowledge which would fit them to pronounce on the work of one who has produced a serum treatment. The entire world is now looking for new treatment for cancer, and if Dr. Hess is willing to reveal the nature of his serum and offer it for investigation to the College of Physicians and Surgeons he should be given opportunity to do so, and his case should be reviewed on that basis.

The Annual Muddle

The annual muddle regarding daylight saving time is to begin in several centres within a few days; other cities, including Peterborough have postponed the start, and in Peterborough we leave it until close to the end of May.

The cities which will have daylight saving are:

St. Catherines	Toronto	Oshawa
Niagara Falls	Kingston	Hamilton
Peterborough	Sudbury	Guelph

The communities which according to present information, will remain on standard time, are:

Belleville	Lindsay	Stratford
Kitchener	Galt	Woodstock
London	Chatham	Windsor
Barrie	Owen Sound	St. Thomas
Brantford	North Bay	Sault. Ste. Marie

That is a plain muddle, and added to the list given above might be placed almost every town and village in the province as remaining on standard time. In the case of Peterborough, one of the centres of the tourist district, it has placed itself out of touch with its entire territory.

A number of people have stated to the Examiner that they believe daylight saving time, if it is of any use whatever, is shut off at the time of the year when there might be some virtue in it—that is in the days of later summer or early fall when the evenings are beginning to shorten.

Our present zig-zag system is a plain nuisance and will continue to be so as long as municipalities continue to make it so. Our central governments do not seem to possess the courage to take the matter in hand and bring about uniformity, so we just muddle around and make the worst of it.

Sam Hunter Quits

Sam Hunter is through as a cartoonist; he is 79 and thinks he ought to quit, although there are thousands of Canadians who may differ with him on that point. In turn his work appeared in the Toronto World, where his scope for political satire had full rein; in the Globe, the News and for many years in the Star.

This country has produced more dashing and daring cartoonists than Sam Hunter, but none more subtle or more likeable. He was always able to bring to his characters something which while pointed was never offensive.

A son of Cavan, only a few miles from this city, and long a summer visitor at Stoney Lake, this district has always had a peculiar interest in Sam Hunter, a feeling which if interpreted would be expressed in phrases of proprietorship, indicating that this district owned him. He must have been doing political cartoons for almost half a century, and during that time he has portrayed the weakness, the strength, the follies and the wisdom of many of Canada's leaders in provincial and federal life. A long career has been his, and it may be he is not entirely through yet. That will be the hope of many Canadians.

A Form of Insanity

There appears to be some ground for the claim that the human race is going crazy. New York has been having an example of it in recent weeks in the person of Father Divine with his Harlem Heaven. This man claimed—and still does—that he is God, although we apologize for spelling that name with a capital letter in this instance. His followers are classed as angels, and a woman with whom he consorts is known as "Faithful Mary."

Father Divine, a colored man, is in jail just now because a man who serves court writs broke into one of the meetings on business and was thrown out and stabbed. The meeting was taking place in an upstairs room which was referred to as heaven.

The amazing thing is that Father Divine has been able to gather about him quite a collection of followers who actually believe he is God and they are angels. At least that is what they claim and make their claims with all the certainty of approved and accredited sanity.

It is conceivable that some one individual with such notions in a deranged head might be found in a mental hospital, but the fact of scores of people being drawn to apostleship in such a mad cult in the year 1937 is amazing if not alarming. Strange world it is when that which is sacrilegious is able to advance to the point of blasphemy and draw to itself a following which is admittedly large among people who have the right to go where they wish and do what they desire.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The Montreal Star in an editorial article calls tag day a nuisance. We understand they are not very popular in Aberdeen either.

Apparently about the only men put out of work by the Oshawa strike who are not going back to their jobs are Mr. Croll and Mr. Roebuck.

Toronto may limit the number of gasoline stations to 709 which means hardship for folk who may have to drive two or three blocks to reach a gas depot.

Now that the strike is over the Toronto papers may be able to find some other topics to discuss in their editorial columns.

Amelia Earhart says the Dionne quintuplets are "lovely children" which is a discovery made long since by many other folk not nearly so famous as the celebrated aviator.

Premier Aberhart says he proposes to remain in office until he is kicked out and that confirms the theory that we have long held in regard to the Social Credit premier.

The battleship Hood has been ordered home from Spanish waters for the coronation, the authorities doubtless realizing that she has not been doing much where she is.

Sixteen doctors are to be on duty in Westminster Abbey for the coronation. They may not be needed but at least they are being given a great opportunity to see the royal show.

Toronto's mayor has bought himself a chain to wear at the coronation. The council should do the thing right and supply him with a couple of beef-eaters or something of the kind as a bodyguard.

With the advent of daylight saving in the larger cities comes the time for the rest of us when our favorite radio program has a habit of being over just when we have tuned in expecting to hear it start.

Now that Canada's trade threatens to climb to record proportions along come strikes in industry and among harbor workers to check the upward surge. What promised to be a year of abounding prosperity is already seriously menaced.

From one o'clock on the morning of Coronation Day not a single motor vehicle is to be permitted anywhere in London touched by the procession. That seems to deal nicely with people who like to drive up and park at the last moment.

New Toronto council has passed a resolution of regret at the enforced resignation of Hon. David Croll. It does not, however, attempt to explain how he could have remained in office when his view of an important issue was at direct variance with that of his leader and the majority of his colleagues.

COUSIN EZRA

(By A. R. K.)

¶ My Cousin Ezra schemes a lot, and gives his plans a deal of thought, but he don't always win; of late he's thought of holidays, of lakes and streams and sheltered bays, they all appeal to him.

¶ And so he wrote to Cousin Jake, who has a cottage by the lake, he put his plan all down, suggesting Jake should visit him, and mingle with his kith and kin, and likewise see the town.

¶ And Cousin Jake wrote back right smart, the invitation touched his heart, his letter was quite long; he'd like to visit Ezra now, he'd hired a man to tend his cow, he'd bring his wife along.

¶ They landed in three days ago, and Ezra staged up quite a show, he took them here and there; Jake and his missus seemed so glad, the best time they had ever had, they voted Ezra square.

¶ And Ezra laid off work one day, to see that they'd enjoy their stay, he drove them in a hack; and Ezra figured all the time, when summer weather turned out fine, why Jake would ask him back.

¶ Then Ezra turned the talk one day, of where he'd take his holiday, and joy was on his face; until Jake said six months ago, that business was so dead and slow—he'd gone and sold his place.

A Bit of Nonsense

Why Uncle Swooned

Little Eric's uncle came to stay with the boy's family, and Eric had to give up his bed to make room for him. One morning at breakfast uncle remarked, "I must thank the thoughtful person who put the glass of water by my bed. I found it very refreshing when I woke up during the night." "Oh!" cried Eric, "have you swallowed my tadpoles an' everything?"

Even the Birds Don't Like It.

(From the Winnipeg Tribune.)

SLEEPYHEADS who hold a grudge against the birds for being so happy at five o'clock in the morning may revise their ideas after reading a report of the United States Department of Agriculture on the habits of birds.

It appears that birds, like men, are not always the jolly early risers we have supposed them to be. They can get out of the wrong side of the bed, too. "In the case of the robin and the wood thrush," says the report, "the first signs of morning activity may be expressed by a few querulous notes." The song sparrow and the red bird are worse. They wake up, emit a few plaintive notes—and then go back to sleep.

The blue jay appears to be among the few birds who live up to the popular conception. He wakes with a joyous song in his throat and proceeds to sing it.

This information, given presumably by a competent observer of avian temperament, should make us all feel better. Now we know that the supposed enthusiasm of the lark is actually a protest against the necessity of taking his head from under his wing and scratching for a living.

After all, the dispositions of birds have been passed on to us mostly by poets, who, as a class, take a lot of latitude when dealing with matters of fact. The United States Department of Agriculture, in pointing out that birds are fellow-sufferers with humans in the matter of early rising, has done much toward bringing about a better understanding between them.

Criticism of Wrong Kind.

(From the Chatham Daily News.)

APPARENTLY many people of this country have yet to learn the lesson that public men are entitled to treatment which is at least as decent as that accorded to citizens in private life. For instance, when Premier Hepburn took a strong stand in support of the preservation of law and order in connection with the strike in the General Motors Plant, Oshawa, the charge is said to have been made by no less a person than a University Professor, that the government's action may have been influenced by the andres of stock which the Prime Minister and members of his cabinet held in the motor company.

Right on the heels of the allegation comes a vigorous and decisive denial from Hon. Harry Nixon, who states, after a close check-up, that neither the Premier or any of his cabinet ministers possess General Motors stock. The matter will, and should be investigated, and if the Professor has overstepped the bounds of fairness, he should be compelled to make amends. Probably the professor has been misquoted. In view of Mr. Nixon's denial this would be a happy solution to the impasse.

However, there are many people too prone to impute ulterior motives against men in public life. Such charges may upon occasions be quite true, but before they are made, a reasonable—and in fact a thorough—attempt should be made to secure the facts to back them up.

Public men in this country are compelled to endure a lot of abuse from short-sighted, non-thinking or deliberately defamatory individuals. Sometimes we wonder why life in government service is attractive to honest, clean men of ability and integrity. Too often public men are regarded as legitimate targets for abuse of all kinds from partisan opponents and irresponsible critics.

There is a place for honest criticism. It is often constructive and in the public interest; but false accusations launched with no attempt to discover their untruthful character, is undoubtedly robbing the country of the valuable services of competent men who otherwise would be attracted to the public service.

BUYING OUR WOOD.

(North British Agriculturist)

SCOTLAND, which knows good value when it sees it, is buying more Canadian timber than at any time in its history.

The year 1936 saw the beginning of trade between that country and Canada for ready-made doors. It began with doors of Douglas fir, but now includes some white pine, and has grown so rapidly that last year Canada gained by far the largest share of the Scottish trade in imported doors. Their totals, through Glasgow and Leith, amounted to 67,715, of which Canada supplied 51,750, or roughly 76 per cent. The principal competitors were the United States and Sweden.

There has also been a marked increase in the Scottish consumption of Eastern Canadian spruce. It has, in fact, been the most important of Eastern timbers into the Scottish market, and accounts for three-quarters of the year's imports of Eastern Canadian soft woods.

IRONY OF FATE.

THIS week an immense crowd of people attended a funeral in London, Eng., to do honor to the memory of an Australian soldier who had been killed in a peculiar manner while in England as a member of the Australian military contingent to the coronation. He was hit by a bicyclist on Birdcage Walk outside Wellington barracks, where the Australian contingent is quartered.

The simplicity of the accident that took this man's life, illustrates the anomalies that are found in the affairs of existence. Gunner Arthur Percy Sullivan, V.C., who was the victim of the mishap, won the Victoria Cross in 1919 when he rescued four comrades from a Russian swamp under heavy fire. After an experience of that kind the normal conclusion would be that the subject would have a reasonable chance to escape the less spectacular hazards of the streets. But there is nothing certain in that connection and human beings must be prepared for the unexpected at all times.

THE BEST POLICY.

(Brantford Expositor.)

IT is not to be suggested that even the best-intentioned citizens or their elected administrators have been or will be faultlessly forthright. It is easy, at this date, to see the fallacy of what, 20 or 40 years ago, appeared to be perfectly sound and highly progressive policy. The point is, however, that the course of events has demonstrated that it is neither sound nor safe to mortgage the future too heavily and that, in short, the ancient advice "Pay as you go" is, after all, the soundest. Having had that point vigorously and, as the taxpayers well know, painfully demonstrated, the least municipal administrators can do in the future is to be guided by the experience thus gained.

SPEED FOR WHAT?

(Daily Express, London)

ITALY claims a new air record, an average of 325 m.p.h. on a trial run by one of its new warplanes. The Air Reporter says that speed, set up on a standard Italian warplane type, is the same as our Schneider fliers reached in "suicide" freak 'planes, useless except for a few hours of racing life, in 1931. If Mussolini can build more 'planes like this he can reach all Europe from Italy in quick time. Pray that the skill to build 'planes as fast as these will be used for civil aviation, for otherwise this record is not one that man will praise for long.

THE TRANSIENT.

(Kitchener Record)

IN Port Arthur a man sought and obtained from kindly residents food but no money. He threw away the food and will serve three months in jail on a vagrancy charge. And serve him right! The man or woman who will accept good food and then throw it away when out of sight of the compassionate donor is a poor sort.

It is hard to know just how to treat the transients who present themselves at our door to ask for money or food. It establishes a dangerous precedent which will ultimately cause considerable annoyance. Needy individuals can always be referred to the proper authorities where they will be looked after. Some householders invite the unknown caller in, seat him at a table, and place before him a good meal. If hungry, he will eat and the hospitality will be appreciated. If he is a fake and in no need of food he will probably beat as hasty a retreat as possible.

To The Editor

MR. GORDON AND THE UNITED CHURCH

Editor Examiner,

Sir: The Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., late minister in the cabinet of Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King, wrote a very strong and in some ways a very pertinent letter regarding the action of the United Church of Canada in espousing the cause of the strikers instead of trying to mend their own sadly-wrecked fences. Mr. Gordon, however, if he will allow me, overlooks the fact that the United Church in conjunction with the modernists of other churches, including the Anglican and Baptist, has itself "struck" against the inspiration of the Bible and against the divine sonship of Christ. They have moved away from God to man and it is (I suppose) in furtherance of what they call humanitarianism that they propose to take up the causes of the masses and having ceased to be the Church of Christ have become the church of man. Mr. Gordon, I think, overlooked that fact but will the other Christian people of Canada overlook it? Is Christianity to pass? That is the issue. I believe the people to be true to the Faith.

J. H. BURNHAM,
Peterborough, Ontario.

OUT OF CONTROL.

(New York Herald Tribune)

HERE is a weapon which any little group of workers can use on the spur of the moment to make a monkey of his leadership. "Sit-down strikes," he is quoted as saying, "are outlawed when the employer signs a wage contract with a labor union, and in such cases the unions will exert themselves to prevent sit-down strikes." Too bad the seamen striking against the International Mercantile Marine didn't read his statement. One realizes, of course, his complete unconcern for the strikes involved in this species of holdup. The amazing thing is his bland assumption, in light of the record, that he or any other union executive can say when and where it shall be employed. Since he signed the General Motors contract there have been thirty-odd sit-down strikes in General Motors plants. Perhaps some of these, though certainly not the majority, have been engineered by workers outside of the U.A.W.A. None the less, they show that Lewis is powerless to control them to get out of his following.

STEADY SHELLING NOW IN 12TH DAY UNNERVES MADRID

Elaborate Warnings Go Out As Citizens Begin To Abandon Fatalistic Attitude

SUBWAYS JAMMED

MADRID, April 24 (AP)—Shrapnel from insurgent shells again reaped death and injury in downtown Madrid for the 12th successive day of bombardment today, causing at least a dozen casualties.

One man was killed when a shell whistled into Gran Via, the capital's main thoroughfare. Of the other casualties, several hung between life and death.

More than 250 persons have been killed and hundreds injured in the attacks. As on previous days, many of the shells ploughed into the Gran Via area. Subway station stairways and basements quickly filled with refugees.

The toll today came despite a series of stringent regulations promulgated by General Jose Miaja's general staff to educate Madrid's 1,000,000 inhabitants in safety measures.

Army Orders.

The citizens, jolted out of the fatalism with which they have met five and one-half months of insurgent siege, were warned:

1—Keep off wide streets running east and west like Gran Via. If it is necessary to use them, walk close to doorways ready to duck. (Franco's gunners have been firing from the west).

2—On streets running north and south like Castellano Boulevard, walk on the sunny side in the morning and the shady side in the afternoon.

3—Do not cross plazas diagonally but walk around them, ready to dive into doorways.

4—If caught in a park or open space, lie down.

5—Streetcar motormen on routes running east or west should speed up or halt as required, on north and south streets halt instantly to allow passengers to seek safety in buildings.

On the Usera sector, southwest of the city, where Miaja's militiamen took advantage of the government's counter-shellfire yesterday to shove against insurgents entrenched in the workingmen's suburb, see-saw combat developed with the government gaining the final advantage.

Coronation colors furnished a very attractive setting for the Mother and Daughter banquet, which was held in the Sunday School hall, St. James' United Church last night. The banquet which was jointly sponsored by the W.M.S. Auxiliary and the Y.L. Mission Circle was enjoyed by more than 135 guests. The tables were done in red, white and blue with streamers of bunting draped artistically over the tables and centred by a large gold crown.

Presiding as chairman, Mrs. F. B. Elliott, Auxiliary president, welcomed the mothers and daughters in whose honor the banquet was held. Among the guests seated at the head table was the speaker, Miss Marion Coon, Rev. and Mrs. Craik, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Lapp, officers of both societies and others taking part in the program.

After the bountiful supper, served by Mrs. W. K. Sloane with her efficient committee, a brief toast list in honor of the King, the Church, the Mothers and the Daughters was pledged. In the usual way the assembly responded with "God Save the King," to the first and to the church "The Church's One Foundation," was sung.

In a loving tribute, Dorothy Drysdale made fitting reply. In her toast to "Our Daughters," Mrs. E. Baldry spoke of the joy and pride of motherhood and on behalf of the daughters Mrs. R. Kitchen voiced their appreciation of a mother's love.

Community singing of favorite hymns was enjoyed, followed by prayer by the pastor, Mr. Craik.

A pleasing mother and daughter item on the program was a medley in song, "I've Found a Friend," by Mrs. Wesley Rose and Miss Jean Rose, accompanied by Mrs. W. M. Wood.

Representing the Circle, Miss Gladys Langton gave a very appropriate reading "The hand that rocks the cradle," while little Mary Morrison of the Mission Band recited "Only One Mother." A quartet of Band girls, including Leah Davis, Anna Rubel, Norma Wood and Marguerite Cross, sang a missionary selection.

A very real treat was that provided by Miss Marion Coon in her splendid address on "The Chinese Home." This was educative and interesting. Miss Coon emphasized especially the status of "Mothers and Daughters" in China and of the change wrought in this respect by the coming of Christianity. The building up of Christian homes, she termed the most important work being accomplished and urged the privilege of missionary endeavour upon all at home.

A sincere expression of appreciation was voiced by Miss Jean Hammond to Miss Coon, and to all who contributed to the success of the evening. Prayer offered by Mr. Craik brought to a conclusion another happy mother and daughter banquet.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, April 24 (C.P.).— Fair support failed to produce optimism and trading was erratic on Winnipeg Grain Exchange yesterday as liquidation of old crop holdings continued. A final burst of selling found offerings scarce and prices recovered from a four cent loss to close ¾ cent lower to ¼ cent higher with May at $1.32½, July $1.29¾-¾ and October $1.17-$1.17¼.

Weakness at Liverpool, following irregular fluctuations recently, gave the market here an easier trend from the start, when prices opened around two cents below Thursdays close.

Some investment support brought October wheat back after the first hour when export buying of approximately 300,000 bushels of Canadian wheat was reported.

Recessions occurred again when weather reports reached traders of added precipitation in the United States North-West, and rains and snow in Manitoba and Alberta.

Stocks Dumped At Bargains In Wildest Trading Since '29

Margin Traders Caught In Storm That Swept Toronto Market

GOLD INDEX DOWN

TORONTO, April 24 (CP)—Margin traders in mining shares were caught in a selling storm this week with all their canvas out and before the blow was over considerable wreckage dotted the market shore line.

One Toronto house was reported to have sent out 500 calls for margin on Monday and it is a safe guess a majority of the other members of the exchange were up to their ears in the same pious labor. Traders who could not come across with more cash paid for the party given on Tuesday morning when their stocks were dumped overboard as bargain prices and were gathered in by those who maintain a reserve of funds for just such occasions.

Various Reasons

The shake-out was the most severe the Toronto market has witnessed in more than a year. Various reasons have been advanced for the decline. The reports about a possible cut in the price of gold and the sharp losses in commodity prices, particularly copper, lead and zinc, have been repeatedly mentioned. But the gold shares turned down in the first week of February, before the public had heard anything about a gold cut and when the miscellaneous mines reached their 1937 peak on March 3 and turned back the shrinkage in commodity prices had only started. It was evident the market was overbought and that it was righting itself in the usual manner.

The Toronto exchange gold share index has declined 33.74 points since the peak was reached on February 3 and stands at 133.60, only 7.05 above the position at this time in 1936. Miscellaneous mines have had an even wider decline, falling back from 215.30 as at March 3 to 170.37 at the close yesterday, a loss of 44.99. The index as this date is 30.20 above the level of a year ago. The industrial list is holding nearly as great a gain over the year, standing now at 170.24 in the index compared with 130.80 on April 23, 1936.

Shawing Losses

Net losses for the higher-price golds and base metals and net gains for the cheaper base metals and the western oils are showing for the week. Nickel, Noranda and Hudson Bay are down $1 to $1.50. Sherritt-Gordon has a minor advance, aided by the official announcement that work will be resumed at the mine following the close-down extending over several years. Smelters, Sudbury Basin and Waite-Amulet are up, Eldorado shows a net loss of 20 cents.

Among the golds O'Brien was the sensation of the week. On Tuesday's break the price dropped to $6.50 and three days later the price was back up to $10.90. It holds a net gain of $1.00 for the period. Lake Shore, Teck Hughes, Little Long Lac, Pickle Crow, Siscoe and San Antonio all show gains, offsetting losses for Hollinger, Buffalo Ankerite, Bralorne, Macassa, Stadacona and East Malartic.

NO LEGAL TROUBLE IN 'PHONE ROMANCE

Safety In Courting Girl Over Wire, Speaker Tells Supper Club

"If you want to avoid legal entanglement, conduct your romance by 'phone," Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., told sixty young men of the Friday Night Supper Club in a humorous comment on the legal aspects of marriage engagements at their supper meeting last evening.

"Supposing you have been calling on your girl rather steadily and her mother gets you in a corner and asks you innocently if you think you would be happy in marrying her daughter," Mr. Gordon suggested, "it is then time to watch your step. An answer in the affirmative might well have legal implications."

Mr. Gordon expanded his good-humored warnings, dealing with the matter of engagement rings and love letters. A legally competent promise to marry must have corroboration but a ring or ardently-worded love letters constitute excellent corroboration, he told the youths.

The general subject of the address was "Avoiding Pitfalls." Par-no attention to the promises of book agents if they are not in black and white in the written contracts, he said. He warned of carelessness in endorsing notes for others. Many big men have been ruined by endorsing notes of friends.

He spoke of the importance of making a will early in life and keeping it up to date.

Brazil Jungle Eels Good For 500 Volts

ELECTRIC eels capable of loosing death-dealing charges of 500 volts against unwary attackers Port of Spain, April 23 (CP Cable) have been discovered in the jungle rivers of Brazil, especially along the upper reaches of the Amazon, three American scientists, Dr. Richard Cox and Mrs. Cox of New York, and Robert Matthews, reported here to-day.

"The average mature eel discovered was capable of discharging 300 volts," said Dr. Cox, leader of the expedition. "But we found monsters capable of killing a man instantly with 500 volts." The expedition carried instruments for measuring voltage of the eels.

STRIKE MAY TIE GERMAN VESSELS

International Longshoremen Issue Threat If Canadian Unions Handle Line's Cargoes

NEW YORK, April 24 —(CP)— Strike of the International Longshoremen's Association against ships of the Cunard White Star and Furness-Withy lines was threatened today by members of the Canadian Union unless a ship of that line due in Montreal today.

Working of Cunard White Star and Furness-Withy vessels by members of the independent union in Montreal brought ships of these two lines and other affiliates under the International Association's boycott two days ago. All North Atlantic and gulf ports were affected.

The unions are vieing for supremacy on the Montreal water front. The International Association demands sole employer recognition there while the independents union holds a contract to supply workers to ships of the Canadian Shipping Federation and claims more than 3,000 members.

Ryan said the strike would remain in effect until his union gained recognition in Montreal on a basis similar to that accorded it in other Canadian ports.

Chicken Offerings Heavy On Market

Chickens returned in large volume to the Farmers' Market this morning. Hundreds were offered at a general price of 20 cents a pound. Eggs were in large volume at 17 to 20 cents and butter brought a general 27 cents.

75 Buttermakers Guests Of De Laval

As guests of the De Laval Company, about seventy-five buttermakers, representative of Central Toronto, Belleville and Kawartha Butter Clubs, on Friday afternoon made a tour of the firm's local plant and later met for dinner at Empress Hotel.

George Gillespie, one of the foremost figures connected with the dairying industry in Central Ontario presided at the dinner meeting while the De Laval Company as hosts to the gathering was represented by Cecil L. Upper, sales manager, and O. Walter Fitzgerald, department manager, both of Peterborough, and Mr. Fisher and Gordon Hanna of the company's Toronto office.

Walter G. Powell, president of the Kawartha Buttermakers' Club described the tour of the plant and the dinner meeting as being an outstanding success, and he hoped it would be the forerunner of many such meetings in the future.

Included among others who spoke was Thomas Adams, dairy instructor of the Toronto group; Arthur Davee, dairy instructor of the Kawartha group, and others.

jury. Felker was arrested on a charge of criminal negligence.

Conick, who recently helped Sudbury Tigers defeat North Batteford Beavers in Calgary for the Allan Cup, was visiting here before returning to Toronto to play with the team in the finals of the International series with Wembley Lions, English champions. The party had been out for the evening and were returning home when the accident happened.

Leaves Widow, Child.

Breaking into organized hockey in 1931 as a member of the Hamilton Junior O.H.A. team, Conick was a scrapper. The following winter he played in the Senior City League here. In 1932-33 he played between Toe Blake and Maxie Bennett and helped Hamilton Tigers win the O.H.A. championship.

Only 25, Conick leaves a widow and one child, both living in Sudbury. He intended to return to the Nickel Belt after the International series and planned to play hockey there again next winter. A fine play-maker, he led Sudbury Falconbridge to the Allan Cup finals in 1936-36 when they were downed by Kimberley Dynamiters.

Popular in Hamilton sport circles, Conick was rated highly in amateur baseball there a few years ago. He broke into senior company with Knights of Pythias and when that team disbanded he turned over with Tigers as a catcher.

B.C. ASKS OTTAWA HELP IN DEALING WITH DOUKHOBORS

Premier Pattullo Charges Verigin Flouting Police To Hurt Authority

POISON NEW THREAT

VICTORIA, April 24 (C.P.)—The British Columbia Government seeks aid of Federal authorities in dealing with 12,000 Doukhobors living according to their religious concepts in communities throughout the interior of the province.

Premier T. D. Pattullo announced yesterday the Dominion would send a representative to Victoria to discuss the Doukhobor "problem" with provincial officials and at the same time charged Peter Verigin the Younger, spiritual head of the Russian religious sect, "flouts the Provincial Police and attempts to bring them into disrespect."

The Premier who conferred last week with the Russian sect leader about a wave of incendiarism which had swept the communities, said he would call upon Verigin to "substantiate his protestations that his whole desire is to be helpful."

Verigin was convicted in Castlegar, B.C., yesterday on charges of vagrancy and driving to the common danger and was sentenced by Stipendiary Magistrate R. A. D. West to three months' hard labor and fines totalling $75.15.

Meanwhile Provincial Police, still engaged in a two-weeks-old investigation of the firing of 11 schools and other buildings in the Doukhobor settlements around Nelson, turned their attention to a series of poisoning cases which already has resulted in three deaths among members of the sect.

As they awaited stomach contents of the third victim, police theorized that the poisoning might have resulted from eating wild parsnips "of which the Doukhobors are very fond."

3 BUILDINGS BURN, MOUNT PLEASANT

Girls Spot Fire On Way From Dance—Garage, Blacksmith Shop, House Razed

BRANTFORD, Ont., April 24 (CP).—Fire discovered by four young persons returning home from a dance early today, destroyed a garage, a blacksmith shop and a two-storey frame house in Mount Pleasant. All were owned by H. Mundy.

The Misses E. Dawson, Brantford; Cyril Capling and William Pheips, Mount Pleasant, were all returning to Brantford, when the girls noticed a fire in the garage owned by Mr. Mundy, and rented to John Fedak. The driver of the car did not intend to stop until the girls insisted.

The two girls, sisters, went to Roy Brown's home and woke him up and he called in the alarm to the local fire department.

Capling went to the Mundy house and aroused the household.

The fire apparently started in the office of the garage, around the stove. Mr. Fedak said that when he left the building the fire in the stove was nearly out, and could not give any reason for the cause.

The flames leped through the garage, of stone block structure, with a wooden roof, and then spread to the other buildings, which were easy prey for the flames.

The wind blew the sparks away from the Mundy home, but so intense was the heat the house soon caught fire and was gutted. When it was apparent the Mundy home was doomed, a volunteer rescue squad organized and carried furniture from the house. Everything was piled in the street and eventually taken away to other homes or taken away on a truck.

45 Contracts Let 156 Miles Road

TORONTO, April 24 (CP).—Forty-five contracts for 156 miles of Ontario highway construction costing $5,000,000 were let yesterday by the Department of Highways.

In the northern division (north of Severn Bridge) contracts provide for four miles of concrete paving 111 miles of mixed macadam and 112.3 miles of grading. Included in the northern contracts, which total $2,-053,500, are five concrete bridges, one timber bridge, one overhead contract and 14 culverts.

The $3,000,000 to be spent in Southern Ontario will provide 34 miles of concrete pavement, 19 miles of mixed macadam, 17 miles of penetration macadam and 38 miles of grading. The southern division also gets six bridges.

HINTS ON HOME IMPROVEMENT

Odds and Ends

This world of ours has become color conscious to the nth degree. Look at clothes, for instance. Time was, if you had a good black dress, black purse and black shoes, plus white gloves, why you were well garbed. Now-a-days, however, accessories have come to the fore with a vengeance—wine-colored gloves and shoes with black dress and hat, or black with Kelley green accessories . . . and on and on and on. Variety and contrasts are just as important as good material.

And that goes for the odds and ends and accessories in the home. A kitchen just isn't in the swim unless the breadbox, the salt shaker and the flour bin are the same color. Let's take just one set of kitchen accessories and follow through with the decorative scheme. Suppose the kitchen is deep yellow and white. Start on the above mentioned articles first. Even if you have an odd assortment of things, never mind. Get yourself a can of enamel and a small paint brush and your decorating problem is solved before it even starts passing you. Get that bright Italian blue that will go so well with the yellow and white. Give that breadbox and salt and pepper cellar, cake box and flour bin just one coat—that's enough. Give the old wood kitchen clock a going over too, and then start with the kitchen knives, forks and spoons—the wooden handled ones.

And then you can have a real morning's fun tackling the supply cupboard. Take your boxes of cinnamon, nutmeg, soda, cream of tartar—rip off the paper labels, give the box the usual blue enamel coating, and then relabel them. As a matter of fact, only this morning I noticed at a stationery counter a booklet containing 300 kitchen labels—all sizes, all shapes. Type, or letter the container name on these little labels and stick them on. You'll feel so proud of the uniformity of your shelves, and the eye-gladdening spectacle they'll make as you open the doors. You'll always be proud to bring house-touring guests into your kitchen and say—"There it is"—and then listen for the applause.

CHEAP PLUMBING HEALTH HAZARD

Defects Show Up After Walls Are Plastered—System In Operation

There is a vast difference between plumbing which is cheap and inefficiently installed and good-quality plumbing, put in by an expert in accordance with sound principles of sanitary engineering, says the Canadian Institute of Plumbing and Heating.

Due to the fact that so much of the plumbing is concealed behind the walls and under the floors, defects in a system may not show up until after the walls are plastered and the system has been put into operation. At this stage, the correction of the defects always proves to be expensive and inconvenient.

The Institute advises those who may be contemplating building or improving plumbing facilities in their homes to beware of the "handyman".

Many who are living in houses built several years ago, would do well to safeguard their health by having their plumbing thoroughly examined. Inferior fixtures, improperly enamelled and inadequate in size, pipes of small diameter and faucets not carefully plated, are hazards to health.

It is very easy for a system to be improperly designed so that the pipes are incorrectly pitched and may become air bound. Vent pipes for equalizing air pressure may be omitted with the result that obnoxious odors from the sewer may find free entry into the house, causing nausea to the occupants. A "handy-man", without full knowledge of modern sanitary engineering may very easily install a cross connection between the supply and waste pipes, thus causing pollution of the drinking water with the sewage.

Whether the householder is planning to build a new home or is desirous of making improvements under the Home Improvement Plan, the Institute recommends dealing only with a reputable master plumber. He has made a lifetime study of the plumbing and heating and naturally understands the materials and the installation of plumbing equipment as no one else does.

25,000 Threatening New York Strike

NEW YORK, April 24. (AP).—A strike of 25,000 members of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, freight handlers, express and station employees was threatened at noon to-day in the metropolitan area of New York. No strike was voted but union officials said a walkout was almost certain.

The chairmen of 125 local unions met yesterday in conference over an alleged refusal by eight railroads to grant a wage increase of 20 cents an hour and discussed a plan to tie up the movement of freight in and out of New York.

ROBERTA SEMPLE GETS ONLY $2,000

Aimee Leaves Court On Verge Of Collapse As $150,000 Slander Suit Ends

LOS ANGELES, April 24 (A.P.).—A $2,000 judgment to-day wrote a drab anti-climax to a dramatic trial of Roberta Semple's $150,000 slander suit against an attorney for her mother, Aimee Semple McPherson, whose tearful near collapse took her from court before the verdict.

Judge Clarence Kincaid awarded pretty, 27-year-old Roberta $1,000 on her allegation that Willedd Andrews, attorney for both Aimee and her Angelus Temple, told a newspaperman "Aimee has been threatened, intimidated, coerced, and blackmailed for the last time."

Judge Kincaid gave her another $1,000 on her charge that Andrews, omitting "blackmail," repeated the statement to other newspapermen, and another $150 attorney fee.

Near a state of collapse, Sister Aimee was led weeping from the court by her son, Rolf McPherson, after she had extended the olive branch to Roberta.

BOYS' BEDROOM IS MADE ATTRACTIVE

Designed For Two Boys Becomes One Of Most Interesting In House

A bedroom designed for two boys in a family became one of the most interesting rooms in the house. The boys were at high school and their family decided it was time they had a "grown up" room.

Funds were obtained and the room which had been a nursery for years was turned into a dignified room for the two young gentlemen and provided accommodations for visiting playmates, as well.

The walls were panelled in knotty pine and new floors were laid in keeping with the rustic walls. Cedar closets were built in at either end of the wall, forming a large alcove. In this space was the feature of the room. Two sets of double bunks were built in. A narrow space was allowed between the beds for convenience in making them, and in this area was a ladder to allow easy access to the top bunks. Large windows that were divided between the upper and lower beds permitted air and light for all four sleeping quarters. Ships' lanterns provided light for reading in bed and carried out the nautical appearance of the room.

With her own funds the housewife purchased simple sturdy furniture. There were no rugs on the floor and curtains were of heavy homespun. Upholstery on the chairs matched the curtain pattern and were destined to resist the hard wear that very young men can give furniture.

The room was attractive to the youngsters and was easy for mother to clean. A similar room may be created with the assistance of the Home Improvement Plan.

Put A Game Room In The Basement

A housewife decided to decorate her own version of a game room. The father and two sons in the family were boxing enthusiasts and were always going off to the club for a few rounds of fun.

A boxing ring was established in the basement of the home. A portion of the cellar was partitioned off, the walls finished in a plain, light color. A padded canvas mat was laid on the floor, and the ring properly roped off. Benches were placed at the side for the neighborhood audience.

Basements may be made into recreation or work rooms with funds obtained from any bank under the Dominion Government's Home Improvement Plan.

South Africa will extend its prison reform movement so as to keep first offenders out of cells and rehabilitate them by education and other means, even finding them jobs at the end of the terms for which they are sentenced.

BATHROOM OFTEN DRESSING ROOM

Numerous Products On Market That Make Modernizing Easy

The bathroom is often a dressing room in some homes and it should be made as attractive a room as possible. In this day and age there are numerous products on the market that make it easy to modernize this oft-neglected place.

Funds for such modernization are available through the Home Improvement Plan, under which banks advance the necessary funds, and are guaranteed against loss by the Dominion Government up to fifteen per cent of the total amount advanced by them for this purpose.

Built-in shelves, similar to those used for books or glassware, add to the attractiveness of the bathroom. Bottles of lotions, creams and powders may be stored here, as well as fresh towels for the use of guests.

A large mirror over the basin is a boon to all members of the household, particularly when it is lighted by an adequate fixture which throws the light properly and does not permit a glare.

A recess tub adds to the illusion of grandeur and is a real convenience, making it easier to clean, and providing less of an opportunity for splashed walls and fixtures when the shower is turned on.

Walls may be tiled, papered with washable paper or any of a number of attractive compositions coverings used. Floor and walls may match if the owner desires, or a blend of

The BANK of NOVA SCOTIA

OVER A CENTURY OF BANKING SERVICE

1937 Is HOME Improvement YEAR

The Year For Putting Men Back to Work

Making Rooms Conform With Type Of Furnishings Available

Occasionally Furniture Purchased Before The Home

WHAT ONE WOMAN DID

Most home-owners purchase furniture to suit the house but occasionally the home is acquired after the furniture. In such cases, rooms must frequently be made to conform with the type of furnishings which are available.

If your room does not suit your furniture, funds may be obtained from any Canadian bank under the generous terms of the Home Improvement Plan to redecorate or modernize.

This was the problem a home-owner was faced with recently. The furniture, most of which had been in the family for generations, was Georgian, while the room itself was rather nondescript. The housewife decided to change the room completely.

Two bookshelves were built in the wall on either side of the fire place. The tops were arched and the shelves went all of the way to the floor. The moulding of the shelves conformed to the columns of the mantel. No mirror was hung over the mantel because the housewife planned to reserve the space for a family portrait.

The fireplace was black tile, which did not conflict with the colours used in the room's decorations.

A wallpaper in silver and grey stripes covered the walls. Against this neutral background the fine woods of the furniture stood out in bold relief. The woodwork was done in antique white.

The upholstery of the chairs were held to sombre tones, gayety being introduced in the room through the use of flowers. Draperies, rugs and upholstery were in shades of gray, brown and white, with antique gold accessories.

Widow's Beer Walk Costs Day In Jail

London, Ont., April 24 (CP) — Off to jail to-day went a 65-year-old white-haired widow to serve one of the shortest sentences ever imposed in police court. She was convicted of having beer in an illegal place after a police officer told of finding her walking along King street with a glass of beer in her hand.

"I haven't a cent," pleaded the woman. "I was never in court in my life."

Magistrate Menzies didn't want to see the woman go to jail for 10 days so he changed the usual procedure. "The fine," announced the court," will be $10 and costs or one day in jail.

BOTTLE WASHERS QUIT IN TORONTO

Demand Employer Increase Wages From 10 To 30 Cents An Hour

TORONTO, April 24 (C.P.). — Now it's the bottle washers who are on strike. Asking for an increase from 10 to 30 cents an hour, five employees of a dealer in old bottles say they will wash no more bottles until the pay boost is forthcoming.

The walkout was called by officials of the Hod Carriers' and Common Laborers' Union yesterday. The bottle washers, members of the union, are picketing the dealers' sons and claim they enjoy support of the Peddlers' Association, whose members were disposing of their bottles elsewhere.

"The strikers earned $6 a week and tried to keep their families on their wages," said a union representative. "They are entitled to more and are going to get it."

Modern Bathroom Now Being Given As Much Consideration As Any Room

Little boys in the olden days, who didn't like to wash their hands before appearing at the table may have been affected by the unbeautiful, barren bathrooms and tin washbasins that marked the era.

Certainly in this day of decorative bathrooms that are given as much consideration as any other room in the house, anyone would want to linger as long as possible and handwashing should become a joy. A modern bathroom may be installed in your home with funds obtained from any Canadian bank under the terms of the Home Improvement Plan at a very low rate of interest.

A bathroom was recently modernized and became a colorful room that was the pride of the house owner.

Walls were tiled a little more than half way up. The tile was white with a wide black border at the top. Washable paper covered the remaining walls, with a design of turquoise, yellow, orange and brown. A black linoleum floor covering was used.

Indirect lighting fixtures were placed at either side of the medicine cabinet, affording adequate light for making up. Two nearby outlets provided current for curling irons or other equipment.

The housewife purchased waterproof curtains for the window, which was over the tub, and a shower curtain. An orange chenille rug with a brown and white geometric design covered the floor, and yellow towels had brown and white stripes.

1937 - Year of the Big Opportunity!

Present Moment Is Right Time To Carry Out Improvements

Prices Due To Climb And Workers Will Be Swamped With Orders

WEEK HAS BEEN BUSY

Even in the face of disagreeable weather conditions during the past few days that have militated greatly against building operations, Peterborough folk engaged in the building and allied trades and those in the business of supplying materials for building work report a very encouraging week which seems to be the best kind of proof that the impetus supplied by the Home Improvement plan is exerting a very helpful influence on the situation.

There is one thing The Examiner feels should be taken into consideration and that is that right now is the time to start in on that program of building or home repairs that you have been long contemplating. We say that for two reasons.

In the first place building materials, supplied and labor are probably more reasonable and cheap today than in a short time, hence when the rising tide of prosperity will cause an increase in all departments of living. Even today there is evidence of a tendency to increase prices in many lines; they are slightly higher than a year ago and considerably above the level of two years back but here is the important thing to remember and that is that prices at this moment are materially lower than they will be twelve months hence. If you delay that work that is calling out to be done for another year you will pay the penalty in a very substantial increase in the amount you will have to pay for it. A postponement will prove decidedly costly.

They May Be Swamped

The second reason why we say that you should go ahead with your program at once is that if you wait a little longer you may find it difficult to get anybody to do the work for you. Right now painters and decorators and carpenters and other building trades workers are busy and with the coming of more seasonable weather they are likely to be swamped with orders in which case the late-comers are likely to find themselves out on the end of a limb. It is the wise householder who places his order now and has the satisfaction of knowing that his work will be handled promptly and satisfactorily and will be all out of the way before the summer arrives.

As to financing the thing that is a simple matter. If you do not need any assistance, of course there is no problem, but if help happens to be necessary the Home Loan plan clears all the bumps out of the financial road. Boiled down to simple language it is simply an opportunity for a reputable homeowner to go to a bank or other financial institution participating in the scheme, secure a sum of money up to $2,000, without security or indorsement, spend it on home repairs and then pay it back to the bank on easy monthly instalments, paying interest at the rate of 6.32 per cent. It is simple as that. Any banker will be glad to supply all the information you need and so long as your character stands up and you have a reasonable prospect of a fair income, there is no obstacle in the way of your securing the sum you may require.

How It Works Out

The way in which the campaign is working out, of course, is not only stimulating building and home renovation by the people who have been waiting for just such an opportunity to secure financial assistance but it is inspiring among thousands of other citizens who have the necessary capital available to push ahead a program on their own account and that is what is going on in Peterborough at the present time.

Throughout the Dominion there is an increasing demand for loans under the Home Improvement plan. A day or two ago, Hon. Chas. Dunning, Minister of Finance, issued some figures that showed the results up to the end of March, and they are very significant. They show that at that stage applications for loans under the H.I.P. had reached a total of $2,408,350, divided up as follows: Prince Edward Island, $22,810; Nova Scotia, $219,653; New Brunswick, $117,017; Quebec, $535,109; Ontario $840,691; Manitoba $69,600; Saskatchewan, $52,709; Alberta, $200,768, and British Columbia, $202,278.

Mr. Matthews Views

In the April issue of "Canadian Business," R. C. Matthews has the following to say: "It is a well known fact that the building trades have not kept pace with other industries in the general business recovery. Here is an opportunity for Canadians to help re-establish these trades, and in aiding them obtain for themselves better, more attractive homes. Perth has the lowest per capita tax arrears of any that are reported, that village, whose residents are chiefly of German extraction, had a per capita tax arrearage of only $ 51 per cent.

"Hundreds of communities across Canada, local committees have been organized to promote the Home Improvement Plan. Let us co-operate with them. If your home needs improvements, now is the time to make them. If you have the money, spend it on your home, increase the convenience and beauty of your house, and add substantially to its value. If you haven't the money, the Home Improvement Plan makes it possible for you to carry out the work. Any contractor, architect or banker will help you with the details of the arrangement.

"This plan should appeal particularly to women, the homemakers. They have to spend so much of their time in the home surroundings and know so well the changes necessary to make the home more convenient and more attractive. I should like to urge them through this plan to improve their homes, better their communities, and help the country as a whole."

The best time to install a new HECLA FURNACE is NOW... before Spring Cleaning starts

And making payments during summer—with no coal bills to meet—does not put excess strain on the family budget.

The wife bears the brunt of a worn-out furnace that gives insufficient heat, needs continual stoking, goes out frequently, is smoky, gassy and dusty. For mothers and youngsters are in the home more than men. A cold drafty house, with dry air, leads to colds and illness.

If you have been having trouble with your furnace, don't put up with it any longer! It costs more to coddle an old furnace than to install a new Hecla, now! Hecla, Canada's most efficient furnace—gives warm air heating at its best and most economical. By test, Hecla saves 15% in fuel—soon pays for itself.

Tested and Proven in thousands of homes since 1854

Your heating troubles are over when you install a Hecla. The famous steel-ribbed firepot is guaranteed 20 years against burning out—no other firepot is guaranteed at all. FUSED JOINTS—metal welded to metal—last as long as the furnace, prevent escaping gas or dust. AUTOMATIC HUMIDIFICATION supplies correctly-humidified warm air all winter long—without attention. These and many other features make Hecla the furnace you must see. Investigate it—now.

THE HECLA FIREPOT WILL NOT BURN OUT

More than 100 steel ribs welded into metal give the patented Hecla firepot THREE TIMES the radiating surface of ordinary firepots. Every bit of usable heat is extracted from fuel and sent flowing into rooms as clean, humidified warm air. Hecla uses 15% less fuel.

EASY TERMS

With money available at your bank—or through the Hecla Time Payment Plan—never has there been such opportunity to modernize. And as the furnace directly affects home comfort and health for 7 or 8 months a year, it is the first thing you should look after. Now, before heating season, is the ideal time—have the summer free from worry and be prepared for the first cool spell next Fall.

1937 will go down as the year of the Big Opportunity. To many — to hundreds of thousands — it will be remembered as the Golden Year when Dreams Came True. To others — hapless men and women without the vision or the courage that this Big Adventure takes—the memory of '37 will be the memory of Lost Opportunity: the wistful recollection of what might have been.

Not again in the next ten to twenty years will it be possible to build a home, a dream home, complete and modern, at present low prices. For thousands upon thousands of hopeful people, then, this year—1937—will be the last opportunity to own a home.

1937 is one of those fabled years that come once in a generation, perhaps once in a lifetime. It is a year when ready home-building capital is available to almost every man who has a good job and a little nest egg of his own; available at low depression interest rates and on easy terms never before possible in all history. And at the same time, mind you, prices on skilled labor and construction materials are low—not quite as low as they were last year, considerably higher than they were two and three years ago—but from 15 to 25% lower than they will be in the Spring of 1938! And every month that passes is seeing a boost in building costs; mill-work, plumbing, heating installations, all are advancing in price, and skilled labor, never too plentiful since the depression, is getting scarcer still.

Just over the horizon of the future lies the promise of a great Building Boom. When it comes—when prices soar and labor is at a premium—then it will be too late. Then the joy and security of modern home ownership will be something to read about in the yellowing files of old newspapers — but never again to be captured so easily in this generation.

For helpful suggestions and advice on the construction of a new home, or the modernizing of your present one, consult the Advertisers on these pages every Saturday and "The Home Improvement" column every day in The Examiner.

Started Fire In Bank With Glass

FREMONT, O.—Firemen extinguished a blaze in a bank and then began investigating as to how it happened. A bystander volunteered to say some small boys with time on their hands and a magnifying glass to experiment with had been around. They focussed the sun's rays on a bank drape.

If Hungry Just Chew Match

NORMAN, Okla. — The next time you are hungry, don't buy a big steak—just chew a match stick. That is the advice of Dr. A. J. Carlson, University of Chicago. "Chew matches, soda straws or anything handy the next time hunger gnaws and you'll feel better," said Dr. Carlson.

Acting Sanitary Inspector Says Sterilization Is Poor

Harry White Reports Several Restaurants And Many Dairy Farms Are Deficient

SUGGESTS CHANGES

That some of Peterborough's restaurants and many of the dairy farms supplying raw milk to this city are very inefficient in so far as proper sterilization of the utensils and equipment is concerned was one of the outstanding features of a report read at Friday night's meeting of the Board of Health from Acting Sanitary Inspector Harry White who has been appointed to carry on during the absence on sick leave of Sanitary Inspector Stapleton.

Inspector White was present at the meeting and in answer to a question from Ald. Duston as to whether he did not think general conditions here so far as he had been able to see, were as good as in other places, replied that he could answer yes to that so far as the city was concerned but he could not say as much for some of the dairy farms.

His report covered his work from April 1 to April 16 and showed that inspections had been made as follows:

Bakeshops, 4; butcher shops, 3; restaurants, 8; stores, 4; dairies, 2; quarantines, 1; pasteurization plants, 5; milk samples, 5; miscellaneous and offices, 7.

Butcher Shops

These shops were clean. Sanitary ice boxes were well taken care of and meats were of good quality and were well looked after. Garbage was well taken care of.

Restaurants

Restaurants were clean with the exception of three places. These were not giving enough attention to the care of their ice boxes or to the handling of the food. In most cases ice boxes were very unsatisfactory. In one ice box, some decomposed meat was found and done away with. Another manager was asked to have his basement and ice box cleaned up; also to have proper dressing rooms for his employees. Wash rooms were untidy; in several wash rooms roller towels were being used which we feel should be done away with and paper towels installed. During the inspections I found some of these places were equipped with double sinks which are not being used properly. I would recommend that a chlorine solution be used in the rinse water, not less than 100 P.P.M. or to exceed 200 P.P.M.

Milk Samples

In company with Dr. Fraser, several samples of raw milk were taken and in several cases a very unsatisfactory report was received. A further check on the sanitary conditions at these farms will be undertaken. In a great many cases where there is a high bacterial count on raw milk we feel it is caused by an inadequate milk house, improper handling of the milk and improper cooling or washing facilities.

Pasteurization Plants

Several inspections were made of dairies regarding the pasteurization of cream. This, we feel, is handled very poorly. In some dairies the cream is not put through the same process as the milk. Some plants pasteurize the cream in cans then bottle it by hand, which is very unsanitary and is prohibited by the Milk and Cream Act. During the next few weeks we hope to have a further report on these conditions and as to the cause of the extremely high bacterial count of cream.

Inspections of Distributors Supplying Raw Milk

During April 19-20th, some thirty dairy farms were inspected as to the sanitary condition of their stables, milk houses, utensils and supervision of their dairy herds. In most the stables were very well looked after. STERILIZER—They were using very poor methods of sterilization. In most milk houses they were using a chlorine solution in the rinse water but the chlorine was being grossly misused. In a number of cases of the various milk houses inspected the bottles and utensils were rinsed in a tub of water supposedly containing a chlorine solution but which solution tested showed very little chlorine content, although the dairyman conscientiously rinsed the utensils thinking he was sterilizing them. HERDS—Herds were well taken care of and tested for tuberculosis and also contagious abortion. It is a very simple matter to determine if a herd has been tuberculin tested but at present it is quite different regarding abortion. There is no way of checking a herd except by depending on the honesty of the farmer. In some herds the last test was made in 1935. We feel this this should be done at least once every year. On three different farms some cows were found which had to be removed from the herd until a satisfactory report is received from a veterinary.

Recommendations

1. That a complete survey be made regarding sterilization of utensils and equipment—as to a more complete method of sterilization and the proper amount of chlorine to be used.

2. That any dairyman supplying milk to the city be prohibited from bringing other cows into his present herd until a satisfactory report has been received by the Department of Health from a veterinary stating that the new cows are free from contagious abortion and have been examined for tuberculosis.

3. That all cows in herds supplying raw milk to the city of Peterborough must be tested annually for Bang's disease by a qualified veterinary surgeon; that cows found free from Bang's disease be tagged by the veterinary surgeon in the right ear; that indentifying tags be supplied by the local Board of Health.

In conclusion I might say that much can be done to assist the dairy man in producing a clean, high grade product. The main feature about any health program is education.

Mr. White said that he had found both the restaurant owners and the dairy farmers concerned quite willing to co-operate in improving conditions.

He also reported that he had found several cases where cows were suffering from mastitis and he recommended that all such cows should be removed from the herd until the condition is cleared up.

For Sunday, April 25

Sunday's horoscope holds testimonies of much activity and enterprise, with new undertakings and employment under particular stimulus of active planets. High pressure impulses may need supervision lest urges to extravaganees, excesses and indulgences in both business and private affairs lead into perilous pathways.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a very active and probably enterprising and exciting year, with much pressure in either employment or the launching of new prosperity.

A child born on this day may be able and enterprising, winning the support of its employers, probably through a tendency to stratagem, tact or subtlety, upon which its success seems to depend.

For Monday, April 26

Monday's astrological forecast is a very important one, holding augury of sudden and surprising events, which may upset current conditions and wield important influence on the future destiny. Wisely-considered decisions are urgent because the impending changes affect the private life as well as business interests.

Those whose birthday it is are at the threshold of very important events which may affect the entire life, its business and private affairs and its future progress and projects.

A child born on this day may be talented in unconventional lines, probably in science and invention. It will probably develop these gifts through shrewd, clever, secret or mysterious manipulation, and it may be devoted to the public through secret service.

UNIFORMITY HAS LITTLE APPEAL TO ENGLISHMAN

Dr. A. W. MacKenzie Addresses Sons Of England At Banquet

WANT NO DICTATORS

Englishmen will never be beguiled by the spell-binding appeals of Fascism, Dr. A. W. MacKenzie, widely-known principal of the Grove School at Lakefield, declared in an address to one hundred Peterborough Sons of England gathered in annual celebration of St. George's Day at the Paragon Hall last evening.

"The systems of Mussolini and Hitler demand uniformity, and uniformity has little appeal to the real Englishman," he said. "Englishmen have a sense of individuality that will not tolerate regimentation."

He scouted the possibility of a revolution for any cause in England. "The English are all of one class and they know it," he asserted. "England will never have a revolution while the squire's son will play cricket with the villagers. They couldn't have a revolution. Against whom would they revolt?"

English Leadership

Making his address in response to the toast to St. George's Day, Dr. MacKenzie praised England's record in history. He said he was inclined to believe the saying that when God wanted a hard thing done He called on an Englishman. Other countries of the world look to England for leadership and regard England the standard of law and order, justice and freedom, he said.

"The Empire is kept together by no authority but by bonds stronger than any authority," he continued. "The bond lies in the Crown. During this last year we have suffered. We felt something ghastly was happening to us. We didn't realize what the Crown meant to us until then. Thank God we have in George VI a wonderful example of what the Crown should be."

He spoke of "a national genius the English have for coming out on top." "They say the Englishman muddles through, but there must be something more than that. No one comes out on top always by muddling through. There must be some wonderful quality."

Stanley Baldwin

Pointing to Stanley Baldwin as typical of the leaders who enable England to "muddle through," he declared, "Thank God for Baldwin this last year."

E. J. Lemmon, president of the Lansdowne Lodge, was in the chair and acted as toastmaster. Alderman Max Sloan represented Mayor George Macdonald in addressing the assembled banqueters in response to a toast to "Our City" and Charles Sloan responded to the toast "To Canada."

A pleasant program of entertainment was unfolded as the evening progressed. Vocal solos were afforded by Mrs. E. Kitney, Frank Biddle and Robert Eisbell and Arther Collison entertained on the piano. Well received was a humorous reading by Miss Queenie Hope.

A feature of the program was the showing of a motion picture, "A Trip Through Australia" by Robert Hardie.

SOUTH-END TROOP STAGES CONCERT

Held By 12th St. Paul's Troop To Raise Funds For Jamboree

St. Pauls (South-End) Presbyterian Sunday School boasts of a strong Scout movement, 12 Scouts and 12 Cubs—and the Troop is also designated No. 12. The coming jamboree at Lakefield necessitates funds to enable the troop to participate in the event, and for that purpose the Sunday School Hall, on Lock Street, was on Friday evening filled with the Scout fraternity, and parents and friends.

A concert had been arranged with Scouts as the artistes, and a fine program was presented, which received unstinted applause. Those taking part, under the chairmanship of Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr, were: Kinster Reid, violin solos; the Going-up Ceremony, Glen Daniels, from Cubs to Scouts; community singing; investiture of Clarence Downer as a Scout; address by Assistant Commissioner Ernie Wolff; harmonica selections by Kenneth Henwood; vocal solo, James Ireland; Kanoo Band selections; address by Cubmaster Baldwin. Accompanist for the evening was Mrs. L. Mock; and stories were told by Rev. Dr. Barr.

Assisting at the door were Fred Pinnie and John Hill, and a good collection was received.

Lunch, under Cubmistress Anne Young and Cubmaster Bill Anderson with several assistants was served and greatly enjoyed. Votes of thanks and the National Anthem concluded a pleasant entertainment.

In charge of Troop No. 12 is Scoutmaster A. H. Staurock, who is rounding the Scouts into a smart-appearing troop.

M.O.H. RESENTS HINT OF GRUDGE

Objects To Inferance By Alderman Wilson At Committee Meeting

"I resent the implication that I might have a grudge against somebody and use my power under a by-law to put him out of business," said Dr. Murray Fraser, Medical Officer of Health, at Friday night's meeting of the Board of Health, as he asked that when other health bylaws were to be considered before committees of the council he be given an opportunity to attend.

The M.O.H's reference was to a remark made by Ald. Wilson at Wednesday's meeting of the Finance Committee when the bylaw to regulate bakeries was under discussion and he objected to the power given the Medical Health Officer under the bylaw as being too drastic.

"I object to that inference that I might be unfair," said Dr. Fraser. "Surely if the council has sufficient confidence in me to appoint me as medical officer of health they have sufficient confidence to believe that I would not administer this or any other regulation unfairly."

Dr. Fraser pointed out that under the Health Act he had the power to close a bakery or any other place forthwith without needing a local bylaw to give him the authority.

SMALLPOX ABSENT HERE SINCE 1928 DR. FRASER SAYS

Result Is That Preventive Measures Are Neglected By Public

VACCINATION NEEDED

Peterborough has not had a case of smallpox since 1928 and there was only one case in that year Dr. Murray Fraser Medical Officer of Health, stated in his monthly report to Board of Health.

The records for the ten previous years, says the report, show the following: 1919, 26 cases; 1920, 63 cases; 1921, 8 cases; 1922, no cases; 1923, no cases; 1924, no cases; 1925, 1 case; 1926, 87 cases; 1927, 41 cases; 1928, 1 case.

It is natural that when a communicable disease is absent for several years, preventive measures are forgotten or neglected by the public. This is true of smallpox and the result is a large unprotected group, consisting principally of children, exists among whom smallpox would spread with rapidity if introduced. The disease does not occur spontaneously but is introduced from outside. It is possible at any time for smallpox to be brought in by one of the many transients passing through or by visitors or travelers. It is therefore felt that the opportunity should be provided at regular intervals, particularly for the children for vaccination.

A clinic was held in each Separate School during March to vaccinate the school and pre-school children. A total of 580 children availed themselves of the opportunity. Of these, 552 or 99% had successful takes. No child was vaccinated unless the written consent of the parent or guardian was obtained. The Clinic was held prior to the Easter vacation in order that school attendance would not suffer as a result of any disability. An occasional reaction severe enough to cause mild illness was reported but on the whole the "takes" were mild with minimum scarring.

LAD, 11, TOOK MILK TICKETS MOTHER IS SENT TO JAIL

Storm of Protest Follows Term Imposed on Woman

DISPARITY CHARGED

Burton-On-Trent.—Wide disparity in the treatment accorded by three Burton magistrates to two women offenders—one a spinster, the other a mother of six children—has roused this town to a fever of indignation which is likely to have repercussions at Westminster.

The first case concerned Miss Nellie Dicken, aged 59, of Walker St., Burton. She pleaded guilty to stealing jewelry valued at £7 ($35) from her lodgings; said she had borrowed money and had a big bill to meet.

She was bound over for two years.

Next on the list came the mother—charged with receiving stolen milk checks, valued at a few pence. Her 11-year-old son was charged with taking the checks.

The boy told a detective: "I heard my mother say she had no milk. I wanted some milk for the baby. I told my mother what I had done and she said, 'You will get into trouble.'"

It was stated that the boy's father had been out of work for seven years and had recently obtained temporary employment.

The mother was sentenced to 21 days' imprisonment, and the boy was put on probation for two years.

The magistrates in both cases were Alderman A. Elliot, Councillor Mary Goodger and Mr. G. Ford.

Councillor Mary Goodger was indignant when asked if there were any other facts which might perhaps account for the difference in treatment of two cases.

"It is a most improper thing to ask . . . a great piece of impertinence," she said.

Now the matter will be brought to the notice of the home secretary in the House of Commons.

WOMAN ROUTS THUGS PUMMELLING POLICE

Blows on Constable's Whistle to Attract Help

London.—Seeing a gang of men attacking a young police constable on the ground in London, a woman of 69 ran across, snatched his whistle from him and blew it furiously—until, with a blow on the head, they knocked her unconscious.

A stream of visitors called at a house in Catherine St., City Rd., E.C., to congratulate the woman, Mrs. Mary Ann Lovies, whom Scotland Yard describes as "very brave."

P.C. Fulwood was trying to arrest a man in Leather Lane, when a gang of six attacked him and rendered him unconscious. They were kicking the officer when Mrs. Lovies intervened.

She was struck, and P.C. Baker, of the C.I.D., who answered the whistle, was also injured. All were taken to the Royal Free hospital, Fulwood being detained.

WOULDN'T TELL AGE WOMAN SUMMONED

Londoner in Oxford Court Still Declines to State How Old She Is

Oxford.—A woman's refusal to divulge her age resulted in her appearance before Oxford magistrates.

Miss Leslie G. Hamer of a London hotel, who formerly lived in Oxfordshire, was charged with neglecting to attend a summons under the seal of the ministry of agriculture. The case was dismissed.

H. E. James said the case arose under the Law of Property Act, 1922, from a dispute about woodland owned by Miss Hamer in Surrey.

Miss Hamer had to pay quit rent to the lord of the manor, who in October, 1935, applied to have this abolished on the payment of compensation.

He explained compensation was based on the expectancy of life and it was necessary that Miss Hamer should give her age.

Miss Hamer was summoned to Oxford, but failed to attend and she had consistently refused to give her age. Miss Hamer said in court she still refused to give her age.

SAVE TWO CANOEISTS IN ENGLISH CHANNEL

Crew of Lightship Rescues Youthful Daredevils — Craft Swamped

Deal.—Adrift in mid-channel, exhausted and soaked, their little boat waterlogged and likely to founder at any moment — this was the plight of two London canoeists, John Simmons and Frank Whittingham, on Easter Saturday.

They were saved from drowning only by the timely aid of Goodwin Sands lightshipmen.

Simmons, aged 24 of Strathleven Rd., Brixton, and Whittingham, aged 23, of Chichester Rd., Croydon, left Dover to cross the channel.

When 10 miles out they encountered rough weather. Their canoe half-swamped, they headed back for England.

But in the grip of the strong current they could do nothing but drift and bail, bail and drift, for life.

Luckily the tide carried them towards the South Goodwin lightship, whose crew threw them ropes and hauled them on board just as their frail canoe sank.

When the Deal motorboat Lady Haig landed them at Deal, the canoeists admitted that they had had the narrowest squeak of their lives.

SAYS BEARD SPOILED IRISH MAIL ROMANCE

Mounted 'High Horse' When She Got Man, Judge Tells Woman

Dublin.—The romance of Mrs. Beglin, an English nurse who married an Irishman after a letter-courtship through a correspondence club and matrimonial agency, was wrecked by a beard.

When her husband, a Maynooth farm laborer, appealed against a 10s. ($2.50) a week wife maintenance order, Mrs. Beglin said to the judge:

"I gave him every chance. I begged and prayed him to remove the hair from his face, but all my pleadings were useless."

Mrs. Beglin said that after the wedding they went to his cottage, but it was so dirty she left, and had to enter a convalescent home to recover from the shock.

Judge Comyn asked Mrs. Beglin to look at her husband. Had he improved since she last saw him?

Mrs. Beglin glanced at her husband. He had shaved off his beard. She replied: "Yes, I think he has improved."

Beglin said his wife had treated him "cruelly." Judge Comyn said it seemed Mrs. Beglin, having got her man, had mounted the "high horse" at once. He reduced the order from 10s. to 7s. 6d. ($1.88).

SWAN, HORSE COLLIDE

Warwick.—Two swans were the cause of an accident. They rose from the River Avon, just below Warwick Castle, as a horse and cart were crossing the main Warwick-London road bridge.

One struck the horse, which swung round, and in doing so smashed the cart.

The swan fell like a log, but recovered almost at once, and disappeared.

OLD COUPLE PARTED WHEN HOME BURNED

Neighbors Collecting to Help Woman, 80, Who Survives

Bradford.—Neighbors, many of them poor people, are collecting to buy new furniture for Mrs. Frances Pollard of Birkland St., who was injured in a fire at her home. Her husband, Thomas, died in the fire and their home was destroyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Pollard had been married for nearly 60 years. They were known as the happiest couple in Bradford. Neighbors called them Darby and Joan.

Now her husband is dead, and her home ruined. Mrs. Pollard, who is nearly 80 years of age, is staying with relatives until definite plans are made for her future.

She lost the greater part of her furniture in the fire. So neighbors who have lived near Mrs. Pollard for years are collecting money to help her. She has only a 10s old age pension and a war pension of 8s for a son who was killed.

A neighbor who is helping in the appeal said: "Already we have raised several pounds. We cannot do much, but we are going to do all we can. Mr. and Mrs. Pollard were really loved by everyone around here. We want to do all we can to help the old lady."

NAVY GETS STRONGER RUM BUT BOOTS NO DAINTIER

Two Parts of Water Dilute Liquor Instead of Customary Three

OTHER SEA CHANGES

London—When the King makes the traditional order "Splice the mainbrace" at the coronation review at Spithead on May 20, the "lower deck" will not only receive an extra tot of rum, but may also be able to drink the King's health in "two-rum" (rum with two parts of water) instead of the customary "three-rum".

It is announced in admiralty fleet orders that as an experiment the rum issue to ratings will be made stronger for a year, in response to many requests recently received at the admiralty.

Rum is issued neat to chief petty officers and petty officers, but since 1740 junior ratings have had half a gill of rum mixed with three-parts of water, making half a pint of "three-water rum". The new drink will be shorter—but stiffer.

Several other concessions are also announced, including an increase of three days in leave, from seven to ten days for harbor ships and establishments at midsummer; "one boot brush to be omitted from service kit"; larger cap boxes; boatswains' whistles, instead of being purchased ashore, will be obtainable on board ship; petty officers may buy officers' pattern underwear; ratings will be allowed sheets in future as a change from the traditional blanket.

But — Jack will not get white sugar in his tea. For the lords commissioners say: "Consideration of expense and source of origin enter into the matter, and these favor the supply of 'brown' or gmpire sugar."

Nor will his requests for marriage allowances at 23, instead of 25, dainter boots, and soup plates be granted.

RAILWAY COMPANIES LOSE 5-YEAR FIGHT

Tried to Keep Transports From Trunk Roads

London. — British railway companies have lost a five years' fight to keep goods transport services from trunk roads. The appeals Tribunal set up under the Road-Rail Traffic Act, 1933, has dismissed an appeal by four railway groups to withdraw licenses granted to Bouths Tillotson Transport Ltd., for 128 motor-vehicles and 42 trailers.

MAN "LIVED IN HELL" DEFENCE COUNSEL SAYS

Plea of Guilty on Fraud Charge Brings Sentence of Five Years

Cardiff.—Sentence of five years' penal servitude was passed by Mr. Justice Lawrence at Glamorgan assizes at Cardiff recently on Oliver Stephen Thomas, aged 40, ex-town clerk of Port Talbot.

"This man, for years, must have been living in hell, having hanging over his head the knowledge that he was doing things to prevent himself being discovered," said Trevor Hunter, K.C., defending, in a plea for leniency.

Thomas had pleaded guilty to seven charges of fradulent conversion and forgery of documents, involving more than $3,000.

Hunter said that Thomas first got into difficulties by speculating with a firm of stockbrokers who themselves became hopelessly involved.

He struggled to get out of his difficulties, and matters went on like a snowball. Thomas hoping all the time that some miracle would save him, he said.

Sentencing Thomas, the judge said:

"I recognise you have already suffered a severe punishment in agony of mind, but offences such as this, committed by a solicitor and a municipal officer, must be dealt with severely in the interest of the public and your unfortunate victims."

'CURSE OF PHARAOHS' SEEN DOGGING BONE FROM EGYPT

Lady Seton to Return Human Spine After Series of Misfortunes

FEAR BLACK MAGIC

Edinburgh.—Lady Seton, wife of Sir Alexander Seton, tenth baronet of Abercorn, is contemplating a visit to Egypt to return to its resting-place a human bone said to carry with it the curse of the Pharaohs.

Since she removed the bone (said to be the backbone of an Egyptian princess) a year ago from one of the tombs of Gizeh, where she was on holiday,

She has been ill;

Her husband has been ill twice and is now recovering from an operation;

Twice mysterious fires have broken out in their Edinburgh home;

Guests have reported "visitations" by a robed figure;

Recently the glass case containing the bone fell from a table in an empty room and was shattered.

"I feel that I should never have brought the bone away from Egypt," said Lady Seton. "I should like to return it to the tomb.

"I think there is a great deal in these stories of the curse placed on those who remove bones from their resting place."

Sir Alexander Seton announced that his wife was going to return the bone to the tomb personally as soon as possible, but Lady Seton said she had changed her mind and allowed a friend to take the bone.

"I am curious," she said, "to see whether my friend will be bothered. He is sceptical, but I do not know whether to be sceptical or not in view of what has happened.

"I never knew how many believers in black magic and the supernatural there were in England until people got to know that I possessed the bone. All kinds of people have written to me. Some members of learned societies have written giving me advice on the proper care of the bone.

"My friend is getting a fresh glass case for it as the one I had was smashed when for some reason unknown it fell from its resting place. Traffic vibration could not have moved it, because this is a very quiet district. It was certainly not displaced by any human agency. It is all very peculiar."

SPINSTERS SEEK PENSIONS

Organisation of 70,000 Members To Advertise Plight at Coronation

Bradford.—Coronation crowds are to be told of the unfortunate position of many thousands of spinsters in this country.

Arrangements have been made by the National Spinsters' Pensions association, the organization formed at Bradford two years ago to press for earlier pensions for spinsters, for poster parades to be organized in London during the coronation celebrations to advertise the spinsters' claims.

The association has a membership of 70,000.

RESCUER IS INJURED BY LEAP FOR LIFE

Suffered From Broken Spine—Hurt Again

Liverpool—Fresh misfortune has befallen William Hughes, an engineer, of Wenlock Rd., Anfield, who recently returned to work after suffering for four years from a broken spine.

Fire broke out in the house of his neighbor, Mrs. Holgate, whose escape was cut off.

With two policemen and another man, Hughes held a blanket into which Mrs. Holgate leaped from an upper window. In doing so she fell upon Hughes with such force that his leg was broken.

WANTED VENGEANCE SO TOOK $250 COAT

"Most Horribly Treated at Dance," Says British Companion-Chauffeuse

Braintree.—Evelyn Mabel Ryder, 25-year-old companion-chauffeuse, went to a hunt ball at Wethersfield, Essex, village hall. Some of the people there resented it so, in revenge, she went to a cloakroom and took a £50 ($250) sealskin coat she thought belonged to the woman who had organized the dance.

That was what she told the magistrates at Braintree, when she was bound over on a charge of stealing the coat. It belonged to Miss Ebbe Wolff, a Finn, of Crosby Hall, Chelsea.

Evelyn said a friend had got her a ticket for the ball. Mrs. Byford, of Panfield, the organizer, deliberately bumped into her when she was dancing in the Paul Jones, she asserted.

She declared, too, that Mr. Byford, Mrs. Byford's husband, was angry when he saw her, and asked, "What the devil are you doing here?"

"They treated me most horribly at the dance," said Miss Ryder, "and I took what I thought was Mrs. Byford's fur coat as a practical joke on the impulse of the moment, because I wanted to have my revenge on her. I was very upset."

BALLET COSTUMES WORTH MILLIONS

Gorgeous Shakespearean Fete to Follow Coronation Ceremony

London.—On the night after the coronation of King George and Queen Elizabeth here, scheduled for May 12, one of the greatest spectacles in British history will be produced under a re-creation of the wooden palace of Henry VIII in the Albert Hall.

It will be a quarter of a million dollars Shakespearean ball set in all the glamorous beauty of "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

All the wealth, all the beauty of England will be there, making the coronation ceremony at the abbey almost sombre by comparison.

Committees of women are busy finding the 22 most beautiful girls in London society to represent belles from Shakespeare's plays.

The girls will wear costumes and jewelry worth millions of dollars.

Juliet will be portrayed by Beatrice Grosvenor, 20-year-old daughter of Lady Dorothy Charteris.

King George and Queen Elizabeth have reserved the royal box for their guests at the ball.

The Henry VIII palace will be of wood and lead, set in a forest designed by the eminent architect Sir Edwin Lutyens. Twelve sun-arcs of a million candlepower each will provide the illumination.

21 YEARS OF SEARCH FOR LOST SON ENDED

Reunited With Mother in England After Brother Locates Him

Southampton. — A mother's 21-year search for her son ended when the Union Castle liner Llangibby Castle arrived at Southampton from Cape Town.

The mother was Mrs. Amy Cameron, of Arcadia, Pretoria, Transvaal, and the son, C. Graham Cameron, who left South Africa in 1916 to join the British army.

He was rejected on medical grounds, but remained in England, and became associated with theatrical and cinema undertakings.

He lost touch with his family, and though Mrs. Cameron came to England in 1928 and spent nine months in a search, she was unable to trace him.

Then a twin brother found Cameron, got in touch with his mother, and the second trip, with the happy ending, was arranged. Mother and lost son were reunited on the quayside.

BRIEF STORIES GATHERED FROM ALL CORNERS OF THE WORLD

POLITICAL DEMONSTRATION ENDS AUSTRO-ITALIAN GAME

Football Match Abandoned When Fascists and Anti-Fascists Start Free-for-All

FLAGS ARE TORN UP

Vienna.—A great anti-Fascist demonstration forced the abandonment here of the Europa cup football match between Austria and Italy.

Trouble began in the first minutes. The referee (Mr. Olsen, Sweden) stopped the game after 25 minutes of the second half, when a free-for-all fight developed as a climax to numerous clashes. Austria then led 2-0.

Spectators state that both teams started the clashes for political reasons.

When the referee with three long blasts on his whistle announced that he was stopping the game, the Italian team left the field without giving the usual Fascist greeting to the spectators.

This insult so annoyed the anti-Italian spectators in the crowd that they began to seize and tear up flags carried by Italian supporters.

Fearing the hostility of the crowd, the Italian team was kept in its dressing room for some time after the abandonment of the match.

A dozen arrests were made before the riot squad car of the Viennese police escorted the Italian team from the stadium to their hotel.

Spectators boxed all Italian motor cars and motor coaches carrying spectators, officials and journalists from the stadium to the city, the salute of the upraised closed fist being given in many cases by the demonstrators.

The game was one of the roughest ever played in Vienna.

JUDGE ADVISES MAN HOW TO HOLD WIFE

Belgrade.—"Feed her ears with love—that is my best advice for an old husband with a young and pretty wife."

This was the romantic advice given by a judge in Bosnia to an elderly Moslem defendant in a divorce case, whose spouse complained all he did while he gave her advice was to lecture her.

"For instance, the prejudice about skimmed milk. All that has been done to it is to remove the fat of the milk. But as we have so many other opportunities of consuming fat, these three per cent do not matter at all. We must therefore, give up our prejudice about skimmed milk.

USE SKIMMED MILK GERMANS ARE URGED

Berlin.—A determined effort to convince German housewives that skimmed milk is as good as ordinary milk is being made by the newspapers here.

The present campaign in favor of skimmed milk forms part of the drive for national self-sufficiency under Hitler's four-year plan.

"If only prejudices did not exist!" exclaims the Berliner Nachtausgabe.

SENT DEVIL'S ISLE FOR THE THIRD TIME

Arrest of "Tramp" Proves Identity of Man as Ex-Spy

Paris.—The arrest of a half-paralyzed, starving tramp by Luxemburg police will take back an ex-spy to France's Devil's Island for the third time in his life.

The man was taken to the frontier and handed over to the French police, who knew him as Foreign Legionary Henri de Wallenstein.

In 1920, acting as a spy for Turkey, he tried to murder General Gouraud, then campaigning in Syria.

As a 24-year-old medical student at Le Havre, Wallenstein joined the Turkish secret service and was ordered to join the French Foreign Legion. Later he was offered $25,000 if he succeeded in killing General Gouraud.

He failed, and escaped. After six months he was captured and sentenced to death, but was sent for life to Devil's Island.

From there he escaped in 1928, but he was caught and sent back. to escape again nine months later. Since then he has travelled all over central Europe, changing his native ten times.

In 1935 he was in a motor smash in Roumania and was partially paralyzed. Soon, after eleven years of freedom, Devil's Island will claim him once more.

HER HAIR GAVE AWAY FRENCH 'WORKMAN'

Daughter of Wealthy Manufacturer Fined for Visiting Dockyard

Brest—Becoming suspicious of the auburn locks escaping from the beret of a workman, a naval officer on board the secret, unfinished battleship Dunkerque, snatched off the beret.

The "workman" was a beautiful girl.

It was at first believed she was a spy, but inquiries proved that her story was true.

She was Madame Guillier, a 24-year-old former convent girl, daughter of a wealthy cloth manufacturer.

When a friend said he had to go aboard the Dunkerque at Brest, she insisted on going with him. No women are allowed in the dockyard, so she donned workmen's overalls.

A military tribunal fined her £12.50 for her escapade.

TOTAL SUN ECLIPSE FOR NANKING IN 1941

Nanking, China.—A total eclipse of the sun will be visible in China in 1941, and already the National Research Institute of Astronomy is making preparations for observing it.

Under the direction of Dr. C. S. Yu, director of the institute, the area within which the total eclipse will be visible has been ascertained and a map of the area has been drawn up.

Many astronomers from all over the world are expected to come to China in 1941 to observe the phenomenon.

The last total eclipse of the sun occurred in Japan in 1929.

ARGENTINA TO PROMOTE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY

Many Important Studios Now in Operation in Buenos Aires

TALENT AVAILABLE

Buenos Aires.—Argentina is steadily developing its motion picture industry and probably will replace Spain as the centre for Spanish-language productions in the near future.

There are already important studios in regular production around the city of Buenos Aires. Most of them are turning out at least a picture a month, and indications are that next year the volume will be greater. The only common drawback to the pictures made so far is that they are too purely local in theme, and therefore unlikely to command public attention outside of Argentina or neighboring countries. American audiences would find them sloppily sentimental, slow in action and the humor excessively low.

Nevertheless they are great moneymakers. The average capital investment in a long subject is about 70,000 Argentine pesos, which is usually more than recovered in one week of exhibition. One picture, "La Muchachada de Abordo," cost 42,000 pesos to make and grossed 170,000 pesos in two and a half months.

Real Talent Available

In spite of their poorness as judged from to-day's standards, Argentine movies are way ahead in quality over Hollywood's early efforts, and foreign producers who have visited the country recently express the opinion that real talent is available.

It will be a long time, however, before the market for American-made pictures is affected by the local industry. Most of the country's city dwellers understand, or are endeavoring to learn English. Therefore they prefer to see and hear American shows, in the first place, because of the higher quality of the entertainment, in the second because the sound helps them accustom their ears to the English language. Success of the Argentine-made pictures has been built on support from the lower working classes and country folk.

ARGENTINA MAKES LOAN CONVERSIONS

Buenos Aires.—Argentina recently made two loan conversions in New York. Two Argentine dollar loans, one with a balance of $23,824,500 and the other $13,697,500—both of which pay six per cent. interest, were replaced by a five 43 million dollar loan bearing 4 per cent. interest, 1.43 per cent amortization, with due date 1972. This operation will leave a balance of 33 million dollars for conversion at an early date.

Tokio.—Japan did not go through the age of horse carriages, but jumped from the age of jinrikishas to motor cars. There are to-day only 109 horse-drawn buggies and 704 horse-drawn hacks in the whole country. Japan is now in the age of bicycles as there are 7,572,000 against 175,984 motor cars and 23,137 jinrikishas.

NORMAN, Okla. — The next time you are hungry, don't buy a big steak—just chew a match stick. That is the advice of Dr. A. J. Carlson, University of Chicago. "Chew matches, soda straws or anything handy the next time hunger gnaws and you'll feel better," said Dr. Carlson.

Acting Sanitary Inspector Says Sterilization Is Poor

Harry White Reports Several Restaurants And Many Dairy Farms Are Deficient

SUGGESTS CHANGES

That some of Peterborough's restaurants and many of the dairy farms supplying raw milk to this city are very inefficient in so far as proper sterilization of the utensils and equipment is concerned was one of the outstanding features of a report read at Friday night's meeting of the Board of Health from Acting Sanitary Inspector Harry White who has been appointed to carry on during the absence on sick leave of Sanitary Inspector Stapleton.

Inspector White was present at the meeting and in answer to a question from Ald. Dutton as to whether he did not think general conditions here so far as he had been able to see, were as good as in other places, replied that he could answer yes to that so far as the city was concerned but he could not say as much for some of the dairy farms.

His report covered his work from April 1 to April 16 and showed that inspections had been made as follows:

Bakeshops, 4; butcher shops, 7; restaurants, 8; stores, 6; yards, 4; lanes, 2; quarantines, 1; pasteurization plants 5; milk samples, 3; miscellaneous and offices, 7.

Butcher Shops

These shops were clean. Sanitary ice boxes were well taken care of and meats were of good quality and were well looked after. Garbage was well taken care of.

Restaurants

Restaurants were clean with the exception of three places. These were not giving enough attention to the care of their ice boxes or to the handling of the food. In most cases ice boxes were very unsatisfactory. In one ice box, some decomposed meat was found and done away with. Another manager was asked to have his basement and ice box cleaned up; also to have proper dressing rooms for his employees. Wash rooms were untidy; in several wash rooms roller towels were being used which we feel should be done away with and paper towels installed. During the inspections I found some of these places were equipped with double sinks which are not being used properly. I would recommend that a chlorine solution be used in the rinse water, not less than 100 P.P.M. or to exceed 200 P.P.M.

Milk Samples

In company with Dr. Fraser, several samples of raw milk were taken and in several cases a very unsatisfactory report was received. A further check on the sanitary conditions at these farms will be undertaken. In a great many cases where there is a high bacterial count on raw milk we feel it is caused by an inadequate milk house, improper handling of the milk and improper cooling or washing facilities.

Pasteurization Plants

Several inspections were made of dairies regarding the pasteurization of cream. This, we feel, is handled very poorly. In some dairies the cream is not put through the same process as the milk. Some plants pasteurize the cream in cans then bottle it by hand, which is very unsanitary and is prohibited by the Milk and Cream Act. During the next few weeks we hope to have a further report on these conditions and as to the cause of the extremely high bacterial count of cream.

Inspections of Distributors Supplying Raw Milk

During April 19-20th, some thirty dairy farms were inspected as to the sanitary condition of their stables, milk houses, utensils and supervision of their dairy herds. In most the stables were very well looked after. STERILIZER—They were using very poor methods of sterilization. In most milk houses they were using a chlorine solution in the rinse water but the chlorine was being grossly misused. In a number of cases of the various milk houses inspected the bottles and utensils were rinsed in a tub of water supposedly containing a chlorine solution but which when tested showed very little chlorine content, although the dairyman conscientiously rinsed the utensils thinking he was sterilizing them. HERDS—Herds were well taken care of and tested for tuberculosis and also contagious abortion. It is a very simple matter to determine if a herd has been tuberculin tested but at present it is quite different regarding abortion. There is no way of checking a herd except by depending on the honesty of the farmer. In some herds the last test was made in 1936. We feel this this should be done at least once every year. On three different farms some cows were found which had to be removed from the herd until a satisfactory report is received from a veterinary.

Recommendations

1. That a complete survey be made regarding sterilization of utensils and equipment—as to a more complete method of sterilization and the proper amount of chlorine to be used.

2. That any dairyman supplying milk to the city be prohibited from bringing other cows into his present herd until a satisfactory report has been received by the Department of Health from a veterinary stating that the new cows are free from contagious abortion and have been examined for tuberculosis.

3. That all cows in herds supplying raw milk to the city of Peterborough must be tested annually for Bang's disease by a qualified veterinary surgeon; that cows found free from Bang's disease be tagged by the veterinary surgeon in the right ear; that indentifying tags be supplied by the local Board of Health.

In conclusion I might say that much can be done to assist the dairy man in producing a clean, high grade product. The main feature about any health program is education.

Mr. White said that he had found both the restaurant owners and the dairy farmers concerned quite willing to co-operate in improving conditions.

He also reported that he had found several cases where cows were suffering from mastitis and he recommended that all such cows should be removed from the herds until the condition is cleared up.

THE STARS SAY . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, April 25

Sunday's horoscope holds testimonies of much activity and enterprise, with new undertakings and employment under particular stimulus of active planets. High pressure impulses may need supervision lest urges to extravagances, excesses and indulgences in both business and private affairs lead into perilous pathways.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a very active and probably enterprising and exciting year, with much pressure in either employment or the launching of new prosperity.

A child born on this day may be able and enterprising, winning the support of its employers, probably through a tendency to stratagem, tact or subtlety, upon which its success seems to depend.

For Monday, April 26

Monday's astrological forecast is a very important one, holding augury of sudden and surprising events, which may upset current conditions and wield important influence on the future destiny. Wisely-considered decisions are urgent because the impending changes affect the private life as well as business interests.

Those whose birthday it is are at the threshold of very important events which may affect the entire life, its business and private affairs and its future progress and projects.

A child born on this day may be talented in unconventional lines, probably in science and invention. It will probably develop these gifts through shrewd, clever, secret or mysterious manipulation, and it may be devoted to the public through secret service.

UNIFORMITY HAS LITTLE APPEAL TO ENGLISHMAN

WANT NO DICTATORS

Englishmen will never be beguiled by the spell-binding appeals of Fascism, Dr. A. W. MacKenzie, widely-known principal of the Grove School at Lakefield, declared in an address to one hundred Peterborough Sons of England gathered at the annual celebration of St. George's Day at the Paragon Hall last evening.

"The systems of Mussolini and Hitler demand uniformity, and uniformity has little appeal to the real Englishman," he said. "Englishmen have a sense of individuality that will not tolerate regimentation."

He scouted the possibility of a revolution for any cause in England. "The English are all of one class and they know it," he asserted. "England will never have a revolution while the squire's son will play cricket with the villagers. They couldn't have a revolution. Against whom would they revolt?"

English Leadership

Making his address in response to the toast to St. George's Day, Dr. MacKenzie praised England's record in history. He said he was inclined to believe the saying that when God wanted a hard thing done He called on an Englishman. Other countries of the world look to England for leadership and regard England the standard of law and order, justice and freedom, he said.

"The Empire is kept together by no authority but by bonds stronger than any authority," he continued. "The bond lies in the Crown. During this last year we have suffered. We felt something ghastly was happening to us. We didn't realize what the Crown meant to us until then. Thank God we have in George VI a wonderful example of what the Crown should be."

He spoke of "a national genius the English have for coming out on top." "They say the Englishman muddles through, but there must be something more than that. No one comes out on top always by muddling through. There must be some wonderful quality.

Stanley Baldwin

Pointing to Stanley Baldwin as typical of the leaders who enable England to "muddle through," he declared, "Thank God for Baldwin this last year."

R. J. Lemmon, president of the Lansdowne Lodge, was in the chair and acted as toastmaster. Alderman Dr. Smith represented Mayor George Macdonald in addressing the assembled banqueters in response to a toast to "Our City" and Charles Shaw responded to the toast "To Canada."

A pleasant program of entertainment was unfolded as the evening progressed. Vocal solos were afforded by Mrs. R. Ritney, Frank Biddle and Robert Eadell and Arthur Collison entertained on the piano. Well received was a humorous reading by Miss Queenie Hope.

A feature of the program was the showing of a motion picture, "A Trip Through Australia" by Robert Hardie.

SOUTH-END TROOP STAGES CONCERT

Held By 12th St. Paul's Troop To Raise Funds For Jamboree

St. Paul's (South-End) Presbyterian Sunday School boasts of a strong Scout movement, 12 Scouts and 12 Cubs—and the Troop is also designated No. 12. The coming jamboree at Lakefield necessitates funds to enable the troop to participate in the event, and for that purpose the Sunday School Hall, on Lock Street, was on Friday evening filled with the Scout fraternity, and parents and friends.

A concert had been arranged with Scouts as the artists, and a fine program was presented, which received unstinted applause. Those taking part, under the chairmanship of Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr, were: Klinster Reid, violin solos; the Going-up Ceremony, Glen Daniels, from Cubs to Scouts; community singing; investiture of Clarence Downer as a Scout; address by Assistant Commissioner Ernie Wolff; harmonica selections by Kenneth Henwood; vocal solo, James Ireland; Kasoo Band selections; address by Cubmaster Baldwin. Accompanist for the evening was Mrs. L. Monk; and stories were told by Rev. Dr. Barr.

Assisting at the door were Fred Plunkett and John Hill, and a good collection was received.

Lunch, under Cubmistress Anne Young and Cubmaster Bill Anderson, with several assistants, was served and greatly enjoyed. Votes of thanks and the National Anthem concluded a pleasant entertainment.

In charge of Troop No. 12 is Scoutmaster A. H. Sturrock, who is rounding the Scouts into a smart-appearing troop.

M.O.H. RESENTS HINT OF GRUDGE

Objects To Inference By Alderman Wilson At Committee Meeting

"I resent the implication that I might have a grudge against somebody and use my power under a by-law to put him out of business," said Dr. Murray Fraser, Medical Officer of Health at Friday night's meeting of the Board of Health, as he asked that when other health bylaws were to be considered before committees of the council he be given an opportunity to attend.

The M.O.H's reference was to a remark made by Ald. Wilson at Wednesday's meeting of the Finance Committee when she bylaw to regulate bakeries was under discussion and he objected to the power given the Medical Health Officer under the bylaw as being too drastic.

"I object to that inference that I might be unfair," said Dr. Fraser. "Surely if the council has sufficient confidence in me to appoint me as medical officer of health they have sufficient confidence to believe that I would not administer this or any other regulation unfairly."

Dr. Fraser pointed out that under the Health Act he had the power to close a bakery or any other place forthwith without needing a local bylaw to give him the authority.

SMALLPOX ABSENT HERE SINCE 1928 DR. FRASER SAYS

Result Is That Preventive Measures Are Neglected By Public

VACCINATION NEEDED

Peterborough has not had a case of smallpox since 1928 and there was only one case in that year Dr. Murray Fraser Medical Officer of Health, stated in his monthly report to Board of Health.

The records for the ten previous years, says the report, show the following: 1919, 26 cases; 1920, 53 cases; 1921, 8 cases; 1922, no cases; 1923, no cases; 1924, no cases; 1925, 1 case; 1926, 87 cases; 1927, 41 cases; 1928, 1 case.

It is natural that when a communicable disease is absent for several years, preventive measures are forgotten or neglected by the public. This is true of smallpox and the result is a large unprotected group, consisting principally of children, exists among whom smallpox would spread with rapidity if introduced. The disease does not occur spontaneously but is introduced from outside. It is possible at any time for smallpox to be brought in by one of the many transients passing through or by visitors or travellers. It is therefore felt that the opportunity should be provided at regular intervals, particularly for the children for vaccination.

A clinic was held in each Separate School during March to vaccinate the school and pre-school children. A total of 360 children availed themselves of the opportunity. Of these, 352 or 90% had successful takes. No child was vaccinated unless the written consent of the parent or guardian was obtained. The Cliulo was held prior to the Easter vacation in order that school attendance would not suffer as a result of any disability. An occasional reaction severe enough to cause mild illness was reported but on the whole the "takes" were mild with minimum scarring.

SAFER WHEN HEAVY.

FREDERICTON (C.P.). — With the scrap iron business booming here, someone stole 500 pounds of it from a warehouse yard. A trip-hammer nearby was tampered with but remained safe. Reason—weight 1,000 pounds.

Altogether it was announced some 250 essays were submitted by contestants from every portion of the county, and the judges had a difficult task in selection of the winners so high was the general standard of the efforts.

Wallace Harvey, president of the Association was in the chair, while special guests for the occasion included two-famed pictorial sportsmen in the persons of Bill Lang and Tom Jull both of Toronto who showed some beautiful moving pictures of outdoor life, with some superb fishing scenes.

One of the first of Mr. Lang's series of pictures was entitled "Lumbering in Muskoka." It covered a period of a whole year in the activity of a lumber camp and was a picture of extreme educational interest as well as being of an entertaining nature.

Secretary E. A. Quinney briefly outlined the objects of the Association in its ceaseless effort to educate the public of the district in the conservation of fish and game, and he dwelt on some of the recent legislation enacted by the provincial government which had resulted from representations made by the local Association.

Several New Members

After this brief talk several new members were enrolled in the Association from among the large gathering present.

Chris Graham introduced Messrs. Jull and Lang who are known throughout Canada as anglers extraordinary. He also introduced Stuart Alger of Ottawa, who is past president of the Ontario Anglers Federation, Charles McCubbon, secretary of the Ontario Anglers Federation, and "Cowboy" Keah of Bowmanville.

A cup presented by Mary Pickford to the Ontario Anglers Federation to be held by the angler catching the best-shaped trout in Ontario waters during the current year, was on display at the meeting and was the object of general interest.

Mrs. Nancy Pyper, who has for the past two years directed the fortunes of Hart House Theatre in Toronto, and who was guest of honor on Friday evening at a dinner held at the Empress Hotel by the Lyceum Club and Women's Art Association, spoke of her anxiety when her husband, C. B. Pyper, special correspondent of The Toronto Telegram to Spain, was in the thick of war operations for five months.

Mrs. Pyper, so she says, has no immediate plans for the future beyond getting a long rest after her strenuous two years and considering an offer made to her from London, England. She has resigned as director of Hart House Theatre.

At the close of dinner last night, the members greeted the guest of honor, who left at eight o'clock this morning for Toronto, motoring up with Miss Marie Hicks, who is spending the week-end there.

Former Pastor Welcomed to Charge

From Woodstock comes news of a former much-respected citizen in the person of Rev. G. K. Tyler, former pastor of Park street Baptist Church, who left here recently with his family to take charge of the First Baptist Church in Woodstock, where the charge is one hundred and six years old, making it one of the oldest Baptist charges in the province.

An official welcome to the church and community was accorded Rev. Mr. Tyler and his wife and family, when greetings were voiced by members of many congregations in the city. Rev. E. G. Thompson, Methodist minister; Rev. Dr. Ferguson, Central Church; Rev. R. B. Ashby of Knox Presbyterian Church; Rev. H. B. Ashby of New St. Paul's Church; Rev. W. H. Dynes of Oxford street Baptist Church; Rev. M. P. Smith of College avenue church, the latter addressing the meeting.

Replying briefly to the message delivered, Rev. Mr. Tyler spoke feelingly of the warm welcome extended and expressed his certainty that he would find the fellowship preferred of benefit and real warmth.

"The past few days have been trying ones for us," he commented. "In five years one makes many connections and pulling up roots that go down deeply is always a hard job. I greatly appreciate the gracious things said this evening. The past five years have been exceedingly happy in Peterborough. We had the finest kind of fellowship among the ministers there and I feel that I am not going to be disappointed in Woodstock."

Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Tyler, with their son Broadus and daughter Lura, were then introduced to the congregation and a social hour followed during which refreshments were served. Musical numbers were given by George and Ruth LaFlair and Clare Bartley.

A pleasant little function of the evening was the presentation of a basket of roses to Mrs. Tyler, by little Dorothy Bepiete.

Social Aspect Of Banquet at the 'Y'

For the annual banquet of the Ladies' Basketball Association of the city, held on Friday evening in the library and green room of the Young Women's Christian Association, decorations were of a Coronation type, with the flag colors represented in red, white and blue table streamers, and the cellophane centerpiece shaped like a flower-basket and topped by flags which also decorated the rooms. Orange candy drops made crown-shaped table ornaments.

In the absence of the "Y" president, Mrs. R. R. H. Renner, the guests were greeted by Mrs. H. C. Southeran. Special guests of the evening were the speaker, A. R. Kentfeldy, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Vernon, Mr. and Mrs. A. Cranfield, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Southeran, Mr. and Mrs. S. Shields, Mrs. P. D. Craig, Miss A. Wood and C. Perdue.

Mrs. D. Craig and a sing-song was led by W. Thirnbeck, with Miss Doris Ackford at the piano.

The address and the main proceedings of the evening are reported on in another column on the Sports page. Mr. Kennedy, who gave an interesting and humorous talk on the cities of Europe, was introduced by Joe Cooper, president, who spoke briefly in opening the program.

The prizes to the winning teams were presented by Mrs. Southeran, while Mrs. Vernor presented pins to winners in each group. Miss Caroline Littlefield expressed thanks to the coaches of the teams.

The toast to "The King," proposed by Joe Cooper, was honored in the usual fashion by the guests, approximately eighty in number. The toast to "Basketball" was proposed by Miss Madeline Blade, with a response by Miss Foster. Presentation of gifts was made to the following coaches: Whitty Thirnbeck (Westclox Seniors); Gordon McIntyre (Marconi Radio); Jack Dundas (C.G.E. Senior); Miss Sybil Ecobichon (St. John's, Junior); Joe Cooper ("Y" Quakers, Junior); Ed. Ascott (Westclox, Junior); Miss Kay Rogow (C.G.E. Junior).

At the close of the banquet, the annual dance which is an "event extraordinary" at the Y.W.C.A. was enjoyed in the gymnasium, where piano music was played by Stan. Northrup and novelties and noise-makers enlivened the program.

ERRORS IN POLICY LAID TO ABERHART

Former Treasurer Asks Recall Proceedings—Explains His Action

STETTLER, Alta., April 24.—(CP)—Premier Aberhart of Alberta is charged by Charles Cockroft, former Provincial Treasurer, with errors in government policy, particularly in provincial financing and in relations with the Dominion government.

"My position became intolerable" Mr. Cockroft, insurgent Social Credit member of the Legislature for Stettler, asserted yesterday in a statement issued to his constituency executive, breaking a silence maintained since he resigned from the cabinet January 1.

Mr. Cockroft invited institution of recall proceedings against him and promised to resign if 40 per cent of electors signed a recall petition instead of the 60 per cent required by the Recall Act. The executive took no action on the invitation.

"If no action were taken, Mr. Cockroft said, he would ask that his legislative seat be moved to the independent section of the House.

The Stettler member said Mr. Aberhart and certain cabinet members had requested the province sell out its sinking funds which "would have led to a misuse of trust funds and certainly a loss to the Province of $1,200,000."

Just Between Us Women

A Daily Chat With Examiner Neighbors, Conducted by Roberta.

WHO reasons wisely is not therefore wise;
His pride in reasoning, not in acting, lies.—Pope

And this:
O judgment, thou art fled to brutish beasts,
And men have lost their reason.
—Shakespeare.

Dear Friends:

Did you ever meet up with anyone who would not face facts, but tried to reason you out of what was perfectly obvious? They have so many reasons why something should not be done, there is no wisdom about it but still they persist in pushing those things at you, while you can see that they are going to be the loser in the long run, if they do not act.

There are always two sides to a question, sometimes even three or four, but when it is plainly shown to be most reasonable to follow a certain course, you would wonder why they would try so hard to evade it.

To my mind, there are a certain class with whom it is folly to argue. All you can do is to let them think they are having their own way, all the while getting your ideas across as best you may, using all your mental force to show them you are steadfast. Where a thing does not affect you vitally, you may feel inclined to give up the struggle and call it a day, but where it is of real importance stick to your guns, making sure that it isn't you that is the unreasonable one.

But oh how aggravating it can be, when you have to strive time after time with anyone for something which should be done, and find them bring up plausible excuses which seem reasonable enough until they are examined, and while all this is going on the thing in question could be finished and done with.

They seem to have lost their judgment, and all they are taken up with is finding reasons to push down your throat. And it is so easy to get into such a habit. You hear it in a child arguing with a parent, telling her or him, that some of their playmates do something the other way, that they do not go to bed as early, not have they to clean their plate off at meal time, and the only way is to nip such habits in the bud.

I like to be reasonable with a child, but when you let their judgment over-rule yours when you know they are utterly wrong as applied to them, then it is time to use a little discipline, for of all the horrid things I thing a child like that is worst.

You can attend to a child, but God preserve you when you run up against an adult like that, for it is like beating your head against a stone wall. They reason with unreason, until you wonder where their brains can be, and irritate you beyond measure.

Not so long ago, in another town, I came in contact with a person like that, but I finally won out in the long run, altho' I was limp for days afterwards. But the thing had to be done, they had to be shown the difference between reason, and reasons as to why this should not be gone at and finished. However, it nearly finished me, and the funny thing was that afterward this one proved about doing what he had been made to do, so that I had to laugh.

So, when you attempt to reason, be sure you have not got hold of the subject by the wrong end, and no matter how set you are in your ways, (you aren't are you?) try to look at the thing from two or three different angles, and maybe you will begin to wonder why you were so blind.

You know it is an easy thing to bring up reasons why we should not do so-and-so, when we do not feel like doing a thing, and we all get a streak like that once in a while, but it is when we let it get a habit, that we shackle our brain, and find we like to look for reasons against a thing, instead of for it.

And would you kindly tell me your reason for not writing?

Your Friend,
ROBERTA.

HUBBELL HURLS GIANTS TO WIN 3-0 OVER BEES

National League's Ace Pitcher Picks Up Winning Streak From Dust Of 1936

PIRATES DOWN REDS 4-3

Caster Holds Senators Down In 7-1 Victory—Dodgers Take Phillies 4-3

By Sid Feder
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

"Squarepants" is back with all his stuff, so all's right with the Bronx, the Polo Grounds, and the New York Giants. But it's not so hot for the rest of the National League.

Squarepants, for the benefit of those who've missed the treat, is the name from his extra-leg-length baseball jeans which stretch three-quarters of the way down to his ankles and look for all the world like two stove-pipes painted white, when he's out there on that mound.

He is also noted for his portside pitching, his screwball specialty, and his 16-game unfinished winning streak last season.

Bill Terry threw King Carl at the usually troublesome Boston Bees yesterday as the league champions made their debut at their own Polo Grounds. And Hubbell picked up where he left off in '36.

His screwball did everything but sit up and laugh right in the dees' faces. The rest of his stuff followed suit, and Carl pitched himself a three-hit, 3-0 shutout for the Giants' second straight win of the season and his own 17th straight in league competition. He fanned five, walked three, and the only time he was threatened, he struck out two men in a row with the bases loaded.

Hoyt, picking up in the second inned a day of generally fine pitching along the big-league front. Right behind him were young George Caster of Connie Mack's Athletics and old Waite Hoyt, opening his 20th year in the majors as relief-pitcher extraordinary for the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Pirates Win Third Start

Hoyt, picking up in the second inning when big Jim Weaver weakened, allowed three hits the rest of the way as the Pirates won their third straight, nosing out the roughhouse Reds from Cincinnati 4-3, in a game marked by the season's first fist fight. Rookie Lee Grissom of the Reds and Catcher Al Todd started it, and several others joined in before it was over.

Caster limited the Senators to four hits in hurling a 7-1 victory, with the help of Bob Johnson's third homer in as many games.

Roy Henshaw fanned nine in close to eight innings as the Dodgers topped the Phillies 4-3 in the Philadelphia National league opener. Lewis Lawson muffled the Chicago White Sox with half a dozen hits as the Detroit Tigers, headed by Hank Greenberg and his first homer, clubbed out a 10-2 conquest to remain undefeated.

CARDS WIN, 5 TO 4

Although touched for eight and 10 hits, respectively, the Cardinals' Len Warneke and the Cleveland Indians' Johnny Allen showed lots of stuff in the pinches. Warneke, pennant hope of the gas house gang, kept the Cards in the unbeaten column with a 5-4 victory, St. Louis' third. Allen's Indian mates did most of the work in the Cleveland home opener, banging five pitchers to wallop the already slipping St. Louis Browns 9-2.

The Yankees and Boston Red Sox were rained out.

The Indians, tangling with the Browns again, are slated to present their week-end rookie sensation, young Bob Feller, to the home folks in to-day's tilt.

SCHOOL SOFTBALL.

The Public School Softball League will open its schedule on Monday, April 26th with King George playing at Queen Alex and King Edward playing at Central. The league will operate in two series this year, running a senior schedule and a junior one, the latter for boys 12 and under. In the senior section, six teams will operate, and each school will also have junior entries. The latter schedule opens April 29th. Both complete schedules will be published on Monday.

WOMAN 75, IS MISSING

Believed Missing in Bush or Swamp Near Brockville,

BROCKVILLE, Ont., April 24 (C.P.). — A party of 35 men belonging to the Throopton neighborhood in Grenville County prepared to-day to resume search for 75-year-old Mrs. Annie Thorpe, missing from the home of her son, William, since last Monday. It was believed that unless the elderly woman managed to make her way to some town in the district, she wandered into bush or swamps in the neighborhood.

Washington Right Fielder Slides Safely

In the presence of President Roosevelt who threw out the first ball, Philadelphia Athletics defeated Washington Senators in the opening game of the American League baseball season at Washington, D.C. The A's scored a run in the tenth to win 4-3. Here, Stone, Washington right fielder, reaches third safely on his triple in the second.

SPORTS DAY by DAY

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

MEN'S BASKETBALL for this year of grace winds up with a double-header at the "Y" gym this evening. A couple of Toronto teams—with reputations stacking out all over 'em, and a few circular medals tacked on their jerseys—will take issue with the best of the local Church Leaguers. 11's King St. Midgets of Toronto vs. St. Andrew's at 7:45, followed at 8:45 by King St. Intermediates and St. Paul's. And a dance on top of that should be plenty of action and keen competition as the basketeers pay their curtain call of the season to local cage fans. A lot of folks won't know what to do with their Saturday evenings henceforth, having practically taken out squatter's rights at the "Y" on that p.m. all winter.

* * * * * *

WE ENJOYED the Ladies' Basketball League banquet last e'en at the Y.W.C.A. As a matter of fact, we can't think offhand of anything we like better than parking the number nines under a greasy table and laying to with gusto. About 50 attended this windup affair for gals' basketball and it was as successful as their season has been. The winners got prizes, the losers got alibis, and there were more congrats thrown around than Pop Dionne himself gets in a month! But deserved bouquets were tossed the way of the loop officers, referees, coaches and players. Miss Littlefield and the directors rated a lot of credit, too.

* * * * * *

AS GUEST speaker, A. R. Kennedy gave an interesting address with a lot of humor interjected. Mrs. H. C. Sootheran spoke for the Y.W. directors, and she and Mrs. J. H. Vernor presented prizes. Joe Cooper was toastmaster. Westclox Seniors and C.O.E. Juniors were the winning teams in a smart seven-team circuit. Some of the damsels found it much easier to face a 30-point deficit in a play-off game than they did to get up and make a speech before such a large gathering of friends and admirers. One girl gallantly waded through several sentences, lost the thread of her speech and finally said with simplicity and finality: "I guess I'm stuck!" It was an interesting affair all around.

DOPE on the big Handicap Tournament now going on at the Duffus' Alleys is in to-night. We had a flock of scores yesterday but got 'em just a bit too late to get them set up and printed. There is a raft of good pin-spillers splashing the maple around there these nights, a number of towns having guys here after the big prizes. But somehow the local bowlers seem to be holding their own so far. It'll wind up to-night with the best bowling of the whole tourney shown as they really get down to business with their strikes and spares. It'll about clean up the indoor bowling.

* * * * * *

MEN'S City Softball League holds another meeting at eight bells Tuesday evening in Duffus', and everyone interested is invited. They will close entries at this season, and it is to be hoped that some half a dozen squads will see the light and clamber aboard before the train pulls out. Play will be at Central again, if permission is given, and will likely start about the third week in May. Umpires, groundskeeper and such business will have to be settled at Tuesday's meeting. The loop is looking forward to a bigger and better softball season than previously.

THERE is a guy here, named Ken Bartle, who will be with a new sports good store which opens shortly. He is a tall chap scaling 195 pounds and is said to be quite an athlete. Played junior O.R.F.U. with Brantford a couple of years back, hits 'em hard on defence in hockey and is reported also to know how to wield a lacrosse stick. Dunno this Bartle personally, but that's what we heard about him and mayhap local sports fans will hear lots more about him within the coming year. No doubt, the Quinte writer will now wonder what farm we found this athlete on—alleged athletic imports and local agricultural areas appearing to our friend in Belleville to be as closely allied as ham and eggs.

MONDAY is the last day for entries to the Church Softball League and interested Sunday School groups should get busy this weekend in organizing teams. Entry fee is half a smacker for bantams and juveniles and one buck per junior or senior team. Age limits are: Junior, under 20 by May 1st; juveniles, under 17; and bantams, under 15. Games will start at six p.m. up till May 29th, and after that it'll be 6.30 o'clock. Seven innings to a tilt, but nine for play-offs. Any further dope on this big circuit, which commences play shortly, may be obtained from any of the following executive: President, Len Agnew; Secretary, Don Charlton; treasurer, Lloyd Parnall; and Art Mann and Byers Smith. Don't forget, next Monday is the deadline.

FOUR teams signified intention of entering the Central Ontario Intermediate O.A.L.A. group at a meeting last eve. in Port Hope. Jim Lehane of this city conducted the session—and, in fact, Peterborough lacrosse officials have done practically all the organising of the circuit. The teams present last night were Belleville, Trenton R.C.A.F., a Port Hope-Cobourg combine and Peterborough. Looks like Oshawa will not enter, and we don't know what Norwood intends doing. Locals on hand were Pete King, Charlie Carson, Bud Fisher, Doug Miller and Jim Lehane. They discussed a flock of matters and decided to hold a meeting next Friday in Cobourg to close entries, draw up schedule and prepare to open the season.

Local senior ball workouts will continue in the "Y" next week and then, maybe, the wide outdoors.

Fish And Game Notes

A Column Conducted in Interests Of Fishing And Hunting

Reports from Rice Lake Friday were that the maskinonge are beginning to seek the shallows for spawning. For the first time in several seasons, employees of the Department of Game and Fisheries will strip 'lunge along the north shore for re-stocking purposes. Groups of strippers will also be active in Pigeon Creek stripping 'lunge.

Securing this spawn by stripping is the first and most important step in the chain of operations resulting in the placing weeks later of maskinonge fry back in the lakes for re-stocking.

The spawn so taken is rushed by truck to the hatchery at Trenton, where it is placed in jars of water kept at proper temperature until it matches into wriggling pairs which are the baby 'lunge. A few days later these wrigglers are put in cans, carried back on trucks to the lakes, and carefully distributed in the weed beds of our lakes.

More Fry This Season.

Through the efforts of the Peterborough Fish and Game Protective Association, 100,000 of maskinonge fry were placed in local waters last season. However, the local association members were far from satisfied with this number, urging upon the Department the need for a great increase in the hatch of maskinonge fry.

As a result of the association's request for more 'lunge fry, the Department has decided to double the number of men engaged this season in stripping the fish. It follows that double the amount of spawn should be obtained, and further that twice the number of fry over that of last year should go back into our lakes this season.

It is in the transportation and distribution of 'lunge fry, pickerel, lake trout fry and speckled and brown trout fry and yearlings that the association incurs its greatest expense and makes a major contribution to the continuance of fishing in the district. But local sportsmen will not be content until the Department builds a hatchery in the district. They argue that, as the greatest natural habitate of bass and 'lunge on the continent the Kawarthas deserve a fish hatchery and that re-stocking work will never be properly carried out for this area until one is built.

Speckled Trout Success.

In one branch of restocking work the Department is now carrying out most successful work. This is the raising of yearling speckled trout. Only this week 14,000 of these beauties, two to five inches in size, were put out in the Little and Big Ouse Rivers and the Cavan stream. More of the same are expected for streams here. In all the Department raised 1,400,000 of these trout and carried them over the winter in ponds.

Now it is announced that plans are completed to construct more such ponds which will double the carry over of speckled trout. While appreciating the efforts in this direction, local anglers desire to see a like proportion of attention and expenditure in the hatching of 'lunge and bass, which after all are the fish that attract the American fishermen to our shores.

Re-stocking In Area.

For the sportsmen who are uninformed in the work being accomplished by the Peterborough Fish and Game Protective Association, a summary here of the re-stocking carried on in district waters last season will prove interesting. Through the efforts of the Association, the following fish were "planted" in the immediate surrounding area in 1936: Black bass (small-mouthed), 62,500; black bass (large-mouthed), 1,000; brown trout, 8,500; speckled trout, 9,000 yearlings; pickeral, 3,110,000; speckled trout, 4,000 fingerlings.

The association's aim is to maintain fishing by re-stocking, conserving and causing the observance of laws. It deserves the support of every citizen who wants to see the Kawartha area continue as a place where bass and 'lunge may be caught.

New Game Birds.

Important is the announcement that the Department will receive within a few weeks from Finland a quantity of eggs of a new breed of game bird. The Finnish Government will send to Ontario 50 cock-of-the-woods eggs and 30 black cock eggs, and probably a number of five birds of each species. The cock-of-the-woods is a large sized grouse, between the size of a hen and a turkey, while the black cock is smaller and is sometimes referred to as a heath grouse.

Both species are natural to Finland and thrive in areas of pine and spruce. They should succeed in Ontario much better than did the Hungarian grouse on which the Department spent much money but which found our climate too severe.

If the Finnish birds propogate successfully, you may be sure that Pinley Meeks and other members of the local association will request some from the Department for this district.

Entered In Kentucky Derby

"No Sir," three-year-old colt owned by Mary Hirsch, entered in the Kentucky derby to be run at Churchill Downs on May 8. The horse is held at 40 to one odds in the future books on the race.

LACROSSE LOOP IS ORGANIZED

Local Man Is Vice-President Of Four-Team Central Ontario League

The Central Ontario Lacrosse Association was organized last evening at a group meeting held in Port Hope. About 25 enthusiastic lacrosse men sat in at the session in the St. Lawrence Hotel. Four teams were entered: Peterborough, Belleville, Trenton Airport and a Port Hope-Cobourg combine. Neither Oshawa nor Norwood were represented. Closing date for entries was set at next Friday when a meeting will be held in Cobourg to draw up a schedule and complete organization plans.

Lehane In Chair

Jim Lehane of Peterborough conducted the meeting, and other local delegates were Charlie Carson, Pete King, Doug Miller and Bud Fisher. C.O.L.A. officers elected for 1937 were: President, Harry Moore of Trenton; vice-president, Pete King of Peterborough; secretary-treasurer, Lieut. Carling-Kelly of the R.C.A.F.; executive, W. Sneyd of Port Hope, Dr. Brasely of Oshawa, Squad Leader Lawrence of the R.C.A.F. and Alex Kempt of Norwood.

A general discussion took place regarding games, grounds, color of uniforms, schedule, etc., much of it being left over till the next meeting. The gathering decided to petition the O.A.L.A. before that body holds its next annual convention to place a lacrosse convenor in Central Ontario. Each club is requested to submit the names of referees to the gathering in Cobourg next Friday. The meeting broke up with the feeling that this will be one of the strongest intermediate lacrosse leagues in Ontario.

Inside Sportin' Dope

BY A. WISE-CRACKER.

Mister Sporting Editor:

Well Mac, the major league ball season got under way this week although the best pitching has been done so far by the weather man, which has scored a lot of shutouts since the big show started. It is too early to do much commenting on the showing of the clubs, but I suppose this is as good time as any to launch the annual Wisecracker predictions as to the results and thus give the customers their usual chance to do some chuckling. Well, you know me Mac, I ain't going to hide behind no fence; instead I'm coming right out in the open now and make the prophecy that next October they is going to be another nickle work's series. In other words neighbors I'm calling them Yanks and Giants to repeat. I can't see nothing that is going to stop the Yanks unless it's the C.I.O. and while the other new York club will have a tighter race they look plenty good enough to be up there at the top of the heap come early October.

Looks Like Washout.

Closer to home Mac, this international hockey serious in Toronto looks like the major washout of the year. On paper it might look good to call the teams England, the United States and Canada but to the fans in Ontario the outfits is all Canadian teams and the affair was more like an old home week than a international tangle. Anyway the players should oughta be fed up with hockey and if they aint the folks that pay the bills for laying their lack in at the box office certainly is.

Pulling a Boner.

The only thing to make the serious notable was the action of the amateur moguls in suspending the Winnipeg Monarchs for playing against the American outfit. I aint got the space nor the inclination to go into the details of that tangle but I just got this to say that no matter what you think of the Amateur Athletic Union's action they was no excuse for hockey authorities in Toronto letting them Winnipeg kids go ahead with the game in the face of the announcement that suspension would follow. It looks like the interests de Maple Leaf gardens was put ahead of the welfare of a clever bunch of game kids and while it all may get straightened out later, the few dollars took in at the gate was too small return for getting into trouble.

They're Turning Wheels.

Locally Mac, they aint been a wheel turned except the cartwheels what the Peterborough senior ball team is turning up at the Y gym getting into shape for the opening of the outdoor season, and there is a lot of encouragement in the way the boys has been turning out and the pep they has been putting into the preliminary drills. When the weather man finally sends along a little warm weather and the lads can get out on the green swapd they should be right in shape to start work in earnest. Meanwhile they is getting to know each other and build up a team spirit even before tossing a ball and that puts them already miles ahead of last season.

Well old timer that seems to exhaust the dope barrel for this issue so I'm bailing out right now.

Sportfully Yours,
A. WISE CRACKER.

PRIZES PRESENTED AT Y.W. BANQUET

Eighty Present As Girl Basketball Players Close Successful Season

The annual banquet and presentation of prizes for the Ladies' Basketball League was held last evening in the Y.W.C.A. There were 80 present, including guests, officers, coaches and players. Following an enjoyable dinner, songs were sung, toasts offered, speeches made and trophies presented to the winners and the various team coaches. The successful and enjoyable affair was followed by a dance.

Joe Cooper, president of the league, acted as chairman for the large gathering. His address of congratulations was brief; and he was followed by Mrs. H. C. Sootheran, vice-president of the Y.W.C.A. Board, who spoke of the interest the directors had in this branch of girls' athletics. Miss D. Ackford played for the sing-song, conducted by Whitty Thurgood. A basketball was presented by Miss M. Slade of the Westclox Seniors and responded to by the C.O.E. Juniors.

The Guest Speaker

A. R. Kennedy, as guest speaker, entertained the gathering with an interesting and humorous speech. Mrs. Sootheran then presented the O. N. Cowdon Trophy to the Westclox Seniors, winners for the first time; the junior cup to the C.O.E. Juniors, 1937 champions; and the runners-up trophy to the C.O.E. Seniors. Pins for the winning players were presented by Mrs. J. H. Vernor.

The coaches received gifts from their teams, the captains making the presentations and thanking their team pilots, with the latter responding. M. Snowden made the presentation to Whitty Thurgood of the Westclox Seniors, L. Magee to Gord McIntyre of Marconi Radio Seniors, M. Woods to Jack Dundas of C.O.E. Seniors, E. Clark to Sybil Brobshon of St. John's Juniors, D. Frost to Joe Cooper of "Y" Quakers Juniors, A. Flynn to Bill Ascott of Westclox Juniors, and V. Bartley to Kay Rogow of the C.O.E. Juniors. Miss Littlefield congratulated the players and expressed thanks to The Examiner for publicity.

Best In Teachers Due Our Children

TORONTO, April 24—(CP)—Canadian children are not getting a "square deal" in education, Prof. John Hughes, chairman of the Department of Education, McGill University, asserted at a dinner of the new Education Fellowship here last night. The "best people" were not being attracted to the teaching profession, he said.

Prof. Hughes declared teaching salaries were "disgracefully inadequate" and that the status of the teacher was little better than that of the stenographer. Too large a proportion of those in the profession are women—of 72,000 teachers in Canada, more than 60,000 are of the fair sex, he said.

"The only really satisfactory type of school is the co-educational school—education needs the best energy of both sexes. It may be rank heresy but I am certain there is a more human kind of atmosphere in this type of school than in a purely girls' or purely boys' school."

LEAFS TROUNCE ORIOLES 8 TO 6 IN NINTH RALLY

Slam Over 3 Runs After Baltimore Ties It In Eighth With 5-Run Drive

JERSEY LOSES OPENER

Red Wings Whip Giants' Brand New Team 4-3 Before Record 31,234 Crowd

By Hugh S. Fullerton
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

If they even come close to the drawing power indicated by their opening-day crowds, the Jersey Giants should fulfil the fondest hopes of the International Baseball League bosses for a financially successful season.

The all-time record crowd of 31,234, which came out yesterday as the Jersey City Club took to the circuit after a three-year absence, got off to a day-late start, probably won't be equaled often if at all.

It was the product of a city-wide celebration which included halt holidays in public offices and schools and which was backed by a concerted drive to get the fans out, regardless of the cold, raw weather. Jersey City is noted as a "red hot" baseball town, however.

The brand new team was beaten in its first start, but looked promising as it battled the Rochester Red Wings for 12 innings before going down 4-3.

Brilliant fielding saved Rollie Stiles several times as he was nicked for 13 hits, including a homer by John Hopp, while Nuts Kleinke gave only eight blows and fanned 12. Ethel Crabtree's double and Wally Alston's single finally broke up the battle.

The crowd, which eclipsed both the league regular-season record of 19,315, made in Newark, and the minor league mark of 28,000 set in Milwaukee, brought the total for four openers up to 86,834 over two days.

Chiefs Downed 6-1.

Only about 2,000 chilled customers turned out at Syracuse to see the Chiefs take a 6-1 licking from Buffalo Bisons in their opener. The veteran Bill Harris limited Syracuse to seven hits and whiffed eight, while the seasons drove Frank Pearce to the rather welcome retreat of a hot shower with five hits for as many runs in the sixth.

Newark Bears and Toronto Leafs continued to head the parade as each flung up its second victory. Buddy Rosar batted the Bears to a 7-6 decision over Montreal Royals by belting two homers, each with Joe Gordon on base. Alley Dessau, rookie flinger, weakened toward the finish and finally went out in the eighth after giving three runs.

Toronto Wins in 9th

Toronto smashed over three runs in the ninth to beat Baltimore 8-5 after the Orioles had tied the count with a five run "punch" in the eighth.

The batting qualities which marked the youthful Toronto squad's play in spring games were very much in evidence yesterday as the Leafs saw an early 5-to-0 lead lurched into a 5-5 tie in the eighth inning, and then retaliated with a ninth-inning rally to finish on top.

Pattison pitched almost perfect ball for seven innings, after clouting a home run with two mates aboard in the second frame. The Orioles couldn't solve his delivery for a base hit until the seventh when Pucciarelli singled through the box. He tired in the eighth, and the Flock manufactured five runs on three singles and homers by Powers and Wright.

John Berly worked through the ninth, and after Smokey Joe Martin homered over the left-field fence Berly got the next three men in order.

The Leafs pounced on Gordon (Dusty) Rhodes, ex-Philadelphia Athletic, for two runs in the first inning and three in the second. Bobby Porter and Pattison drove in all five runs between them. Porter doubled to centre scoring Cantenbein and Mayo Smith, while Pattison's homer came with Ross on third and Heath on first.

Rhodes settled down after that and matched Pattison's fine work. He was lifted for a pinch-hitter in the eighth and the Hawkeyites made short work of his successors, there being three in all.

Battle of Wits.

Managers Dan Howley and Guy Sturdy engaged in a battle of strategy in the late inning, and Howling Dan emerged with first-class honors. Sturdy made the first move when he appointed Savino to bat for Rhodes in the eighth. Savino struck out, and the veteran right-hand hurler could bother the Leafs no more.

In the first of the ninth, after Rose beat out a hit down the third base line and Heath had walked, at the expense of Lohrman, Howley sent George Blackerby in to hit for Pattison, and Blackerby came through with a long two-bagger to centre, scoring what proved to be the winning runs. Sturdy replaced Lohrman with Matuzak as Madura stepped up to the plate, but Frankie doubled off Martin's chest, scoring Blackerby to end Toronto scoring. Joey Berly, after Martin's homer, struck out Gray, got pinch-hitter Remorenko on a ground-ball to Madura, and Schalk on a foul pop fly to Heath.

The Birds used three pitchers in the ninth. Lohrman retired one man of the four he faced, and Matuzak pitched only to Madura. Petitt finished the inning with no further trouble.

GABLE'S ACCUSER IS FOUND GUILTY

Winnipeg Woman Convicted Of Mail Fraud In Claiming Actor Father Of Her Child

LOS ANGELES, April 24—(UP)—Vivien Norton, plump, middle-aged Englishwoman, who insisted Clark Gable was the father of her 13-year-old daughter, was convicted in Federal Court late yesterday on one count of mail fraud. She was acquitted on a second count of conspiracy.

An all-male jury returned the verdict after deliberating exactly two hours.

It found her guilty of the charge of misusing the mails in an attempt to obtain money from the famous movie lover by false paternity claims. The count was based upon letters she wrote to Gable and others, asserting he abandoned her with a baby in Billericay, Essex, England, in 1922. The star categorically denied the charge, establishing that he was in Oregon at the time and had never been outside the United States.

A gold armlet believed to be 1,000 years old was found at Selsey, England.

BIRTH.

BROWN—To Warden and Mrs. Roy Brown at Nichols Hospital on Thursday, April 22nd, a daughter.

IN MEMORIAM

THOMPSON—In loving memory of Mrs. Alex Thompson, who died April 24, 1935.
To her this verse I dedicate,
To one so humble and so great.—
Who far surpasses every other—
And that, my dear friends was our mother.
—Ever remembered by her Family

IN MEMORIAM

CALDER — In loving memory of Mary Calder who passed away April 25, 1936
Gone from us but leaving memories
Death can never take away
Memories that will always linger
While upon this earth we stay.
Ever remembered by a Sister and Brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. N. Pogue.

IN MEMORIAM

CALDER — In loving memory of Mary Calder, who departed this life, April 25, 1936.
A precious one from us has gone
A voice we loved is stilled
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.
God in his wisdom has recalled
The boon his love had given
And though the body slumbers here
The soul is safe in Heaven.
Sadly missed by loving Husband.
We who loved you sadly miss you)
As it dawns another year
In our lonely hours of thinking
Thoughts of you are always near.
Ever remembered by Son and Daughter-in-law.

BABY CHICKS.

According to Official Egg and Poultry Market Report of April 16th, Eggs are likely to be scarce from September to January, due to marketing of Yearling Layers this Spring and reduced purchases of Baby Chicks. That means good prices and good profits, if you have Pullets in the nests.

We urge alert-minded poultrymen to take a tip from this forecast and put in a flock of Bray's "Xtra-Profit" started Pullets. These Pullets are well started and should be laying in August or early September, in time to cash in fully on high Fall prices.

We quote genuine Bray "Xtra-Profit" stock at following low prices:

NEW HAMPSHIRES,
6 weeks—30c Each.
NEW HAMPSHIRES, R.I. REDS, WHITE ROCKS,
3 weeks—$27.90 Hundred.

LEGHORNS,

Also Caponized Cockerels, 5 to 6 weeks, 25c each; Day-old Cockerels, heavy breeds, $5.00 Hundred. Day-old Chicks at low prices quoted last week.

Don't delay. Every day lost now, means a day's less eggs next Fall. Prest-O-Bray, Ltd., Simcoe and Water Streets, Telephone 3334.

THE MOUTHPIECE

READAD THIS FIRST:

Charles Stuckey, of a London law firm, reluctantly has agreed to a scheme to defraud the daughter of one of his few respectable clients, Jacqueline Smith, of an inheritance of $1,500,000 from an American uncle. In keeping with the plan, Col. Alex Lutman—who has a hold over Stuckey—Jim Asson, an ex-convict, and the lawyer are stopping at the same hotel in Cobensi with Mrs. Smith and her daughter. In dire financial straits, Mrs. Smith has persuaded Jacqueline to marry Asson, posing as a wealthy Englishman, unsuspectedly falling in with the plan of the three men to have Asson cultivate the girl, have all of her property assigned to him before their marriage, then splitting up the inheritance before she learns of it. Lutman, as Jim's "trustee", has hurried Jacqueline's decision by revealing a check he cashed for her mother returned marked "insufficient funds". After meeting Jacqueline, Stuckey is more reluctant than ever to go through with the scheme and stalls by telling them all the property deed must be signed in London. Back in London Charles leaves Lutman in his office while he goes after Jim Asson. Mrs. Smith and Jacqueline arrive at Stuckey's office to sign the deed. Jacqueline insists on a conference alone with Charles before signing the deed.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER 21

JACQUELINE held out her hand for the pen, which Charles had picked up and dipped in the ink, to sign the all-important deed. But he was hesitating, toying with it and pushing the pen viciously into his blotting pad.

"It is all right, Charles, isn't it?"

The solicitor waved the pen aside, rose from his chair and began pacing the room.

"Oh, yes, it's all right. Legally, I mean. Once you have signed it, you have only to get married to Jim Asson and you and your mother are legally entitled to the money."

"Then, if it's all right," smiled Jacqueline, "why spoil a perfectly good pen by sticking it into your blotting paper? Why don't you want me to sign? You don't, do you?"

Charles shrugged.

"I suppose I have no right to say anything," he said. "I am only your solicitor."

"Only?"

"What I mean is," said Charles, "it's not my business to butt into your private affairs, and if you love Jim Asson—but you don't. You've told me you don't. And it seems all wrong somehow."

"That I should marry him? I have explained all that to you, Charles. I'm marrying Jim Asson because I can't stand any more of the sort of life I have been leading: checks coming back from London, always living in fear of someone coming up to you in the street and making a scene about a bill that hasn't been paid, sneaking out of hotels without paying our bill. We've done that lots of times. You know that, don't you?"

Charles nodded.

"Goodness knows what would have happened to us more than once if you hadn't advanced mother money; she would have been in jail long ago. It's all that sort of thing I'm going to get free of. I wonder if you can understand, Charles, what it means to me to realize that I shall be living in a house where the rent is paid, and where there are no beastly people hanging about outside to pounce on me when I go out."

"Yes, you've had a rotten time," Charles admitted. "All the same, you know, it doesn't do to rush at things. Of course, I have no right to interfere, and if you think it's worth it...."

"Worth it? My dear Charles, it's worth murder to get out of all that. I had better sign, hadn't I?"

"Right-o," said Charles, seating himself at his desk. "All the same, Jacqueline, I wish you loved him."

A hint of a smile touched the girl's lips.

"Is that true?"

"Yes, of course it's true. Naturally it's true. If you're going to marry him. Oh, I don't know...," he broke off suddenly. "What I mean is, there's no need to be in such a hurry over it. Why not wait a bit until you know Jim Asson better?"

"Wait? Tell that to mothers creditors, Charles. And do you really think I might fall in love with Jim Asson if I got to know him better?" She shook her head. "I have a funny kind of feeling, Charles, that if I did get to know him very well I might not marry him at all. I don't know why; it's just a feeling I've got. Ever since I promised to marry him I have tried not to know him any better than I do. But as I am going to marry him, the sooner it's over the better. It's all fixed up for next Wednesday, you know. Colonel Lutman's going to be the best man, and mother's going to give me away. I like that give, Charles, don't you?"

"Why next Wednesday? Why this awful rush?"

"I left it all to mother and the Colonel to arrange," she told him, "and they both seemed anxious to fix it up as soon as possible." She was thoughtful for a moment, frowning at the window; and then she turned to Charles again. "I wonder," she said, "where Colonel Lutman comes into all this. Of course, I know he's Jim's trustee, but he seems dreadfully anxious to get me tied up to Jim as quickly as possible, and I can't imagine why. He gets nothing out of it, does he?"

Charles' eyes avoided hers. He dipped the pen in the ink again and held it out to her.

"If you really thing it's worth it, you'd better sign."

She took the pen and glanced at him searchingly.

"Can you give me any real reason, Charles, why I shouldn't sign?"

He shrugged his shoulders.

"Only that you don't love Jim Asson."

"No other reason at all?"

Charles shook his head.

"We need a witness. I'll call Bells," he said, and rang the bell on his desk.

A few moments later Jacqueline had written her name between the two crosses at the foot of the document and Mr. Bells, having duly witnessed her signature, returned to his desk in the other room.

She tossed the pen onto the desk.

"There we are, Charles," she said, and picked up her bag and gloves and gave him her hand. "Goodby, Mouthpiece," she said, and, since Charles seemed to have nothing to say in reply, she walked from the office.

Stuckey crossed to the desk, picked up the document, glanced at it, and sighed as he placed it in the safe and locked the door. Then, returning to the window, he continued to stare through the grimy pane.

It was Lutman's voice that roused him from his reverie.

"Well, Charles, did she sign all right?"

The solicitor did not glance round.

"Aren't you supposed to be taking Mrs. Smith to lunch, Lutman?"

"I've sent Jim on with her and I'm joining them. I couldn't enjoy my lunch, Charles, with anxiety gnawing at my vitals. And I'm a little anxious about Jacqueline. She shows signs of becoming intractable. Did she sign?"

"Yes."

Lutman smiled.

"I congratulate you, Charles. All her awkward questions skilfully and convincingly answered, eh? All her doubts set at rest, all her sublime faith in the integrity of Charles Stuckey crystallised into a signature! So all is now plain sailing, and on Wednesday next the marriage will be solemnised."

"Perhaps," said Charles.

Lutman's bland smile disappeared and he stared searchingly at Charles as he stood gazing out of the window.

"What exactly does 'perhaps' mean?" he asked.

"Just that you mustn't be too sure that the wedding will take place on Wednesday."

"But if the document is signed?"

"It is," said Charles. "But unfortunately, Lutman, Jacqueline signed it in the wrong place."

The Colonel stared.

"Hadn't you better explain?"

Charles turned toward him with a shrug.

"Simply that the girl made a mistake and signed in the wrong place. It means preparing a fresh document for her to sign. If the deed is to be signed before the marriage, the marriage may have to be postponed."

Lutman's eyes narrowed.

"I see," he said softly. "So that's the game, is it, Charles? Where's the deed?"

"It's in my safe."

"Let me see it."

Charles shook his head.

"Nobody sees it."

"All things considered, Charles, is that quite reasonable?"

"Reasonable or not, you're not seeing it."

Lutman strode to the safe, tried the door, found that it was locked and swung round on Charles.

"Listen, Charles," he said, with a steely ring in his voice, "you're going to open this safe and show me that deed."

"I'm showing the deed to no one."

Bedtime Story

By HOWARD R. GARIS

UNCLE WIGGILY BEANS BOBBIE

"Caught! That's what I am, caught!" whispered Uncle Wiggily to himself. The old rabbit gentleman, who wasn't as jolly now as usual was hiding in an elderberry bush so Bobbie, the Bob Cat, wouldn't see him.

Mr. Longears had with him a bag of beans he had bought for Nurse Jane to bake.

"But if Bobbie doesn't run away soon, so I can hop safely out, I won't have much use for the beans, baked or otherwise," thought poor Uncle Wiggily. "Oh," he thought, "if I only had a bean blower!"

He remembered what Mrs. Purr had asked him, when he bought the beans, if he was going to blow them through a long, hollow tin as some of the animal boys were going this time of year.

"No," said Uncle Wiggily. "I'm not going to do that. I have no bean blower." Now, as he looked at the wailing Bob Cat with his silly little tail no larger than a baby's thumb, Mr. Longears wished very much for a blower with which to beam Bobbie.

A Good Reason

"Perhaps he isn't waiting for me" thought Uncle Wiggily after a while. "Maybe I'm mistaken and Bobbie is just waiting there for his tail to grow longer. In that case he'll soon go away and I can hop out and take the beans to Nurse Jane."

But just then along came the Fox with his big dusting-brush tail.

"Hello, Bobbie!" yapped the Fox. "Why are you waiting here?"

"To catch Uncle Wiggily," mewed Bobbie.

"Do you know where he is?" asked the Fox.

"No," mewed Bobbie. "But he's sure to hop along sooner or later, and if I wait here I'll catch him."

"Oh, oh!" thought Uncle Wiggily. "That settles it! Bobbie is waiting for me. He doesn't know, and the Fox doesn't know, that I am hiding in this elderberry bush. But as soon as I start to hop out, even if I do it behind their backs, they'll be sure to hear me or smell me or see me and then I'm a gonneri Yes, sir, I'm a gonner."

Uncle Wiggily twinkled his pink nose. That always helped him to think better. Then he had an idea. Looking at the elderberry bush gave it to him. As a boy rabbit, Uncle Wiggily used to make bean blowers out of elderberry bush stalks. They are hollow after the sort, inside pith is pushed out.

"Ha! Now I can make a bean blower!" whispered Uncle Wiggily. He waited until the wind blew, rattling the elderberry bush. It was getting ready to blossom and have berries on a little later.

Makes His Own

The wind made so much noise neither the Bob Cat nor the Fox heard Uncle Wiggily break off an elderberry bush stalk and push out the pith with a slender stick. Soon he had a long tube like a tin bean blower the animal boys used.

"And now," chuckled Mr. Longears, "to beam Bobbie." He put a bean in the hollow stalk, aimed it at Bobbie's tail and puffed hard.

"Bang!" the bean hit the Bob Cat.

"Ouch!" howled the Bad Chap. "Stop it!"

"Who stop what?" gasped the Fox.

"Stop hitting my tail!" mewed Bobbie. Just then Uncle Wiggily beaned him again, this time on the head. "Wow!" howled Bobbie. "Stop it, Foxie!"

"I'm not doing anything!" howled the Fox. Then Uncle Wiggily beaned him and the Fox thought it was done by the Bob Cat. So the Fox bit Bobbie and Bobbie scratched the Fox and soon the two Bad Chaps were fighting so hard that Uncle Wiggily could then safely out of the elderberry bush without being seen by them and go home, which he did.

And if the fountain pen doesn't squirt red ink on the cornstarch pudding and pretend it's strawberry ice cream, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and Jingle's tangles.

Five Fish-Game Overseers Appointed Tweed District

Stationed At Napanee Falls, Moira And Trent Rivers, Tweed And Madoc

SCARCITY OF PICKEREL

(Examiner Correspondence)

TWEED, April 24—For the protection of game fish and more particularly pickerel, during the spawning season, five seasonal game and fish overseers have been appointed by Game and Fishery Department of the Ontario Government for the purpose of protecting the pickerel in local waters, Inspector Herb McCabe announced. special overseers have been appointed and stationed in the vicinity of Napanee Falls, Moira River (Belleville, Trent River, Tweed and Madoc.

Due to the scarcity of pickerel in this district the department is endeavouring to protect these game fish throughout the spawning season and the department has issued strict orders that observances for the protection of pickerel must be kept and offenders will be severely dealt with, warned Inspector McCabe, as he added, that no extention for the trapping of muskrat had been made by the department this year, owing to the scarcity of that fur-bearing animal in this district.

There has been considerable controversy throughout the district regarding the questions of spearing and grappling for fish at this particular time of the year. It is unlawful to spear any game fish at any time, but of course fish such as suckers, mullets, carp, dog-fish, eels may be speared from sunrise to sunset. It is unlawful to grapple or gaff fish at any time, however, explained the inspector, as he added that an angler could gaff a fish only after it had been caught on a rod and line, the gaffing being done solely for the purpose of landing the fish.

Transient Arrested.

George English, of no known address was arrested by Constable Clare Hayes on a charge of vagrancy. He was taken to the county jail at Belleville, where he will await trial. Complaints had been made to Constable Hayes from a number of farmer's wives in the district that they had been annoyed by his demands for food for some days past.

No Fruit Trees Killed.

No actual winter killing of fruit trees in Hastings or adjoining counties has been noted this season according to the latest report from the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Wheat fields in Hastings are showing distinct signs of recovery and it is hoped that the crop may come through better than usual. Wheat and rye have wintered fairly well in Prince Edward County, but slight losses of grain may be experienced in the County of Frontenac.

Suspected of Housebreak.

Ronald Steeves, who gave his home as somewhere in the Province of New Brunswick, was taken into custody by Chief Constable Hayes on a charge of vagrancy and is being held pending further investigations. It is alleged that he tried to break into and enter a residence in Tweed. When arrested, he was on the property in question.

Small Muskrat Catch

The catch of muskrats this year will be only about twenty-five percent of that of previous seasons, according to Tom Beatty, local fur buyer. Trappers are disappointed that the season was not extended as representations were made to the government. The small number of rats produced this year is attributed to the mild weather of the past winter and the fact that the animals after leaving their winter quarters were unable to return owing to high water and subsequent freeze-ups. Many rats were frozen out and died of starvation this year, Mr. Beatty stated.

Plan Geological Survey

The Federal Department of Mines is planning a geological survey of the Madoc-Marmora district during the coming summer. Representations recently made to the Hon. T. A. Crerar, Minister of Mines, were referred to the Geology Branch, with the results that the chief geologist is recommending in his program of field operations, a continuation of the work previously undertaken in that area.

Wolves At Schooner Lake

Messrs. George and Clarence Tooley of Plevna, saw three wolves in the vicinity of Schooner lake recently but were unable to kill them as they were armed only with a .22 calibre rifle.

The Tooleys were running a trap line and had stopped at an old hunting camp on Round Schooner lake to make tea. The wolves were seen by Clarence when they passed near the camp, and the boys fired several shots at the animals, wounding one, but not badly enough to capture it. They found that the wolves had been chasing a deer on practically glare ice. Because they had left their truck on another lake on account of bad ice they were unable to track the wolves down.

The government of Columbia has opened a veterinary supply house at Bogota.

That agreement was signed last February 11 and will operate till August 11, after which it may be modified or terminated if either party wishes.

The document drawn up in the Premier's office was signed by General Motors officials and representatives of the employees who signed "on behalf of themselves and their successors in office representing the employees of the company who are members of the local Union."

H. J. Carmichael, vice-president and general manager, and J. H. Righfield, plant manager, signed for the company. C. H. Millard, who is president of the Oshawa Local 222 of the U.A.W.A.; George H. Day, chairman of the negotiating committee, and E. Blades, committee member, signed for the workers.

Both parties to the dispute expressed satisfaction when negotiations were completed. Premier Hepburn thanked the strikers and citizens of Oshawa for their "splendid co-operation," and said "the true Canadian spirit asserted itself in the final analysis."

Greater Share of Profits.

With the return of prosperity, said Mr. Hepburn, his Government would aid in bringing to labor its an "orderly and constructive way" a greater share of increasing profits of industry.

Mr. Carmichael declared his company has never opposed organization by its employees, and is always willing to negotiate with representatives of any group.

Main points of the settlement provide: 44-hour week made up of four nine-hour days and an eight-hour day on Friday; wages of 55 cents an hour or less increased seven cents; more than 55 cents, increased five cents; present scale ranges from 56 to 94 cents); no discrimination by either side for past or future trade union activity; no intimidation of employees by either side; five-minute rest periods twice a day; system of handling grievances and a detailed arrangement to govern seniority.

STRONG OBJECTION

on the medical officer of health," declared Ald. McIntyre.

Mayor Macdonald retorted vigorously that it was nothing of the kind.

"Many times Dr. Fraser has come to this board," he declared "and told us that the sanitary inspector could not give the kind of reports that were necessary and we did nothing about it. If there is a reflection on anybody it is on the Board of Health and not on the Medical Officer of Health."

Ald. Dutton agreed with the Mayor. "I am ready to take my share of the blame," he said. "We have been tolerating conditions that we cannot tolerate any longer. They will have to be cleaned up even if we have to bring in outsiders."

"Dr. Phair of the Ontario Department recommended Mr. White," Chairman Ald. Stocker reminded the committee.

In reply to Ald. McIntyre's statement that the Medical Officer of Health should have cleared up the conditions complained of in the report Dr. Fraser pointed out that he was not a veterinary. He knew nothing about cows and while he could go into a barn and make sure whether or not it was clean he could not be expected to know whether cows had Bang's disease or similar ailments.

Supposed to Supervise

"I am supposed to supervise the Sanitary Inspector and not to do his work," he remarked. "If you expect me to do that you do not need a medical officer of health; what you want is another sanitary inspector."

Ald McIntyre said there was a man in Peterborough trained to do the work but it was pointed out that the individual in question would only give part-time service.

With the remark of Mayor Macdonald that if it had been possible to secure a properly qualified local man he would favor that course the discussion was allowed to subside.

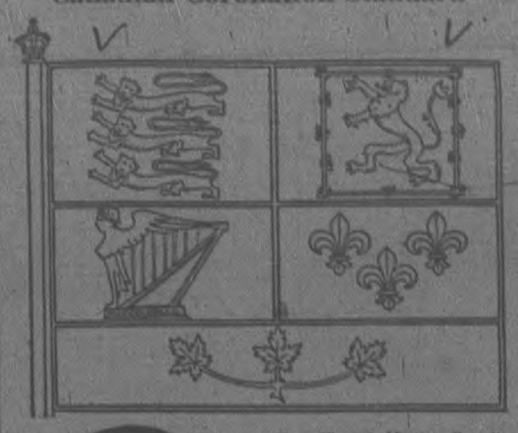
Canadian Coronation Standard



According to a list of appointments made public by the Earl Marshal, the Duke of Norfolk, Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner (left), will carry the standard of the Dominion of Canada at the Coronation. The flag to be carried by Mr. Massey will be a standard depicting the arms of Canada granted by royal proclamation November 21, 1921. In the upper left-hand corner will appear the three English lions and in the upper right-hand corner the Scottish lion. In the lower left-hand corner will be the Irish harp and in the lower right-hand corner three fleur-de-lis. Across the bottom will be a large sprig of three maple leaves. The English lions will be gold on a red background; the Scottish lion red on gold background; the Irish harp gold on blue facing; the fleur-de-lis gold on blue background and the maple leaves green on a silver background. The flag will have a narrow fringe worked in red and gold while a royal crown will appear on the staff.

OSHAWA MEN SMILE AGAIN

the strikers was concerned mostly with the increases in pay and the shorter hours.

Wealthy If—

They joked with each other about what they would do with the extra day when the five-day week came into operation and spoke lightly of how wealthy they would be under the new wage terms if only the plant would operate the year round.

R. S. McLaughlin, president of General Motors of Canada and a well known figure in horse racing circles, seemed as happy about the outcome as the strikers.

He said he was "glad" his "boys and girls" had decided to return to work, and spoke of his "grievous disappointment" when he learned of the strike in Bermuda. He returned to Oshawa just as the dispute was settled.

"They must have been promised the moon," he said. "We have tried always to be generous in our relations with our employees."

A secondary matter that occupied the attention of some of the workers all day was the re-opening of the beer parlors and the liquor store. Mayor Alexander Hall said yesterday he would ask the authorities to re-open them as soon as possible. They were closed on union request when the strike opened.

No Rush For Beer.

During the strike thirsty workers had been forced to drive to Whitby, four miles away, for their ale. But it was surprising how few of them took the trouble. The Whitby hotel reported a slight increase in business, but there was no great rush to the nearest refreshment station.

Another indication of the order the strikers kept all through the strike was the report of Police Chief Owen Friend. There was not a single arrest during the 16 days. A transient was placed under technical arrest when he requested it, but there was not a police court case arising from the strike.

The "crime-free" record was the longest in the municipality's history, the Chief said.

OBITUARY

MRS. ELIZABETH HAY.

CAMPBELLFORD, April 24. — Early Wednesday evening death claimed one of Campbellford's most respected residents, Mrs. Elizabeth Hay, widow of the late Dr. G. A. Hay at the family residence Booth street. Born in Seymour township nearly 78 years ago, she was the only daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Locke. Although her early life was centred around Burnbrae where she was a member of the church choir and missionary society while the late Rev. Dr. Neill was pastor, it was shortly after becoming the wife of the late Dr. Hay that they moved to Campbellford where she was an ardent member of St. Andrew's church being one of the oldest members of the Missionary Society of which she was a life member and honorary president for many years. Her life was marked by an instinctive ability to make sacrifices for others willingly and her religious zeal by no means impaired her love for her home in which her many friends were always welcome. Although she took no active part in community affairs she always maintained and followed them with keen interest. Predeceased by her husband who died December 26th, 1930 she has been confined to her home for the past six months where she bore her sufferings with patience and true Christian spirit, surviving her are one son Lewis and three daughters Mabel, Lillian and Winnifred and two brothers, William Locke and John Locke, both of Seymour.

The funeral was conducted from her late residence on Friday afternoon by the Rev. R. Simpson Black who was assisted by Rev. Harold B. Neale after which interment was at Mount Pleasant cemetery. The pallbearers were Messrs John S. Wallace, John Locke, Thomas Locke, Dr. O. C. Watson, R. A. Connor and George Ironside. Messrs Alex. McColl, Douglas Locke, Jesse Locke, F. M. Locke, John Steele, Gerald West, J. M. Ferris, Henry Locke, J. F. R. Douglas, and Norman Brown were flower bearers.

The pair pleaded guilty and were released on suspended sentence with orders to report to Chief Carey of the town police once a week.

SOWING RECORD

Thomas Haynes of Castleton district believes that he has established a record for this cold spring which will be hard to equal in this section of the province at least.

On April 16, Mr. Haynes sowed a field with oats. In most sections of Central Ontario north of the lake, farmers are just beginning to work their land. Situated some distance back from the Lake Ontario front, Mr. Haynes believes that he can lay claim to a record for early planting.

FATHER DUFFY MEMORIAL

Much interest has centred in the town of Cobourg in the erection on Times Square, New York City, of a memorial to the late Rev. Francis P. Duffy, who was born in Cobourg sixty-six years ago, and whose illustrious career in the work of his parish in New York City and as an U.S. war-time chaplain has been followed with a great amount of interest by his friends in this district. Father Duffy died when the impression was approaching the stage of a national calamity and circumstances since rendered the program of the movement.

have," he said "all that happens is that the sanitary inspector tacks up a placard in front of the house and then tears it away from there as fast as he can go."

Dr. Fraser said that his only interest in the matter was the interest of the community: it meap nothing to him personally.

"Have we the authority to make an appointment," Mayor Macdonald asked.

City Clerk Armstrong replied that he was not sure that the Board had such power. The salary of such a nurse had been provided for in the estimates which had been passed by the council, he said.

The Board decided to consult the city solicitor before taking any further steps in the matter.

ILLEGAL TRAPPING CHARGE DISMISSED

Marcus Post Acquitted Of Setting Trap Near Muskrat House In Cobourg Court

Magistrate Campbell, on Thursday at Cobourg, dismissed a charge against Marcus Post for having trapped within five feet of a muskrat house. Game and Fishery Inspector Minaker prosecuted and the Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C. of Peterborough, defended. Magistrate Campbell found that the prosecution had not proved its case.

Gordon Post, a young boy of Cobourg, pleaded guilty and was fined $10 and $2.50 costs for having a trap within five feet of a push-up which is a small muskrat house. The boy claimed there were no muskrats in the house and it was not against the law, but it is against the law to put a trap within five feet of a muskrat house or push-up house, whether the muskrat house or push-up has been inhabited by muskrats or not. He was defended by Mr. Gordon.

Russell McKee, a nephew of James Humphries of Asphodel Township said he had never trapped in his life and did not own any traps, but Inspector Minaker said he saw him about 300 yards away manipulating a trap. The case was adjourned to Peterborough for trial on April 29 Mr. Gordon defended and Mr. Minaker prosecuted.

COUNTY COUNCIL LIKELY TO LOSE

the township councils, but they would no longer have seats in the county council.

If that is the effect of the new amendment in this county, the membership of the county council would be reduced from eighteen to fifteen.

In United Counties

From this unofficial interpretation of the Act, it is likely that other townships in the district will lose their second representatives in county councils.

In Northumberland and Durham for instance the township electors in 1935 were shown to have the following number of electors, including wives, sons and daughters: Brighton, 1,853; Cavan, 3,010; Clarke, 2,743; Cramahe, 1,069; Darlington, 3,881; Haldimand, 2,715; Hamilton, 2,666; Hope, 2,000; Manvers, 2,366; Mariposa, 2,582; Percy, 2,432; Seymour, 2,408.

The reeve of a neighboring municipality expressed the opinion that more than half the number of electors under the recent basis of qualification were wives, sons and daughters. In that case Cramahe and Brighton townships would lose their deputy seats in the counties council; Cavan and Manvers appear to be doubtful, and some of the other townships may also be reduced to one representative.

Information from heads of some municipalities who were interviewed was sketchy, mainly because the amendment has not become generally known.

COLLEGIATE JOTTINGS

AUTOGRAPH ADDICTS

It was autograph week at P.C.V.I. this week for on Monday the annual "Echoes" went on sale. Annually the student body sets out on a mad career to fill the blank autograph pages at the back of the volume with the signatures of fellow students, and the excitement this year equalled anything of the past.

When they got time to examine their copies they found Editor Hugh Davidson and his staff had done an excellent job. From the front cover, done in a Coronation color scheme of red and blue on gold, through to the back cover, the issue was replete with material of high quality and interest. On the title page they read the inscription, "This volume is dedicated to loyal students throughout the Empire with the wish that their manhood may be devoted to the interests of freedom, humanity and peace in the world."

Outstanding in the "Purple Patches" section this year—the literary department of the magazine. Most of the material, both poetry and prose, was obtained through prize contests from classes throughout the school, and surprising is the standard of quality maintained.

Departments devoted to athletics, photography, cadets, alumni, form news and humour are all well done. An improvement over previous editions was effected in the use of more illustrative material than in the past.

Eleven hundred copies of the handsome volume were printed by the Peterborough Printing Company. All were promptly snapped up by subscribing students and parents.

Editor Davidson's student staff included the following: Hilda Thompson, Margaret Smart, Peter Deeks, Dorothy Moscrop, Marion McAdams and Donald Perks, assistant editors; Ronald Dick, John Pratten, Jean Platt, Glen Allen, Isabel Wray, Jim Morrow, Lenore Lewis, Jean Flett, Edna Bedard and Dora Glover, departmental editors; Wilda Saunders and Gordon Johnston, circulation; Alfred Dawson, advertising and Peggy Bassett, typing.

OFFICERS TO LINDSAY

Some officers of the P. C. V. S. Cadet Corps journeyed to Lindsay Thursday afternoon in all their military splendor to attend the Lindsay Collegiate Officers' mess. Those who made the trip were John McMillan, William Wheeler, Ralph Haserman.

Drilling continued this week on Friday and Thursday. Thursday the corps was driven into the Armouries for their manoeuvres by the rain.

EARLY ENTERTAINMENT

The officers held their own first mess of the year Friday evening in the school gymnasium.

Tuesday morning, Ruth Fisher and Anna MacLeod favoured the student body with a violin duet entitled "Chant Religieux."

INSPECTOR VISITS

R. H. Wallace, school inspector from the Department of Education, has been giving P.C.V.S. the "once over" this week. Mr. Wallace staged many surprise visits to the various classrooms during the week.

Lenore Lewis did as a vocal solo the well known "Desert Song" with Merrill Smith as accompanist.

ODDS AND ENDS

John McMillan was given a royal welcome on Thursday when he appeared for classes dressed in his cadet uniform. Some of the boys of his class stood up when he entered the room and gave him a salute. Was his face red and did the girls steal sly glances in his direction?

Bill King, defenceman on the juvenile hockey team, presented coach Jack Patterson with a gift from the members of the team Wednesday morning on the auditorium platform. It was for his splendid work in guiding the boys to a championship in the South East Hockey League. During the early part of the week when the weather was fair physical training classes were held outside. Instead of the regular routine, the boys played ball and by the way some played it appeared they should have gone South for spring training.

BUSMEN GRAB ON CORONATION TO PLAN STRIKE

British Government Steps In Seeking Truce To Avert Major Tie-Up

CROWDS PACK CITY

No Spectacular Fake Says Union Head Demanding 7 1-2-Hour Day

By I. Norman Smith
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

LONDON, April 26. —(CP)— The almost fantastic thought London might be crippled by a bus strike on Coronation Day was foremost in the minds of 10,000,000 people here today.

The Ministry of Labor, intervening in the dispute between busmen and the London Passenger Transport Board, was to hold a meeting with both parties at 4.15 p.m. this afternoon.

Yet the tone of Metropolitan newspapers indicated real fear the threatened strike would take place May 1. The 40,000 men were adamant in their decision not to accept the board's offer to submit to arbitration their demand for a 7½-hour day nor would they agree to a month's truce to carry the threatened crisis over the Coronation period.

The press generally conceded that busmen work under strenuous pressure in the maelstrom of London traffic, but deplored their refusal to submit the question to arbitration.

A Serious Blow.

The Times said that if the bus employees carry out their threat "they can do serious injury to the people of London at a time quite deliberately chosen."

The strike would begin at midnight at the end of April, therefore placing the city in its grip on the Saturday cup final day at Wembley May 1.

The Manchester Guardian referred to the Transport Board's assertion that shorter hours would cost £3,000,000 a year for busmen alone and if extended to trams and trolleys £7,500,000.

A Generous Offer.

The Telegraph found the arbitration offer of Lord Ashfield, chairman of the Transport Board, to be generous and said it deprived the busmen of public sympathy they would otherwise hold.

A driver's salary averages £4 18s. ($23.17) weekly.

A conductor earns seven shillings less than the drivers.

The Telegraph contended that salary was adequate and that to increase costs it would be necessary to increase fares to a point to which the public was not inclined to follow—"and the public would not forgive what must appear as wanton disorganization of London traffic at a time of industrial activity and national rejoicing."

Diplomat's Daughter Shot In Her Auto

VIENNA, April 26.—(CP-Havas).—Police investigating the highway slaying of Ingrid Wiengreen, daughter of Gustavo Wiengreen, Paraguayan minister here, to-day worked on two theories—that the crime was either one of passion or politics.

Authorities turned for information to Hans Sternader 38 year old author of a dozen romances dealing with occult sciences. Miss Wiengreen was motoring from Vienna to visit Sternader at Gugginits when she was fatally wounded by three revolver bullets, evidently by someone riding with her.

Like Sternader, Miss Weingreen was interested in psychic research and is said to have organized spiritualistic seances.

OSHAWA PLANT REOPENS

Martin Charges Ontario Misunderstood Strikes In U.S.—"Holy Crusades"

OSHAWA, Ont., April 26 (CP)—General Motors employees, their 18-day strike ended, answered the call of the giant motor plant's whistles early today and trooped back to their benches. Eighteen days ago—at 7.01 a.m., April 8—3,700 went on strike for higher wages, better working conditions and union recognition. An agreement signed Friday ended the dispute.

Settlement brought peace to this industrial city, 35 miles east of Toronto, and ended one of the most bitter disputes in Ontario's history: a dispute that split the Ontario cabinet with resignation of two senior ministers. David Croll quit his labor post and Arthur Roebuck gave up the attorney-general's office because they disagreed with Premier Hepburn's policy in handling the strike.

Recognition of the International Automobile Workers of America, which forms part of John L. Lewis' vast committee for Industrial Organization in the United States, was the stumbling block in all negotiations previous to the final conference in Premier Hepburn's office. It was at this meeting terms were drawn which the strikers on Friday found acceptable and which were signed on their behalf and by company representatives that same day.

Ratchet Still Active

Even as the happy ending was being written by men and women returning to their jobs, however, there remained a suggestion that the hatchet had not been completely buried. Hugh Thompson, C.I.O. organizer who played a leading role in the strike, told a mass meeting of General Motors employees Saturday night to "watch June 11."

Thompson reminded the workers notice of termination of the agreement could be exercised June 11, the same date as in the agreement between General Motors Corporation and its United States employees. He suggested the final showdown had merely been delayed till then.

"We will have our day June 11," Thompson said. "It is only 45 days and we will sit down as the U.A.W.A. and General Motors of Canada will be represented by General Motors Corporation. They're still going to say the international union had nothing to do with the Canadian agreement and they will say this not to protect Hepburn but to make a dope out of him."

Martin is Hailed.

Homer Martin, president of the International Union, also spoke and the Union leaders were greeted enthusiastically by the meeting. The workers continued their celebration from Friday night through Saturday, hailing as a victory the agreement which gave them most of their demands.

They gained seniority rights, a 44-hour week, pay boosts of seven cents an hour for some and five cents for others, time and a half

FOUR FREIGHTERS GROUND IN LAKES WEEK-END STORM

Half-Dozen Others Are Hung Up In Shipping Lanes, Fog-Bound

EXPECT MORE BLOWS

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., April 26.—(AP).— Storm warnings were posted again to-day on the Great Lakes where four freighters are in distress because of last week's high winds, fog, rain and snow.

A light wind blew early to-day along the northern coast of the lower peninsula, rain fell and a fog hung over the ship lanes.

The coast guard watch at Bois Blanc station reported conditions improved, but still full of potential menace to shipping. "Pretty calm this morning, but it might kick up at any time," was the report at this point. "Half dozen boats blowing out there now in the fog," the watchman said. "When you can't see it's bad."

These freighters are in difficulty at the following points:

The Griffin, lumber carrier, aground since Sunday on Major Shoal, about seven miles west of Mackinac Island. Tug Arkansas and coast guard surf boat standing by; believed not seriously damaged. Owned by Jones Navigation Co., of Buffalo, a 280-footer.

The W. H. McClean, ore carrier, aground off Lighthouse Point, Bois Blanc, since last Wednesday. The tug Favorite, the Iowa, a lighter and coast guard surf boat standing by May be dislodged to-day. One of Hutchinson fleet. Crew of 40.

The William B. Pilkey, aground since Saturday off Port Washington, Wis., in Lake Michigan. Rammed sand bar in heavy fog. Fresh seas Sunday prevented attempt to lighter cargo. Owned by Columbia Steamship Lines Coast guardsmen standing by.

The William R. Linn, another ore carrier, possibly ready to proceed downbound into Lake Erie today, after being beached off Detour last week during heavy storm. Temporary repairs made after 2,400 tons of ore were removed. Pumps going to take care of seepage.

Vanishing Of 17 Newly Installed Snubbers Likely To Stir Woodstock Probe

ONLY THREE LEFT

WOODSTOCK, Ont., April 26 (CP)—Because one hand (of local government) knew not what the other hand was doing, at least regarding a score of hitching posts put in for farmers' use last year, the 20 have dwindled to three and nothing can be done about it.

The agricultural committee of the Chamber of Commerce placed 20 hitching posts on a vacant lot for farmers coming to town. Their gradual disappearance was made the subject of police study.

The mistreant turned out to be a north-side resident who objected to such use of the vacant lot. He had been given permission to remove the posts by a member of City Council.

The whole matter may be considered by the council.

Match Ends In Draw As Truce Declared

MANY friends of the two combatants gathered in the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium Saturday evening to see Charles Shaw, Board of Education member and Friday Night Supper Club chairman, go to grips on the wrestling mat with Don Ross, supper club member. It was all in fun and the audience had as much fun as the contestants. Don Ross appeared with a rugby helmet and football pads and Chairman Shaw appeared in fine trim in standard gym togs. After picturesque introductions, the two went to it. Many anecdotes manoeuvres and holds were demonstrated and at the end of six minutes a truce was called. The match was declared a draw.

Relief Committee Attacked For Reducing The Voucher

Secretary Of Federation Of Unemployed Addresses Meeting

ALDERMEN ASSAILED

Action of the Peterborough relief committee in cutting relief vouchers and removing single relief recipients from relief rolls was vigorously attacked by George Harris, national secretary of the Ontario Federation of Unemployed in an address here Sunday.

Opening an attack on Alderman James Dutton, whose committee recently announced a five per cent cut in relief vouchers, he read a newspaper account which quoted Alderman Dutton as saying relief recipients were not trying to find work and that positions were being found by outside workers coming into the city. "Can Mr. Dutton show to the unemployed where they can get work?" he asked. "Until such time as he can, a man in his position had better keep quiet. We are sick and tired of abuse like this."

Moral Degenerates

Turning to Alderman McIntyre, he said he went even further. "He tries to paint the people of Peterborough who are on relief as moral degenerates." Reading from another newspaper clipping, he said Alderman McIntyre had asserted some men on relief were living with women not their wives, some women with men

Hunt Hospital Site In Southwest Area

TORONTO, April 26 (CP)—Officials from the Provincial Architects branch are visiting southwestern Ontario this week for the purpose of selecting a site for the new Ontario mental hospital which the Hepburn government plans to build in this part of the province.

Premier Hepburn said last night on his return from St. Thomas, where he spent the week-end, that the oft-mooted Port Stanley site is still under consideration, but that no definite choice of location had yet been made.

"There are any number of excellent sites from which we can pick," he declared. "We will be in a position to announce our choice before very long."

London will have 1,000 trolley buses working by January 1, 1938.

Lad Stoned Dead, Long Hair Resented

Lyons, France, April 25. (AP)

EIGHT-year-old Paul Gignoux was stoned to death by his playmates because they did not like his long hair, police said yesterday.

Authorities rounded up fifteen small boys and girls, all under ten years old, some under six. The children battered Paul's skull with rocks, police said. His mother had refused to cut his hair.

BAT MAN KILLED AS 30,000 WATCH

Two Parachutes Fail To Open During Dive At Paris Exhibition

PARIS, April 26 (CP-Havas) — Clem Sohn, American parachutist, famous for his mile-high glides supported in the air by only canvas webbing between his arms and body, plunged to his death before a crowd of 30,000 at the suburban airfield of Vincennes yesterday.

Descending in his usual loops, glides and barrel rolls from a height of 6,500 feet—in what was to have been the culminating stunt of the day—Sohn jerked the rip cords of his two parachutes at about 1,300 feet.

Both parachutes failed to open and Sohn dived for the earth. There was an instant of stunned silence as his body hit the earth, then an agonized scream from 30,000 throats.

Sohn's stunt more nearly typified the ancient ideal of flying man than any other. It was his custom to descend in a long series of graceful swoops and spirals, his course marked by a powdery trail of flour discharged from bags he carried. He was known here as the "flour man" and the "bat man."

At the time of his death Sohn had to his credit more than 350 dives, none of which had been marked by accident. He was born in Fowler, Michigan, 36 years ago.

Chain-Letter Hoax Sends 100 Guests To Apartment As New Bride Suicides

New York, April 26. (AP)—

THE simple label of "coincidence" was placed by police today upon the suicide of a 23-year-old actress and the gathering of about 100 party-bound "mystery guests" in the lobby of her Park Avenue apartment house while she was inhaling gas.

The actress was Mrs. Helen Rim Mont, one-month bride of James Mont, fashionable interior decorator. Police closed the case, which at first appeared to have elements of a mystery thriller, with the assertion the phantom party and the suicide were unconnected.

The party guests assembled in the lobby as the result of a chain-letter hoax perpetrated by bored Park Avenue flunkers, police indicated. The invitations were sent out merely naming the Park Avenue address, and not Mrs. Mont's apartment, and no "guests" were found who knew Mrs. Mont.

COSTLY ELECTION LOOMS IN ALBERTA ABERHART WARNS

Only Way To Avoid It Is To Instruct Representatives To Back Gov't

SOCIAL CREDIT SOLUTION

CALGARY, April 26.—(CP)—The Alberta people had a warning from Premier Aberhart today that unless they make known to their elected representatives their support or lack of confidence in his government they "will probably have to pay for an election."

"The people will have to decide," Mr. Aberhart declared yesterday at the Calgary Prophetic Bible Institute.

"I don't want an election. It would cost you a lot of money. You must instruct your representatives either to support the present government or cross the floor of the House and call for the resignation of the government."

He urged the people "If I am not the proper person in office," to declare lack of confidence.

"Tell your representatives. If you do not, then you will probably have to pay for an election."

His reiterated his belief Social Credit was the only remedy for solution of present day economic problems and charged an attempt was being made to break the "Mass of the people" of Alberta into sections.

Farmer Plans To Officiate At His Own Funeral Services

Has Coffin And Grave Ready With The Pall-Bearers Paid $5 Each

TIPS IN HIS "SERMON"

DANVILLE, Ind., April 26 (AP)—Wade Millman, grizzled 68-year-old farmer, who says his fun in life has been "making money," announced today he would conduct his funeral service next Sunday afternoon, May 1, at the Canaan Rural Church near here.

"I'll preach the sermon myself," he said, "but it won't be a sermon, and I won't preach. I'm just going to talk, and I will have things to say that may teach you something."

Millman's casket, built from an oak tree on his farm, is ready. Charles Monnett, woodworker at Coatesville, put the finishing touches on it last week.

"I don't want any preacher or singing at my funeral," the old farmer explained, "so I decided I would take care of the taking myself and get it over with.

"I have selected six pallbearers and paid each one of them $5. I want them to put me in the coffin, and I don't want an undertaker. Then I want them to place me in a farm wagon and haul me down there where I have a stone erected at my grave."

Baritone's High G Shatters Wine Glass

London, April 23.

JOHN Lovering, Welsh baritone, stands alone among most singers. He has broken a wineglass with his voice.

It was at a banquet that Lovering first realized his strange power. He sang a high G loudly—and a wineglass at a distant table was shattered by the vibrations of his voice.

"Only two singers have ever done this before," Lovering said. "They were Caruso and Folie, the Irish tenor, who adopted an Italian name."

C.N. Fireman Killed In Washout Wreck Many Lines Unsafe

Worst Floods In Years Hit Woodstock, London, Stratford, Chatham, Hamilton

INDUSTRIES CRIPPLED

Power Plants Crippled, Highways Covered With Rivers Rising

WOODSTOCK, Ont., April 26 (CP)—An eastbound Canadian National passenger train was reported derailed at Beachville, four miles west of Woodstock this afternoon.

The fireman was reported killed and the engineer pinned in the engine, critically injured. An emergency wrecking crew from nearby worked desperately to release him.

No other injured were reported although the train, the Intercity Limited running from Chicago to Montreal, was carrying a considerable number of passengers. They were given a severe shaking up but none was hurt. The baggageman was severely jolted but was able to walk to the quarry close by for assistance for the engine crew.

The accident occurred when the train hit a washout in the embankment which at that point is 10 or 12 feet high. For some strange reason, the engine did not overturn, but dropped upright to the lower level. None of the coaches overturned.

Trains Re-routed

Trains were re-routed through Galt to Paris and over Canadian National Railways tracks to London. Workmen attempted to save the signal box from being washed away.

Throughout western Ontario rain-flooded rivers overflowed their banks and threatened property damage. Levels of the Avon, Nith and Thames rose above their banks while the muddy waters of the Grand River threatened to flood nearby property as the rain continued.

Worst flood conditions were reported from the Stratford district in the wake of a steady downpour since early Sunday. The Avon River flowed over its banks, crashed over bridges, flooded parks and threatened high property damage.

Six inches of water poured over the bridge at the Huron street dam at Stratford. Cellars of homes were flooded seven inches in some cases.

Woodstock Hard Hit.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., April 26.—(CP).—With damage unestimated, floods surrounded this city last night and rising swiftly to-day, swamped industries, homes and lowlying ground on three sides of the city, inundating parts of crossing No. 36 highway within the city limits, making traffic impossible except for large trucks.

Traffic was blocked on Dundas street west and several cars were

TWO NOVA SCOTIA WALKOUTS TIE UP 1,400 WORKMEN

Coal Company And Clay Plant Affected—Pictou Coalfields Unsettled

HIGHER WAGES THE KEY

HALIFAX, April 26 (CP).—Nova Scotia's labor front presented a troubled aspect today with two walkouts affecting a total of 1,400 men scheduled and an unsettled situation in the Pictou County coalfields.

The major walkout was at the Dominion Coal Company's No. 12 colliery in New Waterford. Thirty-four Bankhead employees decided last night to tie up the mine by not turning up for work today. The decision affects 1,300 miners.

The Bankhead men claimed coal output at the mine had increased considerably during the last few years but no extra help had been given them. The company met their demand they be placed on contract rates but stipulated the proposed rates should not exceed the highest at present paid. The decision to tie up the mine followed.

At New Glasgow 200 employees of the Standard clay plant walked out in protest against a sign posted an hour before they were due to quit Saturday, stating the plant would be closed indefinitely. The company's action came after disagreement over a wage increase demand.

DR. SAMUEL GENEST PASSES IN OTTAWA

Noted Educationist Led 18-Year Fight Against Ban On French In Schools

OTTAWA, April 26.—(CP).—Dr. Samuel McCallum Genest, noted Ottawa educationist and central figure in the notorious 18-year fight against regulation 17, restricting the teaching of French in Ontario bilingual schools, will be buried tomorrow in Aylmer, Que., nine miles southwest of Ottawa.

Chairman of the Ottawa Separate School Board for 18 years and a member for 25 years prior to his retirement a few years ago Dr. Genest, who died yesterday, was a champion of rights of French-speaking people in the matter of education.

His victorious fight—culminating in 1927—against the regulation of which he was chief antagonist, was the climax of a colorful career. He led school strikes, fought the authority of a special commission right to the Privy Council and defeated it, defied court orders, and was threatened with jail—all for a principle, the right of French-Canadian school children to be educated in their mother tongue.

Started Fight in 1913.

He entered the field of education in 1909 when he was elected to the Separate School Board. Three years later Regulation 17 came into existence. Dr. Genest told the Ontario Education Department it would be ignored in French schools. The Department replied in that event taxes could not be collected nor could teachers be kept in employment.

Regulation 17 was passed covering these and other points had practically

STOCK SHIPMENTS TO BE REGULATED IN FEDERAL PLAN

Plan Marketing Service To End Glut And Shortage At Yards

TRUCKERS MAIN SNAG

OTTAWA, April 26 (CP)—Methods to steady the flow of livestock from Canadian farms to stock yards will be one of the immediate problems of the reorganised marketing services of the Department of Agriculture. The civil service commission will decide within the next few days who shall be selected for the posts arising out of the reorganisation.

To successfully compete in export markets and give farmers maximum returns the movement of livestock should be only equal to the demand. Last week's rush of cattle to the Toronto stock yards resulting in a heavy carry over, is the kind of wasteful operations the new services working in co-operation with the provincial governments will seek to avoid, said officials of the agricultural department.

Department officials will keep constantly informed of the demands to be made on the market to supply shipments for the United States, Great Britain and the Canadian domestic requirements. They will seek through providing the producers with this information to steady the flow and avoid gluts on the one hand and scarcity of supplies on the other.

The great number of cattle transported to the stock yards by trucks is an uncertain factor in the present situation, officials state. Last week the supplies brought in at Toronto exceeded expectations.

Shippers are so well informed the arrivals each day by rail and trucks regularly engaged. In these operations can be closely estimated as against the probable demands. What upsets the situation, officials state, is when truck owners usually engaged in moving other commodities suddenly begin scurrying about the country seeking contracts to move livestock. The result is an unexpected splurge in the number of arrivals at the yards and a consequent loss in carry-overs.

SUSPECT ARSON IN LINDSAY FIRE

Victoria Co-operative Firm's Premises Destroyed—Loss $5,000

LINDSAY, April 26.—Fire of unknown origin completely destroyed the premises of the Victoria County Co-operative Company on King street last night, the blaze along a 195-foot front at times threatening the factory of the Northern Casket Company, the plant of the Waddell Coal and Lumber Company and near-by residences.

A strong wind carried blazing embers through the air for a distance of three blocks and many citizens were out with garden hose protecting their properties.

The Co-operative plant, used as a grist mill, feed and storage warehouse, grain, seed, etc., has been idle for some weeks. The loss to the building is estimated at $5,000.

Travelers arrived in Rio de Janeiro with an ape 12 feet in height and said they had captured it in the State of Goyaz, where it spread terror by its roars, its attacks on cattle and footprints 21 inches long.

A visit to a coal mine means a visit underground

COAL mines are not as a rule pleasant places to visit; yet men work in them for long and tedious hours. Therefore they are pleasant enough to draw King George VI on inspection tours. Britain's collieries have been made better places in which to labor in recent years, despite the depression's cloud which settled like a pall on the coal and iron industries, but they still can hardly be regarded as places for a royal reception. But today we picture not only the King, whose interest in industrial welfare is comparatively well known, but also her majesty during a visit to the Glamis pit of the Kibblesworth coal mine at Durham some years ago.

Their majesties were not content with inspecting the company offices and the pithead; they wanted to go underground. So donning miner's garb, while the Queen draped the shawl of a real Lancashire lass over her head, down they went. Mine officials, of course, were on hand to explain the various processes, but the King and Queen, with George the Duke of York then, of course), seized a miner's pick and went to work on the "face." He wanted to feel what it was like, toiling down there in the bowels of the earth at a job which has been a great factor in Britain's industrial progress.

The action is typical of the man. No official report or carefully prepared description can give as good a picture of the worker's life, his problems and his labor, as being actually in touch with the job, and the healthy curiosity of the King in industrial and business matters is not satiated with words.

Without ostentation or fanfare, a vast parade of the empire's business, industrial and economic life has come under his keen vision. Much of is he knows personally. His early training in mechanics has not been forgotten; his studies at Cambridge after the war were directed specifically to the economic problems of the country and particularly to the relation of industry and labor. He drove a train in New Zealand and a tram in Glasgow and in shipyard, textile mill, steel factory, iron foundry, packing plant and food factory he has studied at first hand the problems of the nation.

And his interest throughout has been less with the product and the profit than with the employer and the employee. England's workers can feel that they have an intimate friend in the present holder of the sceptre.

500 WINDSOR G.M. EMPLOYEES START BACK TO BENCHES

Return To Higher Wages, Shorter Hours, Union Recognition Result of Oshawa Strike

RATES TO BE SETTLED

WINDSOR, Ont., April 26 (C.P.). —Lunch pails in their hand and smiles on their faces, approximately 500 General Motors employees here walked into work to-day for the first time since the plant was shut down a few hours after the Oshawa General Motors strike began more than two weeks ago. They went back to higher wages, shorter working hours, and recognition of their union—the United Automobile Workers of America.

An agreement, accepted by the workers, was signed on Saturday between company and local U.A.W.A. union representatives. With the exception of three minor changes it is identical to the text of the agreement signed on Friday which sent 3,700 Oshawa workers back to their jobs to-day.

Most vital change was addition of the five words "and of suitable basic rates" to the clause providing for negotiation on the question of a suitable minimum wage. Under wages in the original agreement for Oshawa the Windsor clause now reads: "The question of a suitable minimum wage and of suitable basic rates to be later discussed and negotiated by shop committee and management."

Because of this clause it is understood union representatives will seek increases of the basic wage for various classes of workers, especially semi-skilled workers. Wage increases in the agreement apply only to day workers and not piece-workers in the production line whose wages are generally in the higher brackets. Chief financial benefits from the agreement is for employees in the lower brackets.

Start Negotiations.

Negotiations mentioned in the clause will be carried on here this week between a shop committee of the Windsor U.A.W.U. and representatives of General Motors of Canada, Limited. It was reported J. L. Cohen, Toronto lawyer, who helped negotiate the agreement, told a closed meeting of G.M. workers on Saturday that May 3 was the deadline for deciding on "suitable basic rates" in the Windsor plant.

The Windsor plants was closed because its production of auto parts and supplies could not be used by the strike-torn Oshawa factory. With settlement of the Oshawa dispute, possibility of a strike nearer here unless a satisfactory agreement could be reached. A conference was called on Saturday with Louis Fine, chief conciliation officer of the Ontario Department of Labor, presiding over discussion between G. M. and Windsor union officials.

After three hours of arguing and snag-striking, an agreement was drawn up, subject to approval of the workers. At a meeting a short time later approximately 350 men roared approval of the agreement after its terms had been explained by Colvin

BASQUE'S BILBAO DEFENCE TOTTERS, DURANGO CUT-OFF

Franco Issues Protest To Britain As 2 More Food Ships Run Blockade

OBJECTS TO WARSHIPS

HENDAYE, Franco-Spanish Frontier, April 26.—(AP)— Advancing insurgent legions of Gen. Francisco Franco started a new march to-day toward Bilbao after smashing a wide breach in Basque defence lines on the northern front.

Insurgent troops occupied Verria, vital communication centre four miles north-east of Durango key city to the besieged Basque capital, a communique from insurgent headquarters at Salamanca reported.

Government railroad lines were severed by the loss of Verria, and Durango was cut off from the Eibar sector a short distance east. "The Basques are in headlong flight," said the insurgent communique.

Dispatches from the Basque capital denied insurgent claims of advances on the front south and east of Bilbao.

Not only did a government communique declare that "there is no new enemy attack," but the Basque defence council announced the defenders of Eibar were taking new positions to prevent the encirclement of that manufacturing centre.

The Bilbao government announced two more British food ships, the Thurston and the Stemo reached the city while two others, the Jenny and the Oak Grove, reached Santander to relieve food shortages in the two Biscayan cities.

Five ships have thus far passed insurgent warships outside Bilbao harbor.

Franco's administration in Salamanca broadcast a statement that a protest had been lodged with the British ambassador to Spain against the part British warships played in enabling food ships to enter Bilbao. The Ambassador has headquarters in Hendaye.

(British war vessels have protected the nation's shipping as far as the three-mile limit off the Spanish coast. British merchant ships then have proceeded at their own risk in Spanish water).

RUSSO PLAN FULFILLED

Second Five-year Plan Completed Far Ahead of Schedule.

MOSCOW, Apr. 26 (AP)—Russia's second five-year plan, the government asserted to-day, has been fulfilled far ahead of schedule.

It was to end at the close of this year when a third five-year plan is to be started. An official announcement said, however, industry equalled its goals of producing goods worth 80,400,000,000 rubles by April 1 and that the railway program was surpassed Jan. 1.

Mr. Picobac's Advice to Anglers

"I WANT you to put a piece in the paper where everybody will see it," said Mr. Picobac to his friend, Herb Smith, editor of the Essex Centre Gazette and County Advertiser (circulation guaranteed). "It'll save me a lot of time writing letters in answer to correspondents."

"Sure," said Herb, feeling for the pencil behind his ear.

"It's poetry," confessed Mr. Picobac, handing it over.

The editor read it aloud:

"Angler's Calendar for April"

"Give your good trout rod a coat of shellac,
"Glue up the ferrules if any be slack;
"Test all your tapers, silk, linen or cotton,
"Cut off the ends of all such as be rotten;
"Take last summer's leaders now frazzled and worn,
"All moth-eaten trout flies, tattered and torn,
"Make one last cast with them—throw them away,
"Stock up with new stuff for Trout Opening Day."

SALT LAKE CITY, April 26 (A. P.). — Great Salt Lake, so briny that even ocean bacteria die in its wash, is perhaps the purest swimming hole on earth.

Foreign bacteria simply can not survive the lake's bitter saltiness, agreed three former Utah scientists reporting in the Journal of Bacteriology to-day.

Even the native germs are "runts" of the microscopic world—and very few in number.

The findings were published by Claude E. Zobell, D. Quentin Anderson, and W. Whitney Smith.

BIBLE SOCIETY ELECTS OFFICERS

George A. Gillespie Is Elected President Of Peterborough Branch

G. A. Gillespie was chosen president of the Peterborough committee of the Bible Society as members held their annual meeting at the Y.M.C.A. Sunday afternoon. He succeeds R. N. Stuart to the post.

Executive members named to serve this year were William S. Hill, first vice-president; J. R. Morrison, second vice-president; G. H. Roper, secretary-treasurer, and R. N. Stuart and A. S. Zavitz, additional members of the executive committee. H. B. Cowan, Mr. Zavitz and T. H. Boddy were named to the publicity committee.

Plans for a city-wide canvass on behalf of the society were discussed. It was announced that the ladies of the city churches will again undertake the canvass with each church group taking responsibility for a certain section of the city. The ladies are to meet at the Y.M.C.A. this evening to complete their organization under the guidance of Rev. Mr. Bamfield of Toronto.

Members expressed the hope the canvassers would be given an encouraging reception here as an aid to the great international work of the society in publishing and distributing the Bible in over 700 different tongues. Each canvasser will bear official credentials authorizing her to accept contributions, it was said.

Bruce Dawson Elected Head Presbyterial Young People

Young People of United Church Hold Convention In St. Andrew's

CHALLENGING MESSAGES

"Christian youth building a new world, through enrichment of life," was the inspiring theme of the Peterborough Young People's Union spring convention held in an all-day session at St. Andrew's United Church on Saturday.

The morning session opened with registration of delegates and a short business period was held with Bruce Dawson, the president, in the chair.

The service of worship was conducted by St. Andrew's Y.P.U. and was followed by gracious words of welcome from the pastor of the convention church, Rev. Dr. C. V. McLean.

A meeting of the nominating committee, including the president, Esther Thornton, Fred Barnard, Rev. M. C. Parr and district representatives, was part of the morning's activities, when various vacancies on the executive were filled. Malcolm Latimer, Recreation, Esther Thornton; Publications, Anna Franks; Dramatics, Charles Huffman; Girls' Work, Bertha Elmhirst; Boys' Work, Don. Charlton.

In a splendid address, the guest speaker, Rev. Kenneth Beaton of Toronto chose as his subject, "Enrichment of Life Through Missions," speaking particularly of "The unanswered prayers of Jesus."

"Give us this day our daily bread" was the first unanswered prayer—an age-old problem not yet solved by Christians. After two thousand years there are still half a million on relief in Canada, and twenty million, or more, in China and India, who never know what it is to have enough to eat. Yet today, we have the mechanical technique and the transportation facilities to answer this prayer of Jesus. Nothing, however, but the spirit of Jesus is adequate to solve this problem.

"Too many people are apt to say, "Oh, nothing can be done about it." Only our missionaries are attempting the task at all. It is the privilege and responsibility of every Christian to see that this prayer is answered. The prayer, "Thy kingdom come," is still unanswered. Something should be done about the unequal distribution of wealth. Competition must give way to co-operation. The third prayer of Jesus was that "All may be one"—that all may believe. Economically and geographically, we are more closely united than ever before, but more alien spiritually. One of the greatest things youth can do is to make one personal dynamic friendship with a person of another race.

Election of Officers.

The election of officers was the next item of business with the nominating committee reporting the following slate of officers:

Hon. president, Rev. A. S. Cleland; Past president, Homer Borland; President, Bruce Dawson. Secretary, Betty O'Brian. Treasurer, Walter Thorne. Convenors: Christian Fellowship, Ruth Dawson; Missionary, R. Kitchen; Citizenship, Vance Wilson; Culture, Bob Spence; Recreation, Esther Thornton; Assistant, Loretta McDougall; Leadership Training, Rev. Clarence Ferguson; Publications, Anna Franks; Girls' Work, Vera Squire; Boys' York, Don Charlton. District Chairmen: Centre, Charles Huffman; North, Helen Burgess; West, Phyllis Kidd; East, George Armstrong. Advisory Committee: Constance Wagar, Fred Barnard.

Recreation Hour.

Under the direction of Rev. G. T. Kelly Lakefield, a stirring recreation hour was enjoyed, when delegates gleaned a number of new ideas for their respective societies.

During the afternoon, a delightful musical number was contributed by the Lakefield Y.P.

At six-thirty the delegates gathered in the gaily decorated banquet hall for the fellowship banquet, with Bruce Dawson again presiding. After partaking of the delicious viands, the delegates were honored with a message from the president of the Bay of Quinte Conference, Homer Borland, who spoke briefly on "Self Surrender," urging the necessity in the building of a new world. He also brought greetings from the conference to the Peterborough Presbytery Y.P.U.

At eight o'clock the delegates assembled in the church auditorium, where they were led in worship by the Bethany Y.P.U., who took for their theme "Gas Through Nature."

An event of annual interest was the presentation of the attendance banner to the union having the largest aggregation of members present. This year the coveted banner was again won by Springville Y.P. with George Street Union a close second.

The installation of officers was an impressive ceremony, as conducted by Rev. A. S. Cleland, chairman of Peterborough Presbytery, who stressed the responsibility and privilege of holding office in such a society. He also urged the co-operation of the lay members and their support to their new executive staff.

Challenging Message.

After a musical selection by members of the Fairview Y.P.U., a challenging message on "Enrichment of life through the church" was brought to the young people by Rev. D. M. Smith of Baltimore. This very fine address was divided into three main parts, "Why the church?" "What does it mean to you?", "What of the future?"

Jesus did not forsake the temple. If He found church attendance necessary, how much more ought we. The church is a bulwark against selfishness, militarism and nationalism! Those who are making a contribution to the church are the builders and their criticism is constructive rather than destructive. Christians who do not take their vows seriously are not an asset to the church. The Christian life demands sacrifice, there is no room in the church for parasites. It is necessary for us today to sweep out a great deal of dead wood from our churches. It is the right of every man to have one day in seven in which to feed his soul with spiritual food. We are too prone to make excuses for our absence from church and to worship God through the radio or nature. In concluding, the speaker made a strong plea for Sabbath observance and painted a hopeful picture of the church of the future.

The worship period which followed closed another successful Y. P. U. convention of inspiration for the Peterborough Presbytery.

Just Between Us Women

A Daily Chat With Examiner Neighbors. Conducted by Roberta.

THE sun will rise upon some fair sweet day.
And all the little birds be on the wing;
But I'll have found I can no longer stay
To see the sun, nor hear them as they sing.

My earth-bound spirit seems to hold me back,
My loved ones suffer as they see me go;
And yet I must set out upon that track
Which must be trod by either friend or foe.

—ROBERTA.

Dear Friends:

Once more I have broken out into poetry, (a sure sign of Spring) and here it is in part, so do tell me if you like it. But it is hard for anyone of us to think that the world will go on some day, and we not be a part of it, that other hands will do the work we do now, other people live in our homes, and use the bits of things we have to make a home.

Yet some day that must happen, and it is all in the way you look at it whether you go on in fear and trembling, or whether we go forward glad in a measure it is all going to be wound up, and a larger fuller life stretch in front of us.

We love the earth, 'tis all we know of life;
We know not of the land beyond the skies;
Our earthly eyes see mostly pain and strife,
But He is there, our Saviour kind and wise.

And why shouldn't we love the earth? God has given us a fair domain, but He does not want us to think that this is the be-all and end-all of it. And sometimes if we think with longing of that "better land" who can blame us?

And there is not one of us who will not have someone waiting for us to come to them, and maybe they have thought the waiting was long. Yet how often we go along with our eyes cast down, and never let them lift to the glory that "never was on land or sea."

Sometimes a weariness of the flesh comes over us, an utter "fed-up" feeling, when everything seems to go anyway but the right way, when small irritations pile up, and there seems nothing but futile arguments to fill our days, and it sweeps over us how little the pleasure is for all the pain. We get sick of the struggle of listening to other people's woes and having them listen to ours. (And in my work I must do a lot of listening.) Everything seems tasteless and not worth all the effort we are putting into it. We think, what does it matter if I work as hard as I do or if the meal is on time, or if I did do the best with the too small income, what is it GETTING me?

And then is a good time to let your thoughts rove out to the world we are all heading for, and think of all the things you will do when you get there and occupy one of the "many mansions" our Lord told us about.

No more worry. Won't that be grand? No more troubled nights wondering what the erring one is doing, and if you had done all you could do. No more aching heart, nor loneliness nor humiliation, nor pinching pennies, nor altogether too much work. We will have leisure then for some of the lovely things we want to do, no one will misunderstand us, for we "shall know as we are known."

No more fighting temptation, which we all must do, for we shall be done with these things forever. And yet it seems hard in a way to have to leave it all, and go as it were, a stranger in a strange land, yet if we keep in touch with our Father, we shall not need to feel strange at all.

"And so I go, have mercy Lord, I pray,
Forgive the sins of this poor wayward soul;
Have pity on me as I wend my way,
Towards that shadow land, our Heavenly goal."

Not very good poetry, but it tells you how I feel today, and maybe some day when you feel the same way, you will know that I am weary, weary. However, there is always tomorrow, so cheerio.

Your friend,
ROBERTA.

ESCAPED THRICE FROM THE HANDS OF FIERCE TRIBES

Jubilee Missionary Rally Brought To Successful Conclusion

$1,085 PROMISED

It was a large congregation that met Sunday night in Bethany Tabernacle to hear the stirring messages of the closing meeting of the Jubilee Missionary Rally. Mr. Sauve of West Africa told a thrilling story, how God had three times delivered him from death when the desert dwellers, among whom he ministers the gospel, made attempts on his life. Twice they attempted to poison him and once they were ready to slay him with the sword. He said, when encircled by cruel swordsmen and there was no possible way out prayer brought down a great Divine presence, and laughter, peals of laughter, awed and amazed his would-be executioners making them so afraid that they fled.

Mr. Sauve told of the great need of the work in Africa, and of the great opportunity for the Christian Church. He said that the Christian life should be characterised by reckless sacrifice, said Rev. David Mason, who made an appeal for the unstinted consecration of both young and old. Jesus died a martyr's death, should we be willing to do less? At this appeal some 25 young people under the age of thirty stood to their feet, to vow entire allegiance to their Lord and Saviour.

$1085 Pledged.

The congregation was then given the opportunity to set the missionary giving objective for coming year and pledges were received to the amount of $1085. Rev. W. McArthur, local pastor encouraged the congregation by reminding them that the missionary pledge of last year which was approximately $800 had been overpaid to the extent of $150 for the actual cash receipts for the past year had been $950. This was accomplished by the prayerful voluntary giving of God's people. The pastor stated that it was heartening to know, though the gross income was $3900, one thousand dollars or 25 percent of it had been forwarded to foreign missions.

The Alliance Missionary Society evangelizing in twenty different countries with over 500 missionaries and 1400 native workers, with a yearly budget of over a half million dollars is worthy of our hearty support said Mr. McArthur, especially when it is remembered that from the heart of heathenism over 6000 baptised believers have been gleaned for Christ by this mission through the activities of the last year.

Quite to the Point

A writer using the name "Fair Play" from Peterborough County had the following letter published in the Farmer's Advocate:

In the April 8th issue I saw two letters on the News and Views Page which present the farmers' problems correctly; I also took note of an item on the editorial page referring to a bonus paid to packing house employees. A question I would like to ask is, why the high price is so willingly paid for beer.

Two years ago farmers in this district were paid about 55 cents per hundred for milk at the cheese factory, which is around 1½ cents per quart. Last year the price was somewhat better or around 80 cents per hundred, which is about 2 cents per quart. A bottle of beer sells for 30 cents or approximately 55 cents per quart—about $22 per hundred pounds.

When people are willing to pay more for the necessities of life and do without some of the luxuries there will be a definite turn toward a lasting prosperity.

It is hardly necessary to add much comment to that letter. The writer had an idea and expressed it so clearly that there is nothing more to say.

Where the Money Goes

One Stratford gentleman who likes to indulge in research regarding his own affairs completed his income tax papers the other day, and then started doing a little more arithmetic to find out just where his money had been going through the year. He is in receipt of what might be termed a good salary, and he was trying to find out how many weeks in the year he works to pay for various outlays he had to meet. His conclusion was this:

Income tax	3 weeks
Rent	5 "
Heat	1½ "
Electric light and water	2 "
Life insurance	4 "
Sickness	2 "
Vacation	2 "
Car, plate, gas tax, insurance and gas, plus depreciation	8 "
Church and charity	2½ "
Clothing, shoes, etc.	6 "
Occasional help	1 "
Food etc.	12 "
Furniture, dishes	1 "
Total	40 "

This gentleman admitted his figures may not be exact, but he is satisfied they are approximately so. At the end of the year he said he had saved exactly ten weeks' wages, and was wondering what had become of the other two weeks earnings for which he could not account. It was rather a novel way of trying to get an adequate idea of where his money had gone. He lives well but not in an extravagant way, but finds he has put in 40 weeks of the 52 in the year working to get money to pay out before he has anything left for saving or investment. His conclusion is that a man does well if he saves one-fifth of what he makes, and believes a man on a lower salary could not save more than one-tenth.

The Stork Did It

So often there is something printed in the papers to show that the stork has arrived at a home where the house is already well filled with children that the idea may be prevalent the old bird has no sense of fitness of things and he just goes bungling about when on his business.

But there is one man in London, Ont., who can give testimony to the wisdom and nicety with which the stork times his visit.

This particular Londoner was in jail waiting for sentence as a housebreaker. Then came the hour when he was to appear in court to hear the worst. Right in there some place the stork happened along and made a nice three-point landing at his home, and the man in jail became the father of a healthy son.

It was said in court that the Crown had heard some good reports of the gentleman, and he had not previously been in trouble. So the court seemed to sense the fitness of doing something unusual and informed the father to run home and see the child, and added he would be given his freedom if he behaved in future.

So chalk up one good turn for the stork. On that one occasion his timing and thinking apparatus seemed to have worked nicely.

The Better Way

The Welfare Commissioner in Hamilton says International Harvesting Company saved the taxpayers of that city one million dollars during the years of depression by looking after their own employees. The industry loaned money to employees, looked after mortgages in a number of cases until employment had been found. The money was advanced not as a gift but a loan, and the men are expected to repay it when they are able to do so.

That is a step in the direction of something which should be more generally done. There are in this country as well as in others industries which do not provide regular employment, although some of them have adopted the policy of guaranteeing a certain amount of work in each year. That too is right and helpful. In the past, though, we have witnessed a number of industries which have peak periods of employment, and when that period passes the employees have no place to turn, and many of them have found themselves going back to the relief lists. The new plan and the better one is that such industries must look toward the day when they will be expected to make some provision for those whom they regard as regular employees but whom they cannot employ for the entire year. There is nothing much to be said for the value of an industry to a community which attracts men to that community and employs them for the busy months of the year and then is content to allow the community through its relief office to look after them until the company is prepared to again give them employment. When the worker has a feeling of security he is going to be a better workman and under such a plan there will be a sharp decrease in the amount of dissatisfaction and unrest.

A Sufficient Reason

The ease and rapidity with which strikes are brought about is going to make manufacturing in United States a more doubtful business. The latest development is at Richmond, California, where a sit-down strike started in the Ford plant. The place operates three shifts and when one shift goes off another takes its place, but none of the shifts is working.

From reports we gather there was a demand that the plant superintendent recognize the United Automobile Workers. When this was not done the superintendent was put out and told to stay out, after which officials of the local union ordered men to weld the gates leading to the plant.

Reading more of this strange situation we learn union spokesmen say the strike has not yet secured sanction of national officials, but it was expected full support would be given to action which men in the plant had taken on their own initiative. All the men have done is seize the plant, have the gates leading to it welded and put the superintendent out. There have been no formal demands made to recognized officials; there have been no negotiations regarding conditions of work or wages.

There was another case reported from Philadelphia where strikers are occupying the plant of Artcraft hosiery mill. An application was made to Judge Harry McDevitt of Common Pleas Court. The judge suggested to the lawyer for the firm that the strikers be put out of the property. The reply of the strikers was "Let them try it," and the comment of the lawyer was: "Putting them out is the old-fashioned way. It seems that nowadays we are not allowed to protect our own property." In this case 28 men took possession of the plant on a Tuesday night, and other men and women joined them afterward bringing the estimated total to 350 persons occupying and holding the plant.

The feeling that people can do as they please is not a good thing for any country to possess. It is all at cross purposes with that fine old British sentiment which obeys law because it is the law. During the strike of 1926 in England the police were armed for the first time on record, but the order was rescinded inside of an hour and all arms were turned in, and officers fought their way through that strike unarmed. In all that turmoil there was the feeling that law must be respected.

If that feeling becomes trampled upon then where are we? If it is considered quite all right to take possession of a firm's property and force it into idleness, why would it not be right enough to take possession of a man's house or a man's farm?

That defiance of law in the form of the sit-down strike has been and is today the weapon of the C.I.O. in United States, and it would be the weapon of the same organization in this country if the officials thought they would be permitted to try it. That was undoubtedly the reason which forced Premier Hepburn to the conclusion that he did not want that organization in this province.

Just Three Privates

When there is a war on the ordinary buck private in the army gets his full share of the dirt, and during the world war he did his share also in filling up the casualty list.

But he seems to amount to much less when it comes to fixing up a delegation to represent Canada at the Coronation. Numerical strength of the Canadian contingent is 250.

To break the figures up a little more in the interests of truth and statistics there are 247 officers and three privates.

We hope there will be no drill grounds where the three privates will have to go through the various formations; just at the moment we cannot understand how they can form fours or do any other such thing.

If the three privates have to salute all the officers every time they see them then the poor beggars will have their arms so worn with fatigue they would have neither strength nor vigor left in them by meal time.

Candidly the thing looks rather lopsided.

A Great Gathering

Celts defeated Aberdeen in Glasgow and won the Scottish football cup for the 15th time. The extent to which the folk in that land love their football can be appreciated when the attendance is mentioned—between 130 and 140 thousand at this one game.

It is a little difficult for us to take that all in, because we have nothing like it in this country.

Taking the census of 1931 as the working basis we find it would be necessary for the people—all of them—in a good many cities and towns to gather together in one place to make up the attendance at that football game in Glasgow. We would need the folk—all of them—from:

Peterborough	Brockville	Kingston
Oshawa	Port Hope	Lindsay
Cornwall	Belleville	Bowmanville
Campbellford	Cobourg	Masmora
Tweed	Havelock	Omemee
Lakefield	Millbrook	Whitby

And if we had all that population gathered together in one place we would have about the same number who attend a football game in Glasgow.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Thirty-six employees of General Motors voted to continue the strike. They probably wanted to stay out until the sucker-fishing season was over.

Canadians seem to be in two classes these days—those who are going to the Coronation and those who would like to go.

Premier King says he is leaving Canada with the feeling that everything will be all right when he is away. It is sporting of him to admit it.

Kansas City policeman fell on a mat during a jiu-jitsu class and broke his arm. It has always been considered unlucky in police departments everywhere for an officer to be brought on the mat.

Three things always bother a prospective car-owner especially in the larger centres—what kind of a machine to buy, how to pay for it, and where to park it.

A French film company charges that Charlie Chaplin's picture "Modern Times" was "pirated" from an earlier French production. Mr. Chaplin as usual maintains silence.

The members of Canada's penitentiary probe commission will take a trip to England to study conditions there, so from their viewpoint the investigation is already a success.

Probably to some folk the most important result of the settlement of the Oshawa strike was the fact that the beverage rooms were able to open their doors again.

Strikes are getting so common nowadays that it will soon be necessary for a gang of workers to stage one standing on their heads if they want the thing to get adequate publicity.

We expect to read in the classified columns an ad reading something like this "For sale, a number of tents in good condition. Apply Oshawa strike committee."

Better quality of braces is to be supplied to the sailors of the British navy. That sounds like good strategy for certainly a man cannot do his best fighting when he is worrying over the support of his trousers.

In Tokio street cars are only travelling at half speed as the result of a slowdown movement called by the transport workers' union. We could almost wish that Peterborough automobile drivers might be organized along similar lines.

The C.I.O. threat to invade the 300 Ontario industries which supply parts and materials to General Motors sounds like the declaration of economic war by the Lewis organization. We fancy the people of Ontario know what to do in the face of such a challenge.

POSTPONED

(By A. B. E.)

¶ My Neighbor Dougal called me in, to see if I could work with him, I answered quick his call; he planned to decorate his home, nor could he do it all alone, put paper in the wall.

¶ No chance he gave me to depart, for he was ready then to start, he had the paste all made; and he had cut the paper too, and said he knew just what to do, but I was much afraid.

¶ I've tried the thing myself before, and planned that I would do no more, I swore I never would; although I had a brush and shears, I got the paste within my ears, the job was far from good.

¶ But Dougal spoke in cheerful note, so I took off my hat and coat, we'd start the ceiling now; he had a chair on top a box, so Dougal climbs up there and talks, he rolled just like a scow.

¶ I handed paper up to him, the paste I thought was rather thin, but Dougal said 'twas right; it didn't seem to stick on soon, so Dougal said to get the broom, and I could hold it tight.

¶ But Dougal reached I think too far, he gave his box and chair a jar; he bounced upon his spine; he had a lump upon his dome, and Dougal said I best go home—he'd try some other time.

Grenfell Found People In Need

A short time ago a book was written with title "Round Passage," by Commander R. D. Graham. It describes his voyage from Poole, England, to St. John's, Newfoundland, thence north to Hamilton Inlet. Thence by way of St. John's to Bermuda. From the last named place he returned to England by way of the Azores. Commander Graham sailed single-handed until he left Bermuda for the return voyage. At Bermuda he secured a companion. He describes his vessel as a cutter-rigged yacht of seventy Thames measurement, thirty feet over all, twenty-five on the water-line, with a beam of eight feet six inches and a draught of five feet.

In his book, Commander Graham describes the coast-line of Labrador as much broken and generally fringed by a chain of rocky islands.

He says, "To some extent one is reminded of the west coast of Scotland; but in Labrador, at least in the southern part which I visited the hills are much lower and more rounded, generally rising to only 400 or 500 feet.

The country is entirely unchanged by man. There are, perhaps, 3000 permanent settlers of European extraction, mostly descendants of the Hudson's Bay Company, who remained in the country after their period of service had expired. A few hundred Eskimos live in settlements northward from Hamilton Inlet. Some scattered tribes of Indians roam the interior, coming out to the coast once a year to barter their furs.

The permanent settlers, (Liveyers as they are called, "because they live 'ere") have winter homes at the head of the bays, from which the men go some hundred miles into the interior trapping furs. In the spring the river mouths are netted for salmon and later they move to the outer coasts for the cod fishery. The Liveyeres are all desperately poor and permanently in debt to the merchants.

In former days there were no doctors, schools, nor other social services. In 1892 Dr. Grenfell (now Sir Wilfred) visited Labrador in a ship belong to the mission to the Deep-sea Fishermen. He was so shocked by the hardships under which the people lived, and by the terrible suffering caused by the lack of medical attention, that he devoted his life to remedying the conditions under which the people lived. He has largely succeeded, and the work of the International Grenfell Association is well known. I do not feel competent to give an adequate account of the mission and its work, and it would be presumption on my part to attempt to portray this great man, but walking through the wards of the hospital at St. Anthony one is very conscious of the immense amount of sheer physical suffering that Grenfell has been instrumental in relieving. Along the coast one is constantly struck by personal devotion which he has inspired among the common folk."

DANGEROUS CHANCES.

(Montreal Star)

It may not be amiss to draw attention to the latest decision of a Montreal judge affecting a damage action arising from the injury of a pedestrian by a motorist. Mr. Justice McKinnon has held that although the pedestrian concerned in this case was crossing a street between intersections, thereby breaking local traffic by-laws, this could not be pleaded as complete exhonation by the driver who struck him. Both parties to the case were, Justice McKinnon held, at fault. The pedestrian should have obeyed the law and the driver exercised greater care. Both were therefore out of pocket through their action; the pedestrian's damages were cut to one-half of what he had claimed, and the driver was required to pay because he had not proved all lack of responsibility.

This decision, if memory serves, is identical with that given by another Montreal judge some time ago. In effect it serves notice on the driver that he must at all times exercise the greatest care, not merely at intersections where he may expect to find people crossing the street—and where their right of way is definitely established by law—but at any point between them. This decision, like the previous one, does not of course relieve the pedestrian from the observance of a regulation which has been established primarily for his protection, but it does mean that the driver must not take a chance simply because the other man is doing something he should not.

SPRING ON FARMS.

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review)

Subject only to temporary checks from rain, spring work is in full swing on Oxford farms, and as there is no pasture yet for cattle it is a busy season for all hands. But crops will be in before they get well started in the north, so great is the difference in latitude and general conditions between the extremities of this large province. In reports to the Ontario department of agriculture at beginning of this week, we note that in Nipissing "it is still too early to form a definite opinion as to conditions of the meadows, as there is no growth yet. There have been some heavy frosts during the past week." East of Toronto, in Prince Edward county, "weather for the most part has been backward, with hard frosts occurring," and in Muskoka "a foot of frost in the bush," is reported. Bruce county, in the northern part of Western Ontario, reports some seeding done, and many plowing. Seeding started last week in Peel, where some growers have sown their early potatoes, a few have put in spring wheat and the odd field of oats. Lincoln county orchards are being sprayed.

Pasteurization In Brantford.

(From the Brantford Expositor.)

The City Council has under consideration a by-law which would formally and legally place Brantford along with nearly forty other progressive Ontario municipalities, in the "one hundred per cent. pasteurization" class, insofar as milk supply is concerned. This measure would entail no radical change here, because the City's milk supply has been well protected for the last five years. The point, however, is that proper legislation of this character is necessary in order to insure continuance of the policy which, in the relatively recent past, has meant the lowering of the City's infant mortality rate, the prevention of epidemics and the saving, in sickness costs, of many thousands of dollars.

Designed to prevent the distribution of unpasteurized milk in the City, while at the same time not banning certified milk, the by-law should be carried by unanimous vote of the Council. For years the vigilance of the health officials has safeguarded the community, but the actual passing of a proper pasteurization by-law has been long overdue. Moreover, the wisdom and necessity of such a regulation is clearly indicated when it is realized that the virtual one hundred per cent. pasteurization was only enforced when, five years ago, an outbreak of typhoid was traced to a local dairy handling the supposedly pure "tuberculin tested" milk. In other words, that incident and thousands of incidents like it throughout the continent prove that outside the certified milk the only safe kind is pasteurized.

When the policy of general pasteurization was first proposed there were people who regarded it as "just another medical fad." Today the wisdom of the course has been fully demonstrated as anyone may find by examining the records. Milk, considered as "the perfect food," is essential to the diet of babies and young children and adults as well. Unfortunately, milk is highly susceptible to contamination even when carefully handled and makes an easily accessible carrier for the germs of such diseases as tuberculosis, scarlet fever, diphtheria and various infantile maladies, many of which result fatally. Nor is it adequate answer for someone to say "I was brought up on unpasteurized milk and have always been healthy." Some people, naturally, survived the Plague—but thousands did not.

The epidemics of scarlet fever and diphtheria so frequently traced to contaminated milk have, fortunately enough, been rare here, but if that has been the case the citizens may thank the health authorities—and pasteurization. The record thus established must be maintained and to insure that the pasteurization by-law is necessary. Brantford cannot afford to take chances in this matter.

Why Always a Lawyer?

(From the Western Producer.)

Because his Attorney-General decided that it was a good time to take a judgeship; because no person of the usual legal and political qualifications was readily available, and because, anyway, an election is to be held in a few months, Premier Pattullo of British Columbia decided to take the portfolio himself until the dissolution. There is nothing unusual about one cabinet minister holding more than one portfolio but it appears that it is unusual, even unique, for a man who, as in the case of Mr. Pattullo, is not a member of the legal profession, to be Attorney-General and automatically a K. C. Accordingly the event has given rise to much comment.

Many years ago this paper urged that it would be desirable to have the position of Attorney-General in the provinces filled by a layman. As the practice now is, the incumbent is invariably a lawyer, though he rarely, if ever, appears in court; doubtless depends upon his expert staff for the legal work of his department and is often far from being in the front rank of his profession. An average layman of common sense would find no difficulty in filling the position. What is more—and this is the point of the matter—he would bring a non-legal mind (if that term is permissible) to the administration of the department. This, while it might not meet with the approval of those who live by the practice of law, might very well redound to the advantage of the ordinary citizen for whom laws are made and who pays the fees on which lawyers thrive.

There is nothing startling about the suggestion. Sir Samuel Hoare, for instance, now the ruler of the King's navy, is not an admiral, and the best secretary for war, in modern times—the late Lord Haldane—was a civilian whose contours would have only made him look ridiculous in a uniform. So, for a change, let us have a few laymen in the office of Attorney-General, and if the right men are picked, we make bold to prophesy that the public at least will not suffer.

Stranger Than Fiction.

(From the Ottawa Journal.)

One other evening a motor car with Montana plates was being driven near Collingwood when it was run into by an Ontario car turning upon the highway from a farmhouse driveway. The two drivers stopped, exchanged angry words as drivers will do in such circumstances. "Why don't you look where you're going?" demanded one. "Where's the fire?" retorted the other, or words to that effect. Finally they exchanged names—the two were brothers, separated for thirty-seven years! John E. Marlow of Montana was on his way to visit his brother, Claude, of Walkerton, and it was Claude who had run into him at Collingwood.

Such an incident in fiction would draw the disgusted comment that the writer was pulling the long arm of coincidence, but most people in their own lives have had knowledge of coincidences quite as strange. Coincidences quite as strange are fairly common-place, but for all that the writer must beware of them. A timely coincidence obviously is a great help in plot-construction, but the critics will not accept it as a legitimate means of escape from a quandary.

NORMAL HAZARDS.

(Guelph Mercury)

Dr. Paul B. Sears, noted United States soil conservation authority, remarked in an interview the other day, that droughts should be accepted as normal hazards of the farmer's life, just as traffic accidents are normal hazards for an insurance company. Once they are so accepted, he said, due provision can be made for them and they can be robbed of many of their terrors.

And what are these "due provisions"? Well, says Dr. Sears, strip planting in one—ribboning wheat fields with narrow strips of tough grasses which help to hold moisture and refraining from planting crops when these tests are unfavorable. Letting land lie fallow in dry years would help.

Between the thoughtless optimist who proclaims that drouths on the western plains are exceptional, and the pessimist who would close those plains of farms altogether, there is a wide middle ground.

IT IS NOT RIGHT.

(St. Catharines Standard)

Two old men have been let out of an industry at Toronto, because they were not worth the standard wage set up under the Industries Colse Act, a legacy of R. B. Bennett. These men were both willing and anxious to work at less than the standard and could have fitted in well on such an understanding. But the law was inexorable and industry paying the standard wage demands efficiency and adequate return on such standard. Hence the two old men had to walk the plank. Through no fault of their own except age, it hardly seems right.

To The Editor

THE VISION

Editor Examiner,

Sir: In earlier days the dream was not one of social wealth; it was rather a vision of the abnegation of riches, of humble possessions shared in common after the manner of the unrealized ideal of the Christian faith. One man earns as much in a week or even in a day as another does in a year. This man by hard, manual labor makes only enough to pay for humble shelter and plain food. This other, by what seems a congenial activity, fascinating as a game of chess, acquires uncounted millions. A third stands idle in the market place asking in vain for work.

A fourth lives upon rent, dozing in his chair, and neither toils nor spins. A fifth by the sheer hazard of a lucky "deal" acquires a fortune without work. A sixth, scorning to work earns nothing and gets nothing; he slips through the meshes of civilization to become a "tramp"; begs his food where he can, suns his tattered rags when it is warm and shivers when it is cold, migrating with the birds and reappearing with the flowers of spring.

This is the distinguishing mark of them who are children of our era. This is the problem of the 20th century. And when a person criticizes the injustices of the present order of society the scarecrow of communism is once again resurrected and its tattered garments dangled before the eyes of the people.

There is in the minds of the people a vision of a more just and equitable social order. The vision itself is an outcome of that divine discontent which raises man above his environment.

PROPAGANDA.

(Regina Leader-Post)

It seems as if every organization in the country is pouring information or propaganda of one kind or another into the newspaper offices. Leagues for this and that, from the League of Nations to others that are working to stop heroine playing at twilight recitals, to prevent cats from climbing down trees headfirst and to keep brunette hairs from getting into the butter, have sprung to arms.

The mining and stock brokers' offices are also pouring out their bargains in yards of neat printing while the Society for the Assistance of Worms with Fallen Arches also sends in its weekly circular. Then there are the folk who want to save the world in a big, general way and the others who put pen to paper to give advice to their neighbors.

Because of the tremendous inflow of printed material the job of editing has largely become one of seeing how fast the stuff can be heaved off. But many are failing to keep up with the job. They go out to get a cup of coffee and a bun and when they get back they are swamped again.

BLUE GINGHAM.

(C. O. McClure)

With the disappearance of the old-fashioned family we have today a disenchanting line-up of ladies at the beer bars. Ladies feeling high, roughly youged, buoyantly buzzed and entirely too come-hither.

They look at one as though to say "Whatever it is you were going to say, don't say it. We've heard it before. We know all the answers, etc." Thus develops a class that not only mentions unmentionables but shouts them. And in this we have lost something—the blushes, shyness, self-consciousness.

I am thinking of a supper given out our way among oaken water buckets with gourd dippers and grusted apple trees. I recall the fresh red faces of those bosomy matrons who served such a spell chicken dinner—flaky fried chicken and two-count cake with two thousand icing—and I'd like to trade about ten dozen girls of the beer bars for one blushing miss in blue gingham.

DR. SAMUEL GENEST PASSES IN OTTAWA

tically outlawing Genest and his colleagues of the Separate School Board. But they were adamant, they would not accept Regulation 17. The English-speaking trustees took out an injunction to prevent him and his supporters from borrowing money, hiring or paying teachers who did not obey the regulation, or using text books without authority.

It became a criminal offence for Dr. Genest, chairman of the Board to issue a cheque. At the end of the first month, he could not pay the teachers. After another month, cheques for the English-speaking teachers were presented but he refused to sign them.

Pepsodent Forms Canadian Company

Announcement by the Pepsodent Company of the incorporation of an all-Canadian company to be known as the Pepsodent Company of Canada, Limited, adds another strictly Canadian industry to the growing list of Dominion organizations with international affiliations. Pepsodent Company of Canada, Limited, has its factory located in Canada, employs Canadian labor and pays Dominion, provincial taxes—it, in fact, an integral part of the Canadian business structure.

Steadily increasing sales of Pepsodent Products—Pepsodent Tooth Paste, Pepsodent Tooth Powder and Pepsodent Antiseptic, place the new Pepsodent Canadian Company in forefront among the leading manufacturers of products of the kind. Recent discovery of a new tooth cleansing agent, Irium, which is exclusive to Pepsodent, has been a contributing factor in making Pepsodent dentifrices among the most popular in Canada.

Jail Newest "Heaven" For Divine

The clang of steel doors brought shudders to "Father Divine" self-styled "Messiah" and "God" to his several thousand colored and white followers, as he was jailed at Milford, Conn. He is wanted as a fugitive from justice, with a felonious assault charge hanging over his head, since a process-server was beaten and a friend stabbed, trying to serve him with papers in his Harlem "heaven." Milford police, acting on a tip, found him crouching in the cellar of his Milford 'kingdom" when they raided the place. Police had a slight scuffle with some of his followers there who insisted that they "can't arrest God!"

WOODSTOCK BINGO DECISION IS HELD

Magistrate To Ponder a Week Legion's Denial Game Contrary To Code

WOODSTOCK, Ont., April 26. (C P)—Judgment was reserved for one week by Magistrate McCrimmon in city police court here Saturday after hearing of a charge laid against the Woodstock branch of the Canadian Legion for the operating of a bingo game contrary to the criminal code. A plea of not guilty was presented on behalf of the Legion.

R. A. MacDougall, defence counsel argued the game had been played for charitable purposes after the prize, four pounds of butter, had been offered for sale without any bidders being found. He also presented the argument that to date it had not been proven the game was against the law and that the Ontario Government had recognized it to the extent of collecting money in the form of amusement tax from the Legion and other organizations operating bingo games.

Craig McKay, Crown Attorney said there were two views to be taken in the case, the legal one and the sympathetic or sentimental one.

Eleven newspapers from cities in various parts of Ontario were offered as defence exhibits, each newspaper containing advertisements showing that the game was being operated openly in all parts of the province. This brought the remark from Crown Attorney McKay that the exhibits only went to show that the game was widespread.

"Housebreaking and adultery are also widespread, but that doesn't make them legal," he said.

MARKETS WEAK STOCKS DECLINE

Heavy Selling Appears In Golds And Base Metals—Nickel Leads

TORONTO April 26.—(CP).—Outside influences, chiefly weakness of London, New York and other markets, sent Toronto exchange listings into another decline to-day. Scattered heavy selling appeared in the golds and base metals with International Nickel. Noranda and Hudson Bay leading the latter group downward. Nickel dropped four points and was off more than three points at the close. A moderate rally in the western oils brightened the market in the last hour.

A number of substantial losses were boarded by the leading industrials. Aluminium, Dominion and Distillers-Seagram were sold in quantity at losses of 1 to 1½ points each and fractions to points were dropped by other paper, utility and some of the steel stocks. Power Corporation and Bathurst Power 'A' were of a point to 1¼ and closing prices were down for Beauharnois B.C. Power 'A,' Montreal Power, Union Gas and United Fuel Pfd.

Heavy industrials displaying definite weakness included Canadian Car and Foundry, Pfd., Dominion Steel, Steel of Canada, Dominion Foundries and Steel and United Steel.

A few choice heavy steers sold between $8 and $8.15. Good butcher cows were from $5 to $5.50 and canners and cutters from $2.50 to $3.50. A few good light bulls brought $4.50 to $5 but trade on bulls was generally slow.

Choice fed calves were priced at $8 to $8.50 with mediums downward to $6.50. Western stockers of common to medium quality ranged from $4.25 to $5.25.

Choice veal calves moved between $9 and $9.50 with common light vealers as low as $5.

Previous close on off-truck bacon hogs was $8.85 to $9.15.

Good western lambs and some Ontario feed-lot grades, went at $11. A few sheep were from $2 to $5.50 cwt.

Spring lambs brought $9 to $9.50 each.

HUNTS BROTHER TO SHARE ESTATE

"Not Big Enough For Mansion But Enough To Attract Bill Collectors"

WINDSOR, Ont., April 26. (CP)—To share an estate "not big enough to set us up in a small mansion with two cars but not small enough to discourage every bill collector in town from baying at the door," Walter R. Boddy of Windsor has English police hunting for his long-lost brother, Reginald, Mrs. Boddy said today. Walter, a carpenter is employed in a small refrigeration manufacturing shop here.

Mrs. Boddy said her husband's father, a well-to-do contractor, died at Bayswater, England, last year and left his two sons and a daughter a "considerable" amount. Boddy has not seen his father in 30 years.

The last time Walter heard of his brother was at demobilization of the Canadian contingent in 1918. The police chief at Southend-On-Sea, an ocean-side resort, wrote here that Reginald lived there from 1928 to 1930 but no trace can be found of him since then.

STOCKS TUMBLED ONE TO FIVE POINTS

Extreme Losses Shaded Before The Close On Wall Street

NEW YORK, April 26 (AP) — Stocks tumbled 1 to 5 or more points in today's market.

Acitivity was sufficient at times to put the ticker tape behind, but volume dried up frequently and dealings were light near the final hour.

A jump in steel production to a top mark since August, 1929, with actual tonnage at a record level, was virtually ignored by the last as a whole. At the same time extreme losses were shaded in many instances before the close.

Rumors Washington was preparing to do something about the heavy gold inflow, brokers said, helped to down prices.

Transfers were about 2,000,000 shares.

Girl 5 Wants Gum Gets Fire Brigade

Davenport, Ia., April 26 (CP) — A five-year-old girl twisted a "gum machine's" lever several times as she tried to insert a penny.

Soon fire engines halted at the street corner "gum machine" where the little girl, penny clutched in her fist, told Captain Carl Wise "I can't get any gum."

Wise explained to her that gum doesn't drop out of fire alarm boxes.

stranded with their drivers in more than three feet of water.

The old section of the Oxford Fruit Co-operative Company plant was inundated and water swirled through the choked bridge near the plant on Main street, where water had reached the depth of a foot and had flooded the ground floor of the office of the Wood Mosaic Company.

Rail Lines Unsafe.

LONDON, Ont., April 26 (CP) — Rising flood waters to-day blocked the C.P.R. main line tracks on the Toronto-Detroit line with a washout about one mile east of Woodstock and blocked branch lines to St. Mary's and Port Burwell.

The C.P.R. main line was closed about 9.30 a.m., as flood waters washed rock ballast from under the tracks for about a quarter of a mile near Oakley.

C.P.R. train No. 21 from Toronto was routed to the C.N.R. at Drumbo and switched back to the C.P.R. line here, while train No. 38, Detroit to Toronto, was routed to the C.N.R. here and back to C.P.R. lines at Drumbo.

The St. Mary's branch line was blocked with more than a mile of track just south of St. Mary's under water and the St. Mary's cities flooded. Trains were operated only as far as Embro on this branch.

Avon Breaks Banks.

STRATFORD, Ont., April 26. — (CP)—Worst flood conditions Stratford has seen in years followed today in the wake of a steady downpour of rain which has lasted since early Sunday. The Avon river, breaking its banks crashed over bridges, flooded parks and threatened to do untold damage to riverside properties.

The river had risen several feet by ten o'clock and the continued downpour of rain which has lasted since early Sunday, showed no signs of abating. Many basements were flooded and the water level was still higher.

A survey of the situation showed: Six inches of water pouring over the bridge at the big dam near Huron street; water pouring into the Lions' swimming pool near the dam; cellars of homes along Douglas street flooded to the extent of seven inches; cars trapped in flooded garages along that street; the big island at the foot of Queen street completely covered and the rustic bridge leading to it from the mainland more than half submerged; the small island west of Huron street covered, just the top part of a small bench being visible above the swirling, muddy waters.

Pratt Cook, professional at the municipal golf course, to-day said the water was high over the entire course. Greater damage was anticipated at the Stratford Country Club course, where the full force of the rushing waters tore up sod and ate away bunkers and tees.

Two schools were closed because of the depth of the water in the basements.

Water about a foot and a half deep in the basement of the power station made it necessary for the power house staff to take out the street lighting transformers and move them upstairs under a temporary hookup.

Grand On Rampage.

HAMILTON, Ont., April 26 (CP). —Swollen by more than 20 hours of rain, the Grand River started today on what threatened to be one of its most extensive rampages in recent years.

From the long valley of the big stream came reports of rising waters and flooded roads. Rain was falling again today in the upper reaches and observers said the crest of the flood had not been reached.

Water was high at Paris, and cities lower down along the stream were anxiously watching the levels. At Caledonia water was rising and the North River road was under water, severing communications with York and Cayuga.

Flooding was at its worst in Cayuga, where number three highway was submerged in places. The home of Hal Johnson was surrounded by water and the family will be removed in boats later today.

12 Rescued In London

LONDON, Ont., April 26 (CP) — Nineteen persons and one dog were rescued from flooded homes on Evergreen Avenue today, while several others, imprisoned in water surrounded buildings, waited their turn on the rescue boats.

Rapidly rising water from the Thames River lapped into ground-floor rooms.

Firemen with one boat and three volunteers with another boat, went from house to house, working from the river end of Evergreen Avenue, removing the flood prisoners.

Seven adults and 12 children were taken out of houses by firemen and by volunteers. Bob Allison and Jack and Charles Taylor.

Fight to Save Dam.

INGERSOLL, Ont., April 26 (C.P.) —With grim determination this town to-day battled menacing flood waters. From all sides the waters appeared to be hurtling into the town especially from Smith's Pond, where since early this morning the bursting of the dam has been expected. Dozens of men have thrown sand bags into the weak spots of the pond's banks, and thus far the catastrophe that would follow the breaking of the dam has been averted.

Never before in Ingersoll's history have flood waters swept upon the town so suddenly and with such threatening force.

Streets in the vicinity of the Thames River are inundated. Pemberton Street, leading to National Fertilizers plant and office is covered by several feet of water. Water has found its way into different parts of the plant. Operations have ceased both at the plant and with the office staff.

RELIEF BODY IS ATTACKED

who were not their husbands. And he quoted Alderman Dutton as agreeing and claiming the problem had got beyond the mere feeding and clothing of relief recipients.

The Federation of Unemployed do not want relief but a public works program that will give work to every able-bodied man, the speaker said. Their delegates had gone before both provincial and dominion legislatures to institute such programs, which give special attention to trained workers. He denounced the way in which relief is handled in Ontario, claiming the government is shirking its duties by placing grants in the hands of communities where different scales of relief distribution are in force. "People in some communities are living under conditions a decent pig would refuse," he said.

Live Up To Promises

He cited Peterborough's relief as comparing favorably with that of other industrial centers. Expressing regret over the resignation of "Davie" Croll, he said the former minister of welfare had revealed the government intention to take over direct relief next year. He expressed doubt Premier Mitchell Hepburn will follow his plans. "We expect Mr. Hepburn to live up to the promises of his cabinet," he declared in an attack on relief cuts which he said were directly contrary to the instructions given by Hon. Mr. Croll to municipalities. "Soon we will have to fight for the primary right even to eat."

Warning that Premier Hepburn is headed for trouble if he transfers "his attack on the right of labor to organize" to the unemployed was voiced.

"Let me tell Mr. Hepburn that the Oshawa situation will be insignificant in comparison with the situation that will be on his hands when we complete our organization" he said. He claimed more than ten thousand unemployed are now organized, and another forty thousand will soon be a part of his association.

Hepburn Beaten

"He was badly beaten on the Oshawa strike, on the kidnap trials of a little while ago, and he is going to be badly beaten many more times because of his anti-worker, fascist tendencies," Mr. Harris declared. Scoring the provincial government's stand toward the worker and the unemployed he said, "The only two people we could deal with properly are gone now."

"We as an unemployed union will support the attempt of labor to form whatever union it wants," he told his audience of nearly one hundred and fifty. "Personally I support the C.I.O. because it is the most logical kind of organization."

He assured his listeners that "Hepburn's attack on labor is directed by the big mining moguls of the north who recognize a terrific strength in the working class." He said that the question of foreign agitators and dues going across the border is not the true issue. "The workers are beginning to squeeze some of the surplus profits out of the big industrial leaders," heotfered as the true issues. "And Hepburn is out-filibustering Hitler over it."

FOG, RAIN FORCES 2 PLANES DOWN

Buffalo-Pontiac Fliers Unhurt Near Port Burwell—One Ship Wrecked

PORT BURWELL, Ont., April 26 (CP).—Lost in blinding banks of heavy clouds, two Pontiac, Mich., airplanes landed in muddy fields west of here, one of them wrecked. Both pilots escaped injury.

Unable to make out the ground through the heavy rain, until his altitude had dropped to only 100 feet, Pilot Earl Hayden, also of Pontiac, rode his ship into trees, about five miles south of Aylmer, and 10 miles west of Port Burwell.

The ship generally battered, the pilot climbed out of the wreckage unhurt.

Ten miles to the north of him, Pilot Earl Hayden, also of Pontiac, brought his ship safely to the ground but left it ruined in a field without hope of moving it until the ground dries.

The pair set out together from Buffalo to Pontiac, with good weather reports. They had not travelled far in Ontario until the weather thickened and they had difficulty keeping sight of each other.

About Port Dover, they separated, and soon each was lost in layers of heavy clouds, with visibility zero. Beyond Port Burwell, Pilot developed engine trouble, and took a chance on finding a suitable field. He first saw the ground when he was on a level with the tree tops. A moment later, he crashed into a tree.

About the same time, 10 miles to the north his friend also took a chance and came down safely in a nearby field.

BELMONT BRANCH GIVES PROGRAM

'A Little Cloddhopper' Presented To Crowded Hall For Two Performances

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, April 26—Enthusiastic audiences greeted the three-act comedy-drama, "A Little Cloddhopper," by Walter Ben Hare, which was presented under the auspices of the Belmont Women's Institute on Thursday and Friday evenings of last week at the Belmont Stone Hall.

The play was a catchy, active comedy with dramatic climaxes at the end of each act. Mary Anderson playing the title role, as Judy the little cloddhopper from the poor house—a merry, trusting but mischievous little comp, turned in another splendid performance, for which she has achieved a reputation in past amateur theatricals. Fine portrayals were also given by the rest of the cast including, Mrs. Brooks, as Miss Julia Bran, a Splinterville boarding house-keeper; Mabel Keene, as Chairman Carter, who thinks she's a vamptre; Everett Martin, as Grey Gump, a fresh country product; Clifford Kennedy, as George Chiggerson, an innocent little lamb from the city; Marion Olmstead, as Mrs. Chiggerson, his doting mama, with a smooth scheme; and Noel Lade as Septimus Green, a young book agent, full of pep. The play was most efficiently directed by Noel Lade.

A dance followed the performance on Friday evening.

A Trip To United States

MRS. JOSEPH HAMILTON, LAKEFIELD

Continuing her narrative on the sights and beauties of Cleveland in the state of Ohio, U.S.A., Mrs. Joseph Hamilton of Lakefield who has just recently returned from a visit to the United States says:—

"I refer you to the late O. P. and M. J. Van Sweetingen who as youths were newsboys but with active brains and eagerness to learn and make a future for themselves, yet not forgetting to pave the way for others. They, through shrewdness, etc., became great financial wizards and living the life of bachelors till they died. You cannot visit Cleveland without seeing results of their works, the Union Terminal is a product of their ingenious plans. Their home on top of the building, 54 stories above the ground has trees and a yard of grass, the same as one living on the ground.

Famous Hospital

Many hospitals we hope none of you have to go to, and there are very noted ones in all the cities I've mentioned, but there is one I do hope you visit, for in various ways it is unique and the "times we saw it we learned it to be the only one of its kind in the world and having great results. It is the Sugar Diabetis Hospital in a burrough of Cleveland called Brasenahl. They are also noted for pneumonia, asthma, etc., cases. It is spherical in shape and the sphere on a base. This being a great factor in producing results by compression of air and desired volume of oxygen. It has in this sphere a storing with structure nowhere else to be seen. Dr. Chile, world-known surgeon, discoverer and scientific explorer in the realm of humanity, is a great personage to inquire about. You may not see him but if you do you will find him a personage never to be forgotten. You may see some of his great works in his laboratory.

Other places of interest are the Cleveland airport, the great auditorium, Art Institute, library, the Union Trust building called a city within a city, Western Reserve College, and don't fail all along the trip to see how every place takes a deep interest in music. It may be studied from the home to the grand opera in Cleveland or that given by the various and many musical organizations throughout your trip. In such as Keith's Theatre, study the art, tapestry paintings, marble furnishings, etc., as well as the show. Don't leave Cleveland without a trip through the Rayon Industrial plant There you will learn for yourself how rayon silk used to be made from corn stalks and cotton but as that proved unsatisfactory they now make it from cotton, and soft wood pulp, preferably same as our Canadian spruce tree pulp. Did you know your rayon silk hose, dress etc., was part wood? There you can see for yourself it is. They may not want to let you through. I've been through several times as leader of school groups to see all in Cleveland it is easy to gain admittance, while others almost impossible. For example, one college group from Columbus and one Western Reserve college group from Cleveland were refused admittance on a Saturday two weeks before Christmas. I had gone 70 miles in buses with a high school group to see all in Cleveland we could see in one day. That was before I went there to teach. Seeing the other groups refused admittance and knowing the trip was made solely because some of our people never could understand how such could be done I was determined and persistent, so not have our plans destroyed, so I proved to them how these college students could see by past experience and education the results and possibilities of great industries but such as my high school students might never have another opportunity to see such. Pointed out the possibilities involved in such a tour, we were informed to wait till the others went on their way. We were then taken through from beginning to end and even after seeing many of the before-mentioned places even including a theatre party at night, these students classed that as the most educational tour, for it was different than any elsewhere studied. We are proud to know England has made great strides in this line too. Look what Canada could do with it for study, the percentage of cotton used in the making with that of the spruce and figure for yourself. Canada needs more enterprises to make use of her raw material as natural resources. Peterborough has a good record considering her size, location, etc.

Most villages etc. eastward along the Lake Erie shore from Cleveland are interested in their own cottages and tourist resorts but returning via Lorain, Elyria, Sandusky, Toledo, Detroit and Windsor, you will visit more cities where prospective tourists may be sent. Detroit is a great automobile center but I believe you are as much going through our own Oshawa plant as you would in any other city. We have seen them in Chicago, Columbus, Detroit and Oshawa. Don't fail to see Henry Ford's little village of Greenfield at Dearborn, a burough of Detroit. The old Cotswold all-stone cottage dismantled from its many hundred (over 400 years old) years residential place in the British Isles was moved by Henry Ford's order and even the dirt surrounding it in that foreign land was shipped to the Greenfield village and now rests in the yard around this 400 year old structure which is reconstructed just as it was over 400 years ago over there. See Thomas Edison's original laboratory with all of its equipment as it was originally in a far away city. And the old court house which was the first one Abraham Lincoln tried his cases in but moved from its original to its new home in Greenfield village. Don't be surprised if you see Henry Ford inspecting the old river boat, first used on the noted "Suwanee." The underwater tunnel between Detroit, U.S., and Windsor, Canada, gives you a nice thrill at what the Hudson River under-water tunel is like. Now on through the next section you'll find as good an agricultural country as can be seen in Ontario. Homeward bound for Peterborough you'll find yourself [illegible] glad to get back.

BEAUTY IS THEME OF W.A. MEETING

Pleasing Program Delights Members At Roseneath Association Gathering

(Examiner Correspondence.)

ROSENEATH, April 26—Beauty was the theme that dominated the program on Wednesday afternoon, when the regular meeting of the Woman's Association of the Roseneath United Church was held at the home of Mesdames E. and C. Sandercock. The program opened and Mrs. E. Blodgett read "Beauty by Association with Christ." Mrs. M. Davey read "True Beauty," and Miss Mary Braithwaite read a short poem describing beauty.

The president commented briefly on the beauty of spring with its promise of bursting leaves and buds, and springing grass, and the annual resurrection of life after the death of winter.

During the business period plans were discussed to enable the flower committee to purchase flowers to adorn the chancel of the church for Mother's Day. Arrangements were completed regarding the bazaar to be held in the town hall on May 1, and it was decided to make the hall as attractive as possible by decorating with the coronation colors. A number of articles for the bazaar made from donations to the society from department stores, were on display, all were useful, and the more dainty articles with their fine needlework and bright colors brought their own touch of beauty to the meeting.

Pleasing Program

The program was arranged by Mrs. S. Thackeray and Miss Mary Braithwaite, and was as follows: Reading, "Calamity Coming," read by Mrs. E. Braithwaite; reading, "Definition of a Farmer," by Mrs. E. Blodgett; and a description of Hyacinths was read by Mrs. C. Sandercock. Mrs. E. Blodgett, holder of a lucky chair, won a dainty pitcher as prize. Contests were arranged by Mrs. A. Braithwaite and Mrs. M. Davey.

Following the benediction, the hostesses served refreshments.

The May meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. E. Carew; Mrs. E. Braithwaite and Mrs. E. Sandercock will arrange the program and the theme will centre around thoughts of Mother's Day and mothers.

Martin warned the workers they could keep their newly-won rights "only so long as you remain organized." He said he was sure that if Ontario newspapers and the Premier had witnessed the struggle in the United States automobile industry they would not have misunderstood why men would fight as they did."

"Because they misunderstood, they took a prejudicial attitude long before an explanation could be made." said Martin, "the trouble is they don't realize we are making a holy crusade to make it safe for workers to join."

Nearly 2,000 of the union employees, after hearing Martin and Thompson, passed resolutions reaffirming their allegiance to the U.A.W.A and the C.I.O. and expressing confidence in the two union officials. They also passed a "vote of censure" on the Toronto Globe and Mail and the Toronto Evening Telegram for their attitude on the strike and extended their thanks to the Toronto Daily Star.

CRAWLED UPSTAIRS ON ALL FOURS

Owing to Rheumatism in Her Knees

It was not a very dignified way of going upstairs, but she had rheumatism in her knees, and it was the best she could do, at the time. Since then she has been taking Kruschen Salts, and now feels much better. Read her letter:—

"I had very painful gout in my big toe and could only get upstairs on all fours owing to rheumatism in my knees. It is over three years ago since I commenced taking Kruschen Salts. I must say on damp days I still have a little gout, but my knees are quite better. I am over 60 years of age, have a complexion like a girl's and feel very fit. I am fully repaid for taking a half teaspoon of Salts each morning in a cup of hot water."—(Mrs.) A. W.

The pains and stiffness of rheumatism are frequently caused by deposits of uric acid in the muscles and joints. The numerous salts in Kruschen assist in stimulating your liver and kidneys to healthy, regular action, and help them to get rid of the excess uric acid which is the cause of so much suffering.

has Triple Film Strength

RED INDIAN ... the best motor oil PLUS *CLARALLOY ... a new chemical EQUALS RED INDIAN Aviation Oil FOR MOTOR CARS

Two years of actual laboratory and road tests definitely prove that RED INDIAN AVIATION OIL's Triple Film Strength:

- Increases gasoline mileage by permitting the use of lighter grades of oils.
- Practically eliminates engine-wear due to oil-film failure!
- Reduces carbon deposits and oil consumption.
- Decreases starting wear because it clings to metal surfaces and provides adequate lubrication even when the engine is cold.
- Positively eliminates bearing wear and corrosion.
- Decreases harmful effects of road dust by forming a protective film around abrasive dust particles.

RED INDIAN AVIATION OIL is a Premium Oil—Yes. But remember that its astonishing protective qualities give value far in excess of the slight extra cost.

Change TODAY to Summer Grade RED INDIAN AVIATION OIL.

Compare These Scientific Facts:

Using the finest mineral oil, test bearings seize under pressure of 4,000 lbs. per Square Inch.

With CLARALLOY added, the same oil withstands test bearing pressure of 12,000 lbs. per Square Inch

*WHAT IS CLARALLOY? CLARALLOY is a supplemental chemical whose discovery marks the most advanced development in E.P. (Extreme Pressure) Lubricants. The three outstanding characteristics of CLARALLOY are:

(1) It triples the film-strength of the finest mineral oils.

(2) Makes it cling more closely to metal surfaces.

(3) Creates an increased "oiliness" which gives adequate lubrication under all operating conditions.

Each one of these additional qualities, which CLARALLOY gives to Red Indian Aviation Oil, is of vital importance to motorists because each one provides additional protection from engine-wear. CLARALLOY plus Red Indian pure, wax-free oil = Red Indian Aviation Oil, the sensational, new lubricant which has Triple Film Strength.

Ungrateful Attitude Taken By Government On Pensions

Rev. Dr. Barr Criticizes Attitude On Pensions By Government

LEGION CHURCH PARADE

Twice on Sunday the streets of the city re-echoed to the tramp of marching feet and the stirring sound of martial music as the first two church parades of the present year were held by different organizations.

In the morning officers and members of the local branch of the Canadian Legion numbering over one hundred strong attended Divine Service at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, while in the evening over sixty members of the Independent Order of Oddfellows paraded to St. John's Church, where Captain S. Mason of the Church Army was the preacher for the occasion.

Rangers Band

Both parades were headed by the scarlet-uniformed band of the Prince of Wales' Rangers under direction of Lieut. W. Peryer and by kind permission of Major R. T. H. Hicks-Lyne, M.C., temporary Officer Commanding the unit.

Comrade W. Gracie bore the legion standard at the head of the big parade of bereften and be-medalled ex-soldiers, while Mayor George A. Macdonald, veteran of the South African campaign marched along with President W. B. Sloan, Major R. K. Clifton, M.C., and other officers of the branch. Also in the parade were representatives of Memorial branch of the Canadian Legion.

The Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr who extended a warm welcome to the officers and members of the Legion on the occasion of their first visit to St. Paul's since he has been pastor of that church, preached on the subject "The Forgotten Soldier."

Ungrateful Government.

Criticizing the ingratitude of the Canadian government, which he said had been demonstrated by the attitude the government had taken in regard to ex-soldiers' pensions, Dr. Barr called the heroic sacrifices made by the Canadian Corps throughout the last War and in the first Battle of Ypres in particular.

"A thousand yards were captured by a few Canadians at great sacrifice," he said referring to the first battle of Ypres, the twenty-second anniversary of which has just been celebrated, "and now we find the government quibbling over the granting of more pensions to ex-soldiers."

The reverend speaker elaborated on the high ideals for which Canadians fought and died on the field of battle and called attention to the disturbing fact that there are at the present time more men under arms than at any time previous to the Great War. "Peace is not with us and as for freedom it is passing almost from memory," he said.

Must Preserve Ideals

Urging that the high ideals for which so many young men had paid the supreme sacrifice, must be preserved, Dr. Barr warned there is a struggle going on today as significant as that of 1914-1918, but he said, "the foe is not the German, but something insidious that is gnawing at the roots of our moral and social conditions."

A special anthem was sung by the choir for the occasion under the direction of Martin B. Chenhall, A.R.C.O., organist and choirmaster with George Coleman as the soloist, while the musical portion of the service was featured by the singing of such hymns as "Onward Christian Soldiers," "Fight the Good Fight," and "Soldiers of Christ Arise."

The service concluded with the National Anthem, the Benediction and the sounding by a bugler of "Last Post" and "Reveille."

With the Boy Scouts

Spring is in the air and Sacred Heart Cubs taking advantage of the fine weather carried out the first of a series of "know your city" hikes, enjoying the air in Jackson Park.

On Thursday night the Cubs held their first parents night with a very good turnout of dads and mothers. Two outstanding displays were the human compass and a jungle dance. Cub Harold Legrow rendered a guitar selection while Cub Dave Jones gave a piano solo.

Gerald Grady was master of ceremonies. District Cubmaster Gordon Clegg was story teller. One of the special visitors for the occasion was Assistant District Commissioner Lew Grant.

On Sunday all three Catholic Scout troops and Cub packs attended High Mass at Sacred Heart Church to celebrate St. George's Day. About 100 Scouts and Cubs under Assistant District Commissioner Ernest Wolffe were on parade.

The Rev. J. C. Maloney, troop chaplain celebrated Mass, while the Rev. J. J. O'Brien delivered an inspiring sermon on the life of St. George.

On Thursday next boys of Sacred Heart will hear an illustrated lecture on Hungary by Pete Dominick, also pictures will be shown of the 1936 jamboree at Nassau and of the parade of Scouts and Cubs in 1935 for the R. F. Rally.

At All Saints' A.S.M.—George Brooks gave a Scout hat to the Bulldog Patrol and gave the boys a few tips on obstacles and a pep talk on the Scout laws.

At St. Paul's a new chum was accepted into the Pack. Skipping instructions were given. Ten boys went on a hike to Jackson Park and played natives and marines.

District Cubmaster Gordon Clegg took charge of St. Andrew's Pack.

On Tuesday the Cub course will be held at Sacred Heart, when the fourth of a series of lectures will be given.

Scouters are reminded to make arrangements for church services on Sunday May 9—the pre-Coronation worship for God's blessing on Their Majesties King George VI and Queen Elizabeth.

Scouters please cooperate in connection with arrangements for the camp fire fun on May 24. Get your boys ready with their skits. Also find out from your troop committee how much extra transportation will be needed.

Don't forget the Lakefield Jamboree on May 24. Anyone wishing to camp over that week-end write Mr. McKerchar, Royal Bank, Lakefield.

Scouting is a year round job. Keep going all summer. Scouters show your boys you are really interested. We live Scouters to live Scouts.—"The Skipper."

CLUB WILL ELECT NEW DIRECTORS AT NEXT MEETING

Rotary Nominating Committee Has Placed 11 Candidates In Field

MOUNTIES ARE PRAISED

The Peterborough Rotary Club at its meeting next Monday will elect five directors for the new year beginning on July 1. At to-day's luncheon Rotarian J. L. Gillespie for the Nominating Committee reported the following list of candidates from whom five are to be selected: Roy E. Cutting, T. J. Carley, James Dutton, Orley DeGraw, Dave Diplock, Dr. R. W. Frank, Mac Gordon, R. M. Glover, T. A. MacKay, Art Runions, and E. L. Sackville.

The speaker at to-day's luncheon was Rotarian Jack Hamilton, president-elect of the Lindsay Club, who gave a most interesting address on the history and exploits of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. He was introduced by Rotarian T. A. MacKay.

"Although much of the glamor and romance has gone, the Royal Canadian Mounted is one of the finest police forces the world has ever known, and one in which Canadians have every right to take pride," said Rotarian Hamilton.

The speaker told of the organization of the force, then called the North-West Mounted Police in 1873, with an original strength of six troops, and with Col. George A. French as its first Commissioner; of its famous march across the plains from Winnipeg to the fork of the Bow and Belly Rivers, and of its adventures with Sitting Bull and other Indians. He described the increase in the work that came with the building of the C.P.R. and the consequent increase in the strength of the force to 500, and the changing of the name to the Royal North-West Mounted Police in 1904, and with the transfer of headquarters to Ottawa to the present name of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. The heroic patrol of Inspector Moodie from Edmonton to Dawson City, the march to Bathurst Inlet in 1907, and other famous exploits of the Mounties, including the long battle with the mad trapper of Rat River, were graphically described by Rotarian Hamilton.

Of the present set-up of the force, the speaker said that it has taken over Provincial Police work in six of the nine Canadian Provinces, and had a numerical strength of 3,500 officers, 120 special officers, and 220 civilians. It now possessed only 100 horses, but it owned 387 sleigh dogs, 500 motor cars, 109 boats in the sea-going section of the force, and 12 airplanes.

Rotarian T. J. Carley voiced the thanks of the club to the speaker.

The names of the captains of the ticket-selling teams in connection with the annual carnival were announced by Rotarian Jack Steele as follows: R. E. Bell, R. L. Dobbin, Dr. R. W. Frank, J. Gillespie, J. Juby, J. F. Reed, and Art Runions.

Found Guilty Of Mail Fraud

Mrs. Violet Wells Norton, plump, middle-aged English woman of Winnipeg, who claimed Clarke Gable was the father of her daughter, Gwendolyne Norton, was found guilty at Los Angeles of mail fraud. Mrs. Norton had been charged with using the mails to extort money from the motion picture actor on the grounds he abandoned her with a baby in Billercay, Essex, England, in 1922. Mrs. Norton is shown above at the LEFT as she rebuked an alert photographer during her trial. Gwendolyn Norton, around whom the trial was centred, is shown at the RIGHT. Clark Gable denied the charge and proved he was in Oregon at the alleged time. He also stated he had never been outside the United States.

THE INSPECTOR'S REPORT.

A typographical error in the article in Saturday's issue dealing with the report of Acting Sanitary Inspector Harry Whille did that official an injustice inasmuch as it caused the item to read as if the report covered the period from April 1 to April 14. As a matter of fact Mr. Whille's report was based on investigations carried on between April 13 and April 16 and was a very complete statement for such a short period.

"PROBATION AFTER DEATH"

"Probation after Death" was the subject of the Lesson - Sermon for First Church of Christ, Scientist, Peterborough on Sunday. The Golden Text was, "I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit that they may rest from their labours; and their works do follow them." (Revelation 14:13.) Selections from the Bible included the following from 1 Corinthians 15:12, "Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead?" Convincing citations from the Christian Science textbook included the following from page 60: "Jesus' unfathomed spiritual condition after what seemed to be death was followed by his exaltation above all material conditions, and this exaltation explained the ascension and revealed unmistakably a probationary and progressive state beyond the grave."

Prison Population In Britain Declined Oddfellows Are Told

Peterborough Lodge Holds Annual Parade To St. John's Church

CHURCH ARMY SPEAKER

While average daily prison population in Great Britain has dropped from 60,000 to 11,000 in the last forty years the population of Ontario reformatories alone has increased by 25 per cent in recent years, Captain S. Mason of the Church Army told the members of Otonabee Lodge No. 32 and Peterborough Lodge No. 111, I.O.O.F., at St. John's Church on Sunday evening in addressing them on the prisoner and police court work of the Church Army. It was the annual church service of the Oddfellows who, marshalled by Bro. J. H. Price of Peterborough Lodge and headed by the band of the Prince of Wales Rangers directed by Lieut. W. H. Peryer, marched from their lodge rooms to the church and occupied the pews in the centre.

The I.O.O.F. lodges were warmly welcomed to St. John's by the rector, Rev. W. P. Robertson who said that it was fitting that on the occasion of their annual church service they should be addressed by a representative of the Church Army, an organization which like themselves was endeavoring to extend the hand of brotherhood to those in need of it.

Captain Mason's address was based on the story of the kindly treatment accorded by King Evil-Merodach of Babylon to Jehoiachin, king of Judah on the latter's release from thirty-seven years of captivity as told in the last four verses of the 25th chapter of II Kings.

The speaker said that this phase of the Church's Army's work was an answer to the charge that religion was so busy with the next world that it had no time to deal with the cares and anxieties of this one.

Prison work was begun by the Church Army in England over forty years ago and the organization was the first lay evangelistic body to have access to the prisons of England. At that time the average daily population of English prisons was 60,000 while official figures showed that the average daily population in 1934 was only 11,000.

Committals to jail had shrunk to one-third in thirty years and while he did not mean to claim that the Church Army's efforts had been solely responsible for that change they had the assurance of a former Home Secretary that the Church Army had been one of the great reclaiming agencies.

Not So Bright Here

He was sorry to say that the picture in Ontario was not nearly so bright inasmuch as the population of provincial reformatories alone had increased 25 per cent in recent years.

A disturbing condition was the large number of young people pasing daily through the police courts of the province while 30 per cent of the inmates of all the penal institutions in Ontario were under 25 years of age.

Captain Mason described the efforts that were being made by the Church Army in Canada to deal with this situation. He told of what had already been accomplished in Toronto where since the work began 14 months ago sixty men had been taken care of in the Church Army home, 2,000 nights shelter had been given and 5,000 meals provided. The organization was only able to see a month or so ahead in its work, he explained. It received no grant from the government nor any financial assistance from the funds of the church but it lived on prayer and had been doing everything in its power to reclaim those who had made a false step to get back on the right path. They were not be said, making the mistake of substituting softness for kindness for there were times when strict discipline was the best remedy but the aim of the organization was to do for those who were released from prison and looked to the Church Army for a helping hand what the king of Babylon centuries ago had done for his royal captive.

Captain Mason also preached at the morning service in St. John's on Sunday and special collections in aid of the Church Army work.

THE STARS SAY . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, April 27

According to the very friendly positions of important planets, this is to be a day of advancement, prosperity, and it may bring a stabilization of the fortunes and increased possessions, both by investments, industry, perseverance, and possibly by insurance, bequests, the favors of elderly persons or very sound institutions.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a year of steady growth and progress, with several avenues for steadying the income, stabilizing the fortunes and making enduring accumulations, either through hard work, wise investments or through the benefices, bequests or insurance of elders or through affiliation with old established institutions.

A child born on this day may be industrious, responsible, and ambitious and should make notable success with property, investments, diligence and through inheritance or favors of its elders.

The Rambling REPORTERS

WORE FATHER'S MEDALS.

The youngest marcher in the annual church parade of Branch 52 of the Canadian Legion on Sunday morning was Jimmie Blaikiock, aged seven years. He marched with his uncle, Captain W. F. Huycke, K.C., The lad wore the General Service and Victory Medals, which had belonged to his father, the late Lieut. James Blaikiock, who served during the War with the Northumberland Fusiliers and the Highland Light Infantry.—H. R.

WHAT DID THEY THINK?

Proceeding sedately up George street on Saturday night shortly after eleven o'clock, a wayfarer was surprised to hear her own first name uttered in hoarse, guttural accents. She paused and it came again, quite distinctly. Turning to find the source of the queer sounds and wondering who was calling her, she heard it again and took a few steps back to a doorway where two noble red men, evidently in a Saturday-night mood, were standing. Staring at them, she was about to ask what they wanted, when she realized suddenly from their suspicious dark-eyed glare that they were equally surprised and were only, by a queer coincidence, talking about some woman with the same first name. No one said anything. Then the lady turned and fled, with visions of tomahawks and firewater hastening her steps from the astonished couple.—C.L.M.

MANY BIG ORDERS FOR CORONATION

Local Firm Is Working Overtime Endeavoring To Fill Large Orders

"We are working overtime in an effort to cope with the large number of Coronation orders we have received," J. J. Turner, vice-president of J. J. Turner and Sons Limited, told The Examiner this (Monday) morning.

On a trip through the workshops a reporter saw three large Royal coat of arms which have been made to the order of the City of Peterborough in connection with the scheme of decorations for the city hall.

It has been suggested that after the coat of arms have served their purpose following Coronation ceremonies, one of them be placed over the mayor's dais in the council chamber as a souvenir of the occasion.

Coronation decorations are in strong evidence throughout the whole of the plant, the showroom on the ground floor being literally one big mass of red, white and blue bunting.

In another workshop a large number of girls are busily employed on a huge Union Jack that is being rushed through to the order of the City of Windsor. The flag, when completed is to measure 30 feet long by 20 feet wide and is to be used in decorating the city hall in the border city.

Oshawa Majors Roll Highest In Peterborough Tournament

Toronto Pair High In Doubles And Oshawa Man Takes Singles

ABOUT 300 COMPETE

Oshawa Majors won the team honors in the Handicap Bowling Tournament completed in Peterborough late Saturday night. It was run off in the Duffus' Bowling Alleys and was the biggest tourney of its kind ever staged here. About 300 competed from a number of cities throughout Ontario. A large crowd of spectators saw the finals Saturday with the bowlers fighting hard for the big prizes offered. A Toronto pair took honors in the doubles, while E. Mackie of Oshawa won the singles.

In the finals for team leadership, the Majors of Oshawa moved ahead of the C.B.A. runners-up of last year, C.B.A. of Toronto. The Majors had taken first in C.B.A. competition last year. Bill Ashton and Harold Wood of Toronto were best in doubles, and E. Mackie of Oshawa defeated W. Barrett for singles. H. Wood had a high single of 372. Many of the Peterborough trundlers made an excellent showing, being right on the heels of the leaders. Local bowlers combined with the Atlas team of Toronto to take second in team rolling the Weese-Marvin pair were third in doubles, and W. Firth was third in singles. In the list below of singles, the handicaps are mentioned but not added into the totals. Following are the scores:

EDMONTON GRADS CAPTURE SERIES

Took First Three Games Of Series With Cleveland Team

EDMONTON, April 26 (CP)—Edmonton Grads, international women's basketball champions since 1923, added another successful defence of the Underwood Challegene Trophy to their lengthy record today. Grads completed a three-game whitewashing of Cleveland Fisher Foods with a 45-26 victory Saturday night. They were victors by 35-24 and 42-17 in the first two games of the best-of-five series.

Son Of Top Flight Makes Debut

Making his camera debut in this photo is a bay colt, the son of Top Flight, to whom the camera is no novelty. Top Flight, owned by Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, lived up to her name. She was among the Top Flight racers and is still a shining example to her offspring. The foal was aired by Peace Chance.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

SCHOOL Softball League schedule is in to-night. This loop always gets away to an early start as they finish it up toward the end of June. Two sections are being run this year—seniors and juniors—with the six schools represented in each. Dunno if they have any play-offs or not. The senior series was slated to start this afternoon while the juniors get going on Thursday. Sont pretty fair softball is dished up by these young teams and a lot of material developed for the City Softball League in future years. We always regretted the fact that they gave up baseball for the smaller diamond game in the public schools, but cramped quarters in some schools more or less forced it. Cutting off so many minors locally didn't do baseball a bit of good.

A GOOD C.O.B.L. meeting was run off Saturday in Belleville. Four teams entered—Peterborough, Napanee, Kingston and Oshawa. The fliers decided they couldn't field a strong enough squad for this class of ball. Belleville obtained a year's leave of absence from the loop. Same umpiring system as last year will rule this season, and the same play-off system after a quadruple schedule is finished. But the loop winner will be declared a lot earlier—on Labor Day—this year, since the O.B.A.A. squawked like a hen on the block over last year's delay in declaring a C.O.B.L. champion.

OSHAWA GM-Men will open the schedule here on May 24th, while Kingston is in Napanee. Other opening games see the Gibbards at Kingston on May 26th and the Petes in Oshawa on May 29th. Schedule will be drawn up shortly. The Petes also obtained July 1st. for a home tilt. So we'll get going in just one month from last Saturday. Manager Fred Collins of the Petes, who went to Belleville, said he'd run the indoor exercise drills at the "Y" on Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday evenings this week from seven to eight, and then probably outdoors at Riverside Park next Saturday—weather permitting. He is quite satisfied with the spirit shown locally so far.

OSHAWA will have pretty much the same crew as last year with Bennett of Galt back of the plate instead of Elliott, and Foley in centre rather than Hurst. Kingston Ponies are up to something and may sneak in a few yet, long after the deadline has passed. Otherwise, they won't be too hot. The Petes will be much stronger with several new players. Walter Gerow gave us a prospective Napanee line-up like this: Catchers, Walter Jeffers of Toronto, Speedy St. Louis of Belleville, and Chuck Cairns of Napanee; pitchers, Pointer, Blazedich and Spratt, the latter an intermediate; infield, Wilson, 1b; Handford, 2b; Ford, ss; Card, 3b; outfield, Scarlett, Bennetts, Weir, and one of the catchers. About as strong as last year, we'd say.

GOT talking to Al Meagher after the meeting. Yeah, he's the former umpire who was peeved enough to almost dust our trousers with a boot two years ago when we rode him hard. Says he won't umpire any more. He is in charge of the Belleville arena and they'll run daneing and rasslin' tliers rather than box lacrosse this summer. Hopes to have artificial ice next winter. "Peterborough had the best team, except maybe for Pontiac Chiefs, we had here all last winter," Al stated. We asked him did he mean a good-behaving gang. "No, not altogether that, but they had it on ability, too", he said; "but of course the Fliers had it over them on condition after their early-winter schedule in Kingston." Ken Colling will likely be the only umpire from Belleville in the C.O.B.L. this year.

THE biggest bowling tournament ever to be held here was run off last week in Duffus', an invitation handicap tourney which finished late Saturday night. Some 300 entries and a big gang of spectators as the boys battled it out with high scores for good prizes. Complete dope is in this s'en. Oshawa Majors won the team title, while a Toronto pair took the doubles, and E. Mackie of Oshawa copped the singles. Highest single went to Harold Wood of Toronto with 372. Peterborough pin-smackers were right up in there all the way through, having some guys on the second team, being third in singles, and third in doubles. It was a well-conducted affair.

UP at the "Y" on Saturday night, two excellent exhibition cage contests drew a nice crowd of rooters. St. Andrew's local midget church champs, ranked out an overtime win over King St. United, the Ontario midget church champs, 20-18. A first-rate showing for the kids. In the intermediate sette, St. Paul's, local senior City Loop titlists, dropped their first fray of the season, the King St. intermediae "A" church champs getting the nod by a 27-20 score. In an intermission, a burlesque rasslin' match was staged between Don (the Biter) Ross and Charles (the Groaner) Shaw, with H. B. Cowan, Jr., refereeing. It lasted about six minutes and wound up in a laugh-provoking draw. "Y" volleyball finals up there that day are listed elsewhere.

AT eight to-night in Duffus' the lacrosse rs will meet for some important business. Down at their new field on Saturday afternoon, some 15 prospective players arrived with lacrosse sticks and were promptly handed shovels instead. Not too well pleased, they nevertheless turned in and dug all the post holes necessary for the new box and put in a bunch of the posts. At the request of the officers, we had run the following rather two-faced announcement last week, which had some of the players fooled: "Local lacrosse prospects are asked by the club to drop around to the new field Saturday to get in some pre-seasonal exercises. They intend to start 'em off with some pretty stiff drilling—and will call a spade a spade." So, we didn't exactly tell a lie about it now, did we?

SOCCER PLAYERS HAVE WORKOUT

Packers, C.C.F. And Canadian General Were Represented

Soccer players made their first appearance on Saturday afternoon on King Edward Park, with most of the local clubs fully represented.

The Canada Packers team of last season participated in general routine workout. George Downer and Jimmy Buchan were the only absentees, but they are expected to return to their usual places in the eleven. Manager William Downer expects to confine his "signing on" list to the usual number of thirteen. Lawrence O'Toole is the Packers' representative on the board of directors.

Jack McMaster of the C.C.F. is working hard to introduce the younger elements into the game and is endeavoring to obtain some of the schoolboys that showed excellent promise in the school cup finals. Walter Denisen, associated with the team, would welcome any player who desires to become a regular participant. If the C.O.E. team does not go to Deloro the C.C.F. aggregation will accept the invitation.

Only four players of the Canadian General made their appearance in the first workout, but according to information from the Electric plant they will have many new faces that will greatly strengthen their defensive system. David Best is the official representative.

Definite information will be given the board of directors to-night at the meeting in the Chamber of Commerce Rooms in regard to the Bowmanville arrangements for the coming season.

Deloro boys are making final preparations for the Coronation Day game with a Peterborough team as one of their special attractions for the sports events.

The goal posts were expected to be erected on Saturday afternoon but will be in position some time this week.

ST. ANDREW'S WIN BASKETBALL GAME

Defeat Ontario Midget Champions Of Toronto 20-18 In Overtime

The local St. Andrew's cagers, Midget church winners here this year, defeated King Street United of Toronto, Ontario Midget champions 20-18 in an exhibition tilt that went overtime at the "Y" on Saturday night before a good crowd. It was an exciting scrap all the way in four 10-minute frames, St. Andrew's had a 8-4 lead at quarter-time, were ahead 10-7 at half-time, and were down 15-12 at the three-quarter mark. It ended at 16-all and, in overtime, Weir and Maxwell scored but R. Johnston got the winning basket.

Nice teamplay and checking were shown by the well-matched squads. All the visitors shared honors with Campbell and Stewart outstanding for St. Andrew's, R. Johnston and Weir also at best both on the defence and the attack, the former getting six points and Weir four. Cutting and Dougherty had five each, the former passing up chances with some unnecessary passing, and the latter being below form on shooting.

The teams:

King Street — Vellinoff, Roetts, Maxwell, Gordon, Campbell, Meneloum, and Stewart.

St. Andrew's — Cragg, Weir, G. Johnston, R. Johnston, Dougherty, McPherson and Cutting.

Referees—J. McClenaghan and H. Hammell.

Lawn Bowling

By HERB MARTIN

"We have had enough of winter,
The snow has had its fling,
From the mountainside it's fading
At the near approach of Spring.
So get out your bowling outfit
From off the cellar floor,
For you'll need it very shortly
When we ope' the club-house door."

We have, from time to time, through this column, been stressing the point of the necessity of the clubs getting their rinks together and having them sign membership cards and then forward them to the proper committee. We don't think it is necessary to keep on repeating this. But we do know that up until this morning there were only forty cards handed in, and they only have until Saturday to be completed. So now you can see what has to be done.

Last year about this time we held an open meeting up at the clubhouse, and it was such a success that we are again going to hold one this year. It will be on Friday, April 30th, and at eight o'clock.

It will be a joint meeting of the games committee and membership committee, and we are making a strong appeal to all bowlers to be on hand.

There is no admission fee or anything like that—it is just to talk over "bowling" for this coming season. Please keep the date open and come along and lend your support to the committees, who are working mighty hard for your interests and mine.

ST. PAUL'S LOSE IN CAGE TUSSLE

Drop 27-20 Decision To Toronto Champions In Exhibition Game Here

King Street United of Toronto, Intermediate A champions of that city, took a 27-20 verdict from St. Paul's, local senior City loop winner, in a neat exhibition contest at the "Y" here on Saturday night. It was a hard-checking tilt, with the visitors being a bit too fast and tricky for the Saints, and being the best squad to show here this year. Their passing and dribbling in enemy territory was impressive. St. Paul's led most of the first half, and Thornburn broke away for 10 points.

Toronto had a lead of but 12 to 12 at half-time, but ran up the count the last stanza. Buskitt was the main sniper, but Trucken, a senior player, was a standout player for the team. McIntyre starred for the locals, defending well and scoring three field baskets. Marsh went good defensively, while Thornburn was watched closely in the second half and help to 10 points. The teams:

King Street—J. Wright, R. Wright, Burkitt, Atanasoff, Bokes, Trucken, Butler and Corner.

St. Paul's — Marsh, McIntyre, Ascott, Chowe, Puiskeghorn, Thorburn, McArthur and Sedgewick.

Referees—G. Gunsolus and H. Hammell.

Four Teams to Enter Central Ball League For Season of 1937

Oshawa, Kingston, Napanee and Petes To Make Up C.O.B.L. This Season With Belleville Obtaining Year's Leave Of Absence

OSHAWA HERE MAY 24TH

Four teams will comprise the Central Ontario Baseball League this summer—Oshawa, Kingston, Napanee and Peterborough. They were represented Saturday at the meeting in Belleville, while the Trenton R.C.A.F. failed to appear. Belleville asked for and obtained a year's leave of absence. President Max Swanston conducted the meeting, while Jim Dorris and Fred Collins were Peterborough delegates.

Following a reading of the minutes, Secretary Newt Thompson of Belleville read a report of the O.B.A.A. convention. R. A. Elliott of Deloro, past president and life member of the C.O.B.L.—and also past president of the O.B.A.A., thanked the Central League for their efforts in connection with his appointment as a life member of the O.B.A.A. He also clarified the stand of the Ontario body on a number of questions.

Umpiring System

After some discussion it was decided to carry on with the same umpiring system as last year. The visiting club will supply the plate umpire and the home club the umpire on bases. Neutral umpires from the district will handle the playoffs. The fee will be $5.00 a game for league contests or $8.00 for double-headers for each umpire. Applications will be made to the president, who will make the appointments.

President Swanston warned the clubs to have their applications for transfers in right away and is have them okayed by the O.B.A.A. before attempting to use a player, as was the case last year in Kingston and Belleville. It was decided to use the Reach, Spalding and Worth balls. A round-robin play-off system was discussed but rejected. Entry fee is again $50 to be paid by May 15th and all certificates must be in by that time, too.

12 Home Games

A quadruple schedule will be run this year, giving each club a dozen home games. The second and third team at the end of the schedule will meet in two out of three play-offs, the winner of this to meet the first-place team in three out of five for the championship. It was agreed that the league winner should be through in time to commence O.B.A.A. playdowns on Labor Day. There was some discussion about the 35-mile limit for players but the meeting felt that Belleville players were eligible to play for Napanee this season.

Napanee and Peterborough asked to open their home season on May 24th. Oshawa and Peterborough requested Saturdays for home games, while Napanee wanted Wednesdays and Kingston asked for either Tuesdays or Wednesdays. It was decided that the schedule would open May 24th with Oshawa at Peterborough and Kingston at Napanee. The latter team would go to Kingston May 28th and Peterborough would play in Oshawa May 29th to open their home stands. Regarding holiday dates, Peterborough and Napanee requested July 1st while Kingston asked for Civic Holiday and Oshawa expressed no preference toward holiday games at home. With the secretary instructed to draw up the schedule and submit it to the clubs, the meeting was adjourned.

BEES STING GIANTS 3-1

Yankees Hammer Red Sox 9-3—Tigers Fall Before White Sox 11-7

By Sid Feder
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

The folks may be fed up with Diz-y Dean's whacky words and daffy doings, but it's a safe bet no one in St. Louis is going to mind much as long as the great one keeps flogging 'em in.

With all his eccentric antics, Diz's right arm is still the most valuable piece of pitching brac-a-brac in the business to-day, in spite of the Mulbergs, the Fellers and the Mungos. Without him, the Gas House gang of Cardinals is a second division outfit. With him on deck, they're potential. Pennant winners all the way.

Just as King Carl Hubbell demonstrated last week that he is back with all his stuff for this year's wars, so has dizzy the Great left little doubt in two starts that he is the No. One figure in the Cards' title hopes.

A Great Battle.

All of which adds up to a continuation of the most famous pitching warfare of the current diamond era, between the Giants' crack relief-ranger, who pitched a three-hitter in his first start, and the Gas House gang's overworked right hand ace, with two victories to his credit to date.

His first time out, Dizzy just toyed with Cincinnati Reds and finished all the way in top. Yesterday he was really bearing down against the Cards' dangerous rivals, Chicago's Cubs, but the result was unchanged. He allowed four scattered hits, struck out 10, let only one man get as far as third and waltzed in with a 4-0 shoutout.

The victory left the Cards with four victories in five starts, just half a game back of Pittsburgh's powerful Pirates, whose game at Cincinnati was rained out.

Giants Short on Runs.

The Giants, defending the National League pennant, lost a fine chance to move into the top with Pittsburgh by failing to get runs for their pitchers. Rookie Curt Mellon turned in a six-hitter and fanned 13 men for the year's record, only to have Boston Bees catch up with him for a pair of runs in the ninth and post a 3-1 win. Victory ended Boston's 3-inning runless streak and finished a four-game string of losses.

The world champion New York Yankees finally opened fire with all their guns and battered the Red Sox and temperamental Wes Ferrell for a 12-hit 9-3 win, with a crowd of 33,000 Boston-rooters looking on. The victory gave Murderers' Row a second-place league tie with Detroit's Tigers, who found Vernon Kennedy's strike-out ball too tough, and went down before the White Sox 11-7 for their first setback. This pair of results left Connie Mack's upsetting Athletics at the top of the heap with three wins in four starts, since the A's were rained out at Washington.

Brooklyn and the Phillies put on their customary queer assortment of baseball doings, with Daffy Dodgers finishing in front 10-6 in one of the day's two 11-inning games, while being on the short end of a 6-5 count as late as the sixth frame. In the other overtime tilt, Cleveland Indians also came from behind to nose out St. Louis Browns 5-4 in the 11th. Responsible for the Brooklyn win were heroics by Buddy Hassett and Bernie Mansuh.

SUDBURY DOWNS WEMBLEY LIONS

Tigers Win Second Tilt 6-4 Saturday With Deciding Tourney Match Tonight.

TORONTO, April 26 (CP)—Wembley Lions and Sudbury Tigers, two jaded hockey teams, will decide tonight who will be recognized champions of the international series played here.

The edge seems to be with Tigers, Dominion senior champions, for they hold a game lead in the best-of-three series. They topped Lions, champions of the National League in England, 6-4, Saturday after the first game had been tied at 3-3 Thursday night.

However, if Lions win this third game overtime will be played with the international championship going to the team scoring the first goal.

For Sudbury it means the end of a long hockey season that saw the death of one of their stars, Steve Conick, in an automobile accident early Saturday. Even with the thought of Conick's death weighing on their minds, Tigers went out Saturday night and won. But Lions won't be packing away their equipment for a while yet. As soon as this series is completed they have to dash to New York and catch a liner for England. There they still have to play in a Coronation hockey series.

A second-period penalty to Cam Shewan, Lion defenceman, won and lost the game Saturday night. While Shewan was off Sudbury made good two power plays for goals to take a 3-1 lead. The first period was scoreless and the teams divided six goals in the last.

Don Grosso and Mel Hill scored two apiece for Sudbury and their feat was duplicated for Wembley by Albert LeMay. Other sudbury scorers were Jim Dewey and Jim Hastie while Tom Dailey and Doc Smith were other Wembley goal-getters.

MARYLAND MAY BOOST RACE TAX

Would Allow Longer Meets, Bookmaking Off Tracks To Increase Revenue—For Relief

BALTIMORE, April 26 (AP)—Racing, the sport of Kings, would be made increase its "tribute" to the State of Maryland under a bill before Governor Nice today as a means of increasing relief of citizens down on their luck — those on relief, in other words.

The state receives a percentage of the "take" at race tracks. Under the bill, which may become law next month, the take (racks would have the privilege of lengthening their meetings, thus providing additional revenue to the state treasury.

Another section of the bill would provide for licensing bookmaking away from the track. Such bookmakers would be forced to operate under a $5,000-per-year license.

Directors of Maryland's three race tracks—Bowie, Pimlico and Havre De Grace—have met but they remain tightlipped. After directors of each track have met separately, representatives from each will likely hold a combined session and draw up a plan for presentation to the Maryland Racing Commission.

Before the bill is signed Bowie and Havre De Grace will have completed their spring meets and as tax dates have been set it is not likely they will take advantage of the extra days.

Pimlico—home of the Preakness—opens April 29 and the additional time will be utilized. Turf followers will find a number of changes when they enter the historic plant. Workmen have improved portions of the course.

The judge's stand no longer blocks the finish line from view of grandstand occupants. It has been torn down and rebuilt on the grandstand roof. The coop also will house the camera which photographs the finish of each race.

Another innovation will be a flagging system of two patrol judges. The judges, placed at advantageous positions on the track, keep an eye out for rough racing and other fouls. Each will have two flags. Waving of a red flag will signal a foul, while a white will indicate a clean race on the back stretch.

THE DIFFERENCE IN WOMEN.

NEW YORK, April 26.— (AP) — Here's what Renee Long, department store stylist, told the Long Island Federation of Women's Clubs:

"A lively girl is an accident, but a distinguished woman is a achievement."

Adopting dress and coiffeur to personality she said, spells distinction.

LEAFS POUND BOTH CHIEFS AND ORIOLES

Drub Syracuse 6-2 On Sunday After Taking Baltimore 11-9 Day Before

TIE FIRST POSITION

Jersey Giants Shut Montreal Out 1-0—Bears Trim Red Wings 9-3

(By the Associated Press.)

"Like father like son" appears to go in the International League, too. The Jersey Giants, lineal offspring of the New York Giants, look a lot like the parent club when it comes to box scores. The Jersey City team, with less than a week of play in the International League in the books, has scored only six runs in three games and have relied on tight hurling and a fast attack to win.

In second place behind Newark Bears and Toronto Maple Leafs, the Little Giants turned in a typical Giant win Sunday. Glen Gabler, brother of the Giants' Gabbo, shutout Montreal Royals 1-0, with seven hits while his mates put together singles by Hal Lee and Roy Anten and Smead Jolley's sacrifice in score their only run in the fourth. Then there were 13,236 paid admissions in the new stadium to see the game.

In the only other game of the day, Toronto Maple Leafs kept pace with the Bears at the top of the league, by trimming Syracuse Chiefs, 6-2. Mike Meola, an ex-Syracusan, limited the Chiefs to seven hits while Joe Gantenbein topped the Leaf attack with a trio of singles.

Buffalo and Baltimore, scheduled at Baltimore, were rained out.

Toronto-Newark Game.

Meola pitched great ball after getting past the opening three innings, when the Chiefs collected five hits to produce both their runs, one in the first and another in the third. After Glossop doubled Eddie Miller home in the third, Syracuse tanged out only two more hits, both singles.

The exToronto shortstop came through with a pair of blows and scored one run. He opened the third frame with a three-bagger over Mayo Smith's head, and romped home on Glossop's double to the same spot. Successive singles by Glossop and Joost and Gamble's grounder to Gantenbein, which the latter turned into a double play, manufactured the Chiefs' only other run.

Leafs Hammer Mangum.

The Leafs drove veteran Lee Mangum to the showers in the fifth inning, when they banished six hits for three runs. With one out, Ross doubled to right and scored on Heath's single to centre. Meola beat out a slow roller and Madura lined a two-bagger to right, scoring Heath and sending Meola to third. Both runners scored on Gantenbein's hit to left. Mayo Smith beat out an infield roller before Jack Campbell replaced Mangum and retired the next two batters.

Campbell held Toronto in check for the next two innings, but was yanked for a pinch-hitter, and the Leafs pounced on Frank Pearce, his successor, for two runs in the eighth on singles by Bobby Porter and Walsh, Ross's sacrifice and Madura's one-bagger.

Both teams rattled off a pair of double plays. Bobby Porter hit into both twin-killings manufactured by the Chiefs, but it was a bad decision on the second one as he appeared to have the throw beaten at first by half a step. In the fourth frame, after Petoskey hit to centre, for two bases, Bobby lined a hard smash right into Miller's glove and Petoskey was doubled off second.

Dan Howley will start Bota Nekola against the Chiefs to-morrow, while George Hockette, lanky southpaw, will be the likely choice to provide the opposition. In case Hockette doesn't work, Earl Cook will get the call.

Gantenbein and Petoskey Star.

The Toronto team was clicking on all sixes on Saturday as they swept the series in Baltimore by banging out seventeen safe clouts and an 11-9 victory over the Orioles. The Leafs overcame a four-run Oriole lead in the sixth inning, and after the home team knotted the count in the same half of the frame, they came right back with another spurge in the eighth to win the game.

Joe Gantenbein and Ted Petoskey led the Toronto hitting barrage with three safe drives each. Gantenbein snapped the ball out of the park during a six-run rally in the sixth with the bases loaded. Petoskey slammed out another homer in the eighth with one on, and Bobby Porter, the next batter, turned the same trick.

John Pomorski was touched for three homers, and finally left the box in the sixth with one out, two runs in, and King on first. Babe Davis baffled the Orioles for the remainder of the game, allowing only one run in the ninth.

Dupree both games over the week-end, Frank Madura was the only Toronto player to go hitless in one game. Every other regular on the team hit safely in both games.

LASH JUST MAKING START AT RUNNING

Coach Says Varsity Senior Should Be Hitting Stride In About Two Years

PHILADELPHIA, April 26.—(AP)—He is the United States' Amateur Athletic Union cross country champion. He holds the world record at two miles. He has a share in the new world record of 17:16.1 for the four-mile relay. He has to his credit victory at a mile over two such veteran competitors as Luigi Beccali of Italy and Gene Venske of the New York Athletic Club.

He ran the mile in 4:21.3, 4:17.2 and 4:24.3 in two days at the Penn relay carnival at Franklin Field last Friday and Saturday. Yet in the estimation of E. C. (Billy) Haynes, coach of the Indiana University track team, Don Lash, the young man in question, has just started to run.

"Don ought to be really good in another two years," said sleuthing, be-spectacled Billy. "As long as I've been coaching him—Lash is a senior at the Big Ten school—he's always been pretty much a heavy-footed runner.

"We're beginning to break him of that now. He ran very well in this meet and, by 1939, should be running much better. What his best distance will be then? I really couldn't say. He's tried almost all, and he's improving in each one."

FOUR SISTERS IN RACE.

MELBOURNE.—(CP)— Four sisters, Judith, Margaret, Mary and Helen Bright, had mounts in the Ladies' Plate Handicap at Moonee Valley. Margaret made the best showing, her horse finishing third.

ANGEL'S REVOLT QUICKLY NIPPED

Faithful Mary Chased Out By Father Divine Heads For California

KINGSTON, N.Y., April 26 (AP).—The "Revolt of the Angels" in Father Divine's Ulster County "Heavens" appeared quelled today as aides of the negro evangelist announced plans for "extra super-heavens" and a long-range economic program.

Leader of the revolt, once called "Faithful Mary," conceded defeat in her efforts to win away the Ulster County followers of the negro "god," but announced she would leave for the Pacific coast as soon as possible "to carry on the work there." She was ousted by Father Divine and loyal "angels" yesterday.

Fire which destroyed the cult's "heaven" at New Paltz, near here, was of incendiary origin, the Divine followers asserted.

"Let these buildings burn," declared Arthur A. Madison, Father Divine's New York city lawyer. "We're going to tear them down soon anyway and erect modern dwellings in their places."

THE MOUTHPIECE

By Edgar Wallace and Robert Curtis

(Copyright—Released By Central Press Association)

READ THIS FIRST:

Charles Stuckey, of a London law firm, reluctantly has agreed to a scheme to defraud the daughter of one of his few respectable clients, Jacqueline Smith, of an inheritance of $1,500,000 from an American uncle. In keeping with the plan, Col. Alex Lutman—who has a hold over Stuckey—Jim Ason, an ex-convict, and the lawyer are stopping at the same hotel in Cobequid with Mrs. Smith and her daughter. In dire financial straits, Mrs. Smith has persuaded Jacqueline to marry Ason, posing as a wealthy Englishman, unsuspectedly falling in with plan of the three men to have Ason cultivate the girl, have all of her property assigned to him before their marriage, then splitting up the inheritance before she learns of it. Lutman, as Jim's "trustee," has nursed Jacqueline's decision by revealing a check he cashed for her mother returned marked "insufficient funds." After meeting Jacqueline, Stuckey is more reluctant than ever to go through with the scheme and can't afford to get sentimental. Pull yourself together and show me that deed."

"Why should I?"

"I'll tell you why," replied the Colonel, "because I don't trust you. You say the deed isn't in order, but how do I know? You're probably lying. And if the deed is in order, then the right person to take care of it is not you, and I propose to take charge of it myself."

Charles smiled.

"You're a suspicious devil, Lutman, aren't you?"

"I'm not trusting you in this, anyway," replied the Colonel. "I'd be a fool to trust you. What's to prevent you, when the girl's married, from denying that there was any deed signed and leaving me flat—without a penny? It's just the sort of lousy trick you would play in your present state of mind, and I'm not risking it. I'm going to hold that deed myself."

"In that case, Lutman, you'll have to take it. I'm not giving it to you. That's final."

Lutman's glance traveled from Charles to the safe and back again to Charles, and his hand moved slowly toward his hip pocket; and then he hesitated, seemed to change his mind, took his cigaret case from his waistcoat pocket and held it out.

"Have a cigaret, Charles," he said in a more friendly tone, "and listen to me."

Lutman made a gesture of impatience and that he will have to prepare another, perhaps delaying the wedding.

CHAPTER 22

"You're showing that deed to me!" exclaimed Lutman to Charles in sudden fury. "Signed in the wrong place! Do you expect me to swallow that yarn? Do you think I don't know the game you're playing? Ever since you came to Cobequid and met the girl, you've been playing the same game—playing for time, working for time, working to postpone the marriage. And do you suppose I don't know why? Because you're in love with the girl yourself and can't stand the idea of letting Jim or anyone else marry her. That's your game—as clear as daylight. But it isn't going to come off. Jim Ason is going to marry Jacqueline next Wednesday whatever you or anyone else may do or say. Get that into your head."

"It's there," said Charles. "I expect that's why I've got a headache

ARABIAN MISSION WORK IS STUDIED MILLBROOK MEET

Interesting Program Features St. Andrew's United Church W.M.S. Gathering

BADMINTON FINISHES

(Examiner Correspondence)

MILLBROOK, April 26.— Mrs. (Rev.) A. L. Bigoe, presidev., occupied the chair at the regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's United Church, held in the church parlors, Wednesday afternoon at 3 p.m. Mrs. J. McKnight assisted with the opening devotional service.

March satisfaction was expressed with the special Easter thank offering service and a vote of appreciation to the co-operation of the guest speaker, Miss Marion Coon, was enthusiastically endorsed. A forwarding of greetings was also arranged to be sent Mrs. John Hatherley, a valued member of the Society who is recovering from a recent serious illness. Detailed arrangements were completed for a quilting bee scheduled for the month of May.

A communication from the Presbyterial requested the usual bale, this season's requirements to consist of various articles including one quilt, one sweater, new suits of underwear for men, women and children, two pairs men's socks, two pairs children's hose and any good second hand clothing which can be secured. The secretary hopes to have all articles of the bale ready for shipment June 1st. The letter stated also that the bale packed last year had been forwarded to a needy charge in the dried-out area of southern Saskatchewan, the recipients of which sent gracious thanks in appreciation of the much needed clothing and other utensils.

"Is the Missionary a democrat?" was the subject of a very interesting address delivered by Mrs. Allen Mitchell, the paper being prepared in conjunction with the study book "Men and women in far horizons."

If by being a democrat it is meant "one who lives out the principles of democracy and is really one of the people," the missionary then is a democrat. The people being presented were the Arabs, who can only be won to change ideas or actions by friends. These Arabs are mostly atheists and need to be convinced of the truths of Christianity through individual contact. They travel in caravans and following their day's trip always make camp at sunset. While the cook makes ready the evening meal, consisting mainly of baking powder biscuits, the others usually employ themselves with the gathering of dried grass, chips or other fuel which makes the camp fire, round which the tribe assembles in a circle formation. "This circle means much to the Arab and if the missionary becomes friendly enough to be one of the circle, his opportunity is great" because after eating it is an age-old custom that each and everyone be privileged to tell a story, and the Arabs love stories.

When we recall how often the Master Teacher taught and healed at the sunset hour, we can be sure His presence and power would be very real in such a group at such an hour.

Badminton Season Ends

Members of the Millbrook Garrison Badminton Club have drawn down the curtain on the season's play, finishing off a most successful schedule with a well attended games and social program in the armouries Wednesday evening.

Mrs. D. Tinney and Miss Margaret Simpson were hostesses during the tea hour when a delicious repast was served in the club room lounge. Tea was poured by Miss Ella Elson and served from a daintily laid table set with silver and lace and featured by yellow candles and daffodils.

An impromptu meeting was later called, when the resignation of Dr. L. J. Stuart, as president, was accepted with much regret, and it was decided to purchase two new chairs for use in the club room.

ELDORADO

Mr. Walter Moran spent the week-end at his home at Trenton.

Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Nickle spent Sunday at the home of Dr. F. J. and Mrs. Nickles.

Rev. J. M. White, of Amherst Island, made a trip to Eldorado and Bannockburn on Tuesday. Mr. White was a former pastor here.

Mr. Elmer Chambers left on Wednesday for Cobourg, where he has secured work for the summer.

A large number attended the stone "bee" at Mr. Harry McCoy's farm on Wednesday afternoon. In the vicinity of 25 men were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Empey visited recently with Mrs. Jas. Loves' at Queensboro.

Mr. Wm. Andrews, Doris and Shirley, spent an evening recently at Mr. and Mrs. Fred Campbell's, and were treated to taffy. Owing to poor sap season not many taffy parties took place this year.

Mrs. J. Fitzgerald was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Clark recently.

DURING MOTHERHOOD

WOMEN who suffer from backache and nausea, can be helped by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Read what Mrs. T. Roberts of 126 Superior St., Brantford, Ont., said: "During expectancy and after my children were born, I always found the greatest help in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Before using this medicine, at such times I couldn't rest at night and felt too weak to be on my feet. I hardly had strength enough to get around but the 'Favorite Prescription' soon calmed my nerves and gave me the necessary strength to carry on." Buy now!

New Equipment For Canadian Defence Forces

Hon. Ian Mackenzie, minister of national defence, is mechanizing the defence forces of Canada through the addition of new tanks, aeroplanes and mine sweepers. The Canadian armament plan calls for the use of much British army equipment, some of which is to be manufactured in Canada. Contracts for the construction of large bombing and other types of aeroplanes have already been called for and it is expected contracts for the construction of four mine sweepers will be let about the end of May. Tanks for use by Canadian soldiers, however, are to be built in Great Britain from plans of tanks now in use there. This will also be done in the case of the new Bren gun, an infantry arm which will be distributed to all units to replace the Lewis gun. The Bren gun, shown in the UPPER photograph, is a light machine gun which can be fired from a tripod or from the shoulder. A Czechoslovakian arm, it has been adopted by the British army after four years of experiments. The British tanks, shown in the LOWER photograph, are of a lighter make than those used during the Great War.

NEW MANAGER AT WARKWORTH

V. D. Oliver Of Toronto Appointed Head Of Royal Bank Of Canada

LIBRARY BOARD MEETING

(Examiner Correspondence.)

WARKWORTH, April 26— V. D. Oliver, of Toronto, who has been acting manager for the local bank during the illness and death of J. E. Neill, has now been appointed manager of the Royal Bank here.

Mr. Oliver is a native of Hamilton and has a wide experience in the banking business. During his career he has held responsible positions in Stratford, Montreal, Edmonton, Alta., and Toronto. During the past year he has been connected with the Audit Department in Toronto.

Library Board Meets

A meeting of the Warkworth Public Library was held in the community hall on Thursday evening with a fair attendance of directors and members. Dr. C. C. Armstrong took charge of the meeting.

The main item of business was the appointing of a Treasurer to fill the vacancy caused by the death of late J. E. Neill, also three directors had to be appointed to fill vacancies caused by Mrs. J. E. Neill's resignation and the deaths of Mrs. Clara Richards and Mr. J. E. Neill.

Miss Blanche Baker was appointed Secretary-Treasurer; Rev. Dr. R. Cooper, Mrs. Will Potter and Mrs. Jas. Black are the new directors. A vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Neill for her valued services, and the Secretary was asked to write a letter of appreciation from the Board. Mrs. Neill was also convener of the Book committee and will be greatly missed in the library work. William Kelly was appointed to take her place as convener.

As the Librarian, Miss B. Baker, has taken over the duties as Secretary-Treasurer, the Board increased her salary from $40.00 to $60.00 for 1937.

ST. MARY'S A.Y.P.A.

Kenneth Henderson is Host to St. Mary's Church A.Y.P.A., Lifford Line.

LIFFORD LINE, April 26.— The Anglican Young People's Association of St. Mary's church, Lifford, met on Wednesday evening at the home of a member, Kenneth Henderson, west of Lifford.

In spite of heavy rainfall and high winds, fourteen members were present for an enjoyable evening.

The president, Ben Page, presided and those Lifford Line boys, Glenn Tans, Lawrence Staples and Kenneth Henderson, formed a committee in charge of proceedings, which were of a social nature.

Four tables of progressive card games were occupied for a jolly series of games. At the conclusion when scores were counted, the winners were declared to be Miss Muriel Hannah and Vernon Young, who were presented with suitable prizes.

SPLENDID REPORTS READ AT MEETING

Millbrook Society Decides Against Sending Delegate To Toronto Conference

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, April 26—A goodly number of members attended the regular meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of St. Thomas' Anglican church held at the home of Mrs. C. M. Westmacott, president of the society, when encouraging reports were received, that of the treasurer's being especially gratifying. Mrs. H. Russell, Dorcas Secretary, made further reference to the bale which consists of an outfit for an Indian girl at the Blackfoot Mission Field and stated that extra quilts had been requested for western relief.

The annual meeting of the Toronto diocese, of which the local society is a unit, is being held in Toronto during the first week in May. There will be no delegate sent from the St. Thomas branch this year but their correspondent will be in attendance and will forward reports of the various sessions. SELWYN DRAMA WELL RECEIVED

INTERESTING STORY

(Examiner Correspondence.)

SELWYN, April 26—On Wednesday evening, April 21, one of the best amateur plays ever presented in Selwyn for a long time was enacted by the Young People of Regent St., United Church, Lakefield, namely, "Take My Advice." It was a 3-act dramatic comedy and held the interest of the audience until the final curtain.

It would be difficult to distinguish the fine acting of anyone of the players, as each one simply gave all they had, and actually lived the story through from beginning to end.

Despite the stormy night there was a fair-sized audience in attendance, who thoroughly enjoyed every moment.

The W.A. of the church very kindly served delicious refreshments of sandwiches, pie, cake and tea the cast at the conclusion of the play. Home-made candy was also sold throughout the audience between acts.

The cast of characters follows: Bob Mannion, Robert Spence; Jimmy Bamson, Earl Robinson; Jud Fenton, Clifford Hurl; John Wargrim, Rev. G. F. Kelly; Peggy Acton, Marion Payne; Virgy Mannion, Eva Hendren; Mrs. Nelson Dodd, Phyllis Webster and Marcia Wargrim, Nora Webster. The play was under the direction of Rev. G. F. Kelly.

3 GREAT MEDICAL DISCOVERIES LAID BEFORE SCIENTISTS

New Pneumonia Treatment Cuts Death-Rate Three-Quarters

FIND PERITONITIS CURE

By Howard W. Blakeslee
(Associated Press Science Editor.)

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 26 (AP)—Three medical discoveries, a pneumonia treatment that cut the death-rate three-quarters, an extract of white blood cellsf rom dogs that saved otherwise fatal cases of peritonitis, and finding the nerves that control the making of bile, were reported to 1,000 scientists today.

The pneumonia treatment covered 1,500 cases of all types at all ages at the Louisiana State University medical centre, New Orleans. It was reported to the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology by Clyde Brooks, M.D.

One half of the patients, he said, received the standard pneumonia treatments, the other half by injection of a protein substance which Dr. Brooks said, his medical friends think ought not to work.

But, he said, the death-rate of those treated with the protein was 16 per cent. in lobar pneumonia against 39 per cent. for patients receiving all the usual pneumonia remedies. The death-rate was nine per cent. in broncho-pneumonia against 32 per cent. The cases covered five years.

The medical name of the protein is deutert protease or secondary protease. It is made from Fibrin, the substance which causes blood to clot.

Use of White Blood Cells

Bernhard Steinberg, M.D., of the Toledo Hospital, Toledo, Ohio, reported a method, the first of its kind, of putting the white blood cells of one animal to work in curing disease of not only another animal but of a different species including a human being.

The white blood cells, leukocytes, are the scavengers of both men and animals, their job being to destroy infections of all kinds.

Laboratory scientists have known for some time that it is possible to extract these living disease fighters from the body but Dr. Steinberg discovered a method of speeding up the extraction by sixfold. This gives him a large number of leukocytes which can be transferred to the body of another animal or to a human being while they are still alive and active.

He used the leukocytes obtained from one dog to cure peritonitis in another dog.

Nerves In The Liver

The "bile nerve" discovery is new knowledge about the structure of the human body. Bile is secreted by the liver. For some years it has been known that hormones, powerful chemical substances, carried by the blood, stimulate the liver to produce bile.

It also was suspected nerves running to the liver could cause the same thing independently of the hormones. Proof that this sort of bile production exists and is telegraphed along the nerves direct from the brain was reported by C. A. Tanturri and A. C. Ivy of the Department of Northwestern University medical school.

Child Creates Scare Playing With Matches

THE danger of leaving matches within the reach of young children was demonstrated early Friday evening, when the 2-year-old child of Mrs. J. Howard, 238 Antrim street, playing with matches, set fire to some papers in a cupboard of the family's upstairs apartment. Fortunately noticing the fire when it was in an incipient stage, Mrs. Howard summoned the fire brigade and pending arrival of firemen doused the flames with a bucket of water. The services of the brigade were not needed, although the firemen responded with smart promptness in answer to the call. At 10.58 a.m. to-day the brigade attended a chimney outbreak at the Legion Hall.

Suddenly—NO SALARY

Day by day your wife and family live and flourish through your earning power. While you live you will care for your loved ones. But if you were not here to provide for them, how would they fare?

Imagine your household, suddenly, with no salary — no income. Is that what would happen in case of your death?

Be sensible about death; it is a possibility any time—a certainty, eventually. Whether you live or die you want your family to "carry on"—honourably and creditably.

You cannot live forever yourself but you can arrange that if anything should happen to you your salary would go on just the same until your dependents could adjust themselves gradually to another scale of living.

For about 10c a day (a trifling amount you must admit) you can guarantee the payment to your family of $100 a month, or over $3 a day for a full year after your death. Wouldn't that be a fine supplement to your other life insurance?

"Financial Security through Life Insurance", by Paul Speicher, an international authority, is an interesting book which should be read by everyone who plans to provide financial security for himself and family. Your local Imperial Life representative will make a copy available to you without cost.

LONDON'S FLOOD DAMAGE WILL BE $3,000,000

Worst Flood Since 1883 Strikes Western Ontario

Swollen to torrential proportions by heavy rains, Western Ontario witnessed the worst flood since 1883, with almost every village and hamlet in the London, St. Marys, Ingersoll, St. Thomas, Woodstock and Tillsonburg districts reporting flood waters rising, homes damaged, main streets submerged and outlying districts flooded. Scenes such as the one shown above, are common throughout the Western portion of the province. The above photograph, taken near Ingersoll, Ont, shows the flood waters completely covering what was a roadway. Note the trees and homes in the background isolated by flood waters.

Dams Go Out Tillsonburg Is Isolated

Only One Road Open, Bridges Tumble In Town's Worst Flood

WOODSTOCK WATERS DROP

Gangs Battle To Repair Railways And Roads—Stratford Streets Appear Again

TILLSONBURG, Ont., April 27.—(CP)—Tillsonburg, 26 miles east of St. Thomas, was an isolated community today, cut off by road from al other communities with the exception of Brownsville, a small village nine miles to the west. In the worst flood in the memory of the town's oldest residents, two big dams have burst, one bridge has been washed away and the highways leading out of the town were blocked to through traffic either because of inundation, or because of trouble in the Ingersoll district.

In the valley of the Otter through which runs No. 59 highway just south and west of the town; the Borden milk plant was flooded out of operation Monday. The highway at this point was flooded to such a depth motor traffic could not reach town from the west.

On No. 3 highway east of the town, Whites' bridge collapsed Monday night and was carried more than 100 yards down stream. Traffic to the east of Tillsonburg was effectively barred thereafter, no detours being passible.

Lake Dam Goes.

The Lake St. Joseph dam broke last night and the domestic water supply conduits laid along its top snapped as a gap some 80 feet wide was created. The town's drinking supply was supplied in the emergency at low pressure and in limited quantities from wells on a farm to the north.

Lake Lisgard, another artificial lake in the northern part of the town, from which the town obtained water for its fire hydrant system, was drained almost empty when the Concession street dam, creating the lake, burst. A gap about 150 feet wide and said to be 50 feet deep, was worn out by the rush of water when this dam burst.

Woodstock Situation Eases.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., April 27 (C. P.) — With flood waters receding appreciably on all sides of the city, workmen to-day endeavored to restore some semblance of a return to normal in the still water-covered areas.

On the 13th Line, where the washout of the railway crossing caused temporary abandonment of this section of the C.P.R. main line yesterday, a work crew completed a temporary fill and it was expected that trains would be running over the line to-day.

One concession across, where the 12th Line forms a part of No. 19 Highway, it will be necessary to replace the bridge, it was announced by provincial authorities. Here the approaches to the present bridge have been almost washed away. Trucks were forbidden use of the bridge yesterday, but until to-day passenger cars took the chance of

Hit By Train Car Carried For 300 Feet

Two Brothers, Wife, Two Children And Driver's Fiancee 23, Are Victims

ALL FROM SUDBURY

SUDBURY, Ont., April 27. (CP)—Investigation proceeded to-day into Northern Ontario's most disastrous level crossing accident as preparations were made for funerals of the six victims.

The six, all but one members of the Stesco family, were killed last night when their automobile was struck by a westbound Canadian Pacific Railway train at the Copper Cliff depot crossing. The sixth, Miss Gladys Laverne McDonald, 23, was engaged to be married to Alex Stesco, driver of the car.

When the auto was struck by the locomotive it burst into flames and was carried 300 feet along the track. Although the bodies were terribly burned, doctors said they believed death was caused by the impact.

Alex Stesco's brother, W. J. Stesco, and Mrs. Stesco and their two children were with the engaged couple. The children were Patrick, two, and Robert, seven months old.

The brothers were employed at the Ontario Refinery here and it is believed th party decided on a short drive after Alex finished work. Miss McDonald's father is baggage master at the Sudbury office of the C.P.R.

The Stesco car was travelling toward Copper Cliff on the Sudbury-Sault Ste. Marie highway when it came to the crossing in the path of the train, described by officials as extra No. 188. The automobile somersaulted and was mashed along the tracks in flames, pulling off a switch standard as it went.

King Rides Launch To Open Museum

LONDON, April 27.—(CP)— The King and Queen rode down the River Thames today in a green-hulled admiral's launch to open the Greenwich Maritime Museum devoted to the history of British sea power.

In addition to a collection of early instruments of navigation and other mementos of maritime history, the museum will house a magnificent collection of seascapes and paintings of British seafarin notables.

Switchman Sacrifices Freight Avoids Tragic Express Wreck

Engine, Tender, Box Car Plow Out On Highway As Passenger Train Slips Safely By

BLOCK ALL TRAFFIC

WINDSOR, Ont., April 27.—(CP)—A switchman's split second action in pulling a switch and throwing a heavy freight engine, tender and one box car off the rails avoided a possible tragic train wreck yesterday at the intersection of the Pere Marquette and Michigan Central Railway lines at Felton Junction, 12 miles southwest of the city, it was learned today.

From his tower above the tracks the switchman saw a passenger train bound for Windsor on the main line, clicking along at top speed. On the Pere Marquette line, which crosses the M.C.R. almost at a right angle, there was a freight with 76 box cars, and it took the switchman only a second to realize that they were going to meet if nothing was done.

The towerman set the signals against the freight and then, apparently fearing it would not be able to stop in time, or that the engine crew had not seen the changed signal, he pulled a switch that derailed the freight locomotive off the rails. When it left the rails it landed on the highway, close by the railway line at that point.

With the freight off the track, the fast passenger train slipped through the intersection without harm. Some reports had it that the switchman also set the signals against the passenger train. However, it stopped after passing the crossing, but proceeded in a few minutes.

After the derailment the freight engine blocked all traffic on the highway, and wrecking crews hastily summoned tried to move it.

CANADA'S PURSE STRINGS LOOSEN SURVEY REVEALS

March Bank Debits Jump $590,926,000 Over Figures For Same Month In 1936

NEW CONFIDENCE

OTTAWA, April 27.—(CP)—Canadians are betting on prosperity. A new confidence in the economic future has resulted in a loosening of purse strings as shown by an upward spurt in withdrawals from bank accounts in March.

March bank debits across Canada jumped to $3,189,836,000 from $2,731,034,000 in February and $2,598,810,000 in March, 1936.

There is more money to spend. At the start of the month total bank deposits were $2,369,000,000 compared with $2,330,300,000 in February and $2,152,000,000 in March last year; savings accounts were up to $1,583,800,000 against $1,548,600,000 and $1,517,300,000.

That alone does not account for the upswing in amounts drawn by cheque, however, compared with what they have, people are spending more. The ratio on March debits to the total amount on deposit at the beginning of the month was 134.8 against 117.2 in February and 120.8 in the previous March.

Cows Bedded Down In Home As Flood Drives Family Out

Londoner Decides House Is Drier Than Barn So Moves His Livestock

FIREMEN ASSIST

LONDON, Ont., April 27 (CP)—Robert Topping and his family escaped from their flooded home on the Springbank drive near McAlpine street yesterday but some cows and other livestock were left there. Today city firemen took Mr. Topping out in a rowboat to see his livestock.

When they got out there they found the barn badly flooded but the animals alive. So with the aid of the firemen Mr. Topping drove his cattle from the barn into the house. They were fed and left in the house, the highest spot on the premises.

When the firemen and Mr. Topping were returning they came to a house where two men had been trapped all night. The two men were loaded into the boat and brought out.

Goats Before Cows N.J. Women's Slogan

Paterson, N.J., April 27. (CP)

UNDER women's leadership, caprie culturists of Passaic, Essex and Morris counties are getting ready to enshrine the goat above the cow as a producer of milk.

They hope to make New Jersey goat conscious through an educational campaign, stressing not only the nutritious advantage of goats' milk, but the value of the animal to families in financial distress.

Sponsors of the society that is to accomplish this are more than 50 goat owners, headed by Mrs. Channing W. Gibson, Pine Brook club woman, and Mrs. Russell D. Hobson of Great Notch, who has kept goats for 35 years and has five robust sons to testify to the nourishment goats' milk affords.

EDWARD STARTS DAMAGES ACTION OVER NEW BOOK

Writ Is Filed Despite Apologies By Author, Publisher And Issue's Withdrawal

ADVICE OF COUNSEL

LONDON, April 27.—(AP)— The Duke of Windsor to-day filed an action for alleged libel damages and an injunction against the author and publishers of "Coronation Commentary," a best seller dealing with his reign and abdication as Edward VIII.

The writ was filed through the Duke's London solicitors, despite the fact that both author and publisher had proffered an apology and the publisher had announced the book was being withdrawn.

On advice of counsel, it was learned, the Duke decided to proceed with his threatened suit for damages and for an injunction against further publication.

The action is directed against Geoffrey Dennis, author, and William Heinemann, publisher. The book purported among other things to describe Edward's "Muddling, fuddling and meddling" while King.

Allen and Overy, London solicitors, filed the suit.

6,000 Homeless As Floods Cut Off Big Section of City

Three Officials Of Ontario Department Of Health Rushed To Flood Scene

15,000 WORKERS IDLE

Two Weeks Before One Of Pumping Stations Be Ready For Work

LONDON, Ont., April 27 (CP) — Roaring waters of the Thames River passed their flood crest shortly before noon today, and a still bewildered population, many of them homeless, started to count the terrific toll of the worst flood disaster of the century in London.

In the wake of receding waters was left property damage conservatively estimated at $3,000,000; mounting menace of disease; one man drowned; 6,000 without homes, and all of south London completely isolated to motor traffic.

Pouring down both branches of the Thames into west London and half a dozen other districts, extending in a vast semi-circle throughout the city, the flood waters flowed into hundreds of homes, while a continuous stream of refugees fled before the advancing water for hours last night.

Rushing to London to aid in the fight to prevent a feared typhoid epidemic came three officials of the Ontario Department of Health at noon. Medical officials considered a general order that all evacuated residents should be innoculated before returning to their homes.

General Holiday.

In effect, a general holiday was proclaimed throughout the city, while industrial forces rallied to conserve dangerously scanty supplies of drinking water and electrical power. An estimated 15,000 workers were idle as manufacturers responded to the urgent plea of Mayor T. P. Kingsmill that water be saved for drinking purposes.

As the immediate peril of flood seemed passed, came the new danger of fires. Fire Chief Charles Scott issued a warning to residents of the city to be "extremely careful" to avoid all fire hazards, while water pressure continues low.

With interiors of the scores of inundated houses covered with river slime, and battered by the force of the current, at least a week must pass before most of the stranded can return to their homes. Meanwhile Red Cross and a dozen other social service agencies struggled to provide accommodation for the homeless.

LONDON'S WATER SITUATION SERIOUS

Supply Dwindles With Pumping Stations Down—Power Hard Hit

LONDON, Ont., April 27. (CP) — Faced with a catastrophe without precedent in the city's history, superintendents of all departments of the Public Utilities Commission held an emergency meeting and discovered that the water supply is in a most precarious condition, that power is being maintained under difficulty and all electrical companies throughout the province and especially in this district have offered every available assistance.

Immediately following the meeting E. V. Buchan, general manager of the commission issued a statement that "the only reason that water and hydro services are being maintained is to meet emergencies." He indicated that if all residents did not co-operate in conserving both water and light it may be necessary to cut off both.

All water must be boiled, since the present supply hinged on the Springbank sources. Closed since early last evening the Springbank pumping station was opened before noon and is operating now. It is expected that extra gangs of men will put the east end pumping station in the water system sometime this afternoon. But only a limited supply can come from this section of the city and it will be heavily chlorinated in order to prevent disease.

The Ridout street sub-station has been completely cut off. This removed 10,000 horsepower from the city's supply of 25,000 horse-power. All demanded power is being supplied from the other sub-stations.

Dynamos, pumps, transformers valued at $50,000 in the Ridout street station are standing in three feet of water. Last night men put a 15 ton transformer on a crane to keep some of the power at the station.

Trade Pact Is Advanced After Split

British Liberal Move To Drop Margin Of Preference On Canadian Products Is Defeated

VOTE GOES 225 TO 118

By George Hambleton
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, April 27. — (CP Cable.) —A resolution approving the Anglo-Canadian trade agreement passed the report stage in the House of Commons to-day after an opposition Liberal amendment had been defeated by a vote of 225 to 118.

The effect of the amendment, moved by D. M. Foot, would have been to strike out the fixed margin of preference in favor of Canadian wheat, butter, cheese, raw sinned apples, pears, eggs in the shell, fish, unwrought copper and timber of all kinds.

Foot argued that the House was being asked to provide a fixed margin of preference which it would have no power to reduce during the three years of life of the agreement. Essential foodstuffs were rising in price. It was generally agreed that the rise was likely to continue for some time.

The House might with during the next three years to remove some of the duties on foodstuffs, but under the agreement it would be prohibited from doing so without committing a breach of faith with the Canadian government. Britain's hands also would be tied in any tariff negotiations she might wish to enter upon in the near future.

U.A.W. Organizing Brantford Local

BRANTFORD, Ont., April 27.—(CP)—Organization of a Brantford local of the United Automobile Workers' of America is underway, and at a meeting held in the Labor Hall last night some 100 members were signed for the local union.

The meeting was called under the auspices of the Organization Committee of the Brantford Trades and Labor Council and was addressed by C. H. Millard, president of the Oshawa local of the U.A.W. A., and W. Watkinson, a member of the Oshawa executive. The decision to form a local here was made unanimously by the meeting.

The Oshawa representatives said they would return to Brantford within a week to assist in furthering the organization plans here, and it is expected the charter for the local union will be received here by that time.

Nazi Bombers Kill Hundreds As Ancient Basque City Razed

Civilians Rush Into Fields Only To Be Mowed Down By Aerial Gunners

CRUISERS SHELL VALENCIA

GUERNICA, Spain, April 27. (AP) Hundreds of civilians were killed and this ancient city, once capital of the Basque country, was left a mass of blazing ruins to-day after 3½ hours' insurgent, aerial bombardment.

The raid started yesterday when bombing planes identified as of German manufacture roared over the city in groups of seven, accompanied by large detachments of pursuit planes.

Besides regular aerial bombs, scores of hand grenades were hurled into the city while the populace scrambled for shelter. Hundreds of persons ran into open fields where they became targets for swooping machine gunners.

It was impossible to make an separate count of the casualties but a correspondent for the Reuters' News Agency estimated hundreds of men, women and children were dead. More than 60 persons were trapped in a bomb shelter that burst into flames.

FLOOD WATERS DITCH EXPRESS CLAIM 4 LIVES

Engineer, Fireman, Transient Killed As Flier Hits Washout Near Woodstock

DOCTOR DROWNS ON WAY

Car Is Swirled Off Bridge And Carried Over Mile—Body Missing

WOODSTOCK, Ont., April 27 (C.P.). — Hampered by floods that harried this Oxford dairy district, investigators to-day studied the Beachville washout-wreck that cost four persons their lives yesterday. Two members of the crew of the track Chicago-Montreal flyer and an unknown transient died when it hit a washout on the Canadian National Railways main line, four miles west of here. A doctor drowned when his car was swept off a bridge as he drove to the wreck scene.

Engineer Malcolm Isbister, Sarnia, was at the throttle of No. 6, roaring eastward when the locomotive plunged into the washout in a 10-foot embankment. He and Fireman Norman R. Aiken, also of Sarnia, were dead when taken from the wreckage. The body of the man who was riding the rods and whose identity was unknown, was not found, and it was presumed he had been swept away in the flood.

Dr. J. R. MacDonald, Ingersoll's Medical Health Officer, was speeding eastward on No. 2 Highway and crossing a bridge near Beachville when two horrified onlookers saw the machine suddenly swept from the structure. He was seen to wave his hand frantically as the torrent caught his car like driftwood. His body had not been located after an all-night search, but the car was seen 1½ miles away, near the bank of the swollen Thames River.

Passengers Escape.

No passengers aboard the flyer were hurt, but the baggageman, William Oyler, Brantford, and a second transient, Alyre Leblanc, a French-Canadian, suffered minor injuries. Leblanc, in an Ingersoll hospital, told how a man with whom he was riding "blind baggage" and whose name he did not know, rolled off into the water and disappeared.

Rains which precipitated the worst flood this famed dairying district ever experienced, were blamed as the cause of the derailment in an official C.N.R. statement issued at Toronto. The accident, W. A. Kingsland, vice-president of the Central Region, said, "was due to the bursting of a dam at Woodstock" at seven o'clock Monday morning.

Flood waters of the Thames ate away the underpinning of the tracks so secretly and quickly that a way freight working on an adjacent siding little more than an hour before was unaffected and a west-bound train had passed over the washout.

"When train No. 6 approached there was nothing to indicate the track had been undermined," said Kingsland. "It appears that the embankment gave way under the weight of the locomotive and the engine, tender and two baggage

The bull will not be handed over until August, after it has appeared in Western Canada exhibitions. It may also be shown at Toronto.

The decree stipulates that Germans of "double nationality" are not exempted from this requirement, and that recruiting reports must indicate knowledge of foreign language and membership in German associations and organizations.

RAMPAGING OHIO LAPS PITTSBURGH GOLDEN TRIANGLE

Several Thousand Forced From Homes In Pennsylvania, Virginia Border

FOUR LIVES LOST

PITTSBURGH, April 27 (A.P.).—Into the edge of the "Golden Triangle," Pittsburgh's rich business district, flood waters crept to-day and moved onward slowly to an expected crest of 36 feet, 11 feet above the flood stage but 10 feet below the crest of the St. Patrick's Day, 1936, flood.

Several thousand had been forced from their homes in Pennsylvania and along the western border of West Virginia by the flood and the crests in West Virginia were not expected before Wednesday or Thursday.

Rains—which had beaten on the Ohio Valley almost incessantly for three days—stopped but only after sending the rivers to their highest points in more than a year.

The loss of four lives were laid indirectly to the flood. Three railroad workers were killed when they were hit by a train. A woman dropped dead of heart disease at Johnstown when she was warned of the flood. Damage there was estimated at $100,000.

Closes Two Schools.

The river here lapped at the base of the Central Police Station on Water Street, covered parts of Penn and Liberty Avenues in the downtown areas and section of the Pennsylvania and Baltimore and Ohio railroad yards. Two schools were closed.

More than 4,000 steel workers were laid off by the closing of 11 open hearth furnaces of the Jones and Laughlin Steel Company. The plants will be re-opened when the flood subsides.

Moving on slowly, the Ohio forced more than 2,000 persons to leave their homes on the Island, one of the better residential sections at Wheeling, W. Va., brought the organization of emergency rescue crews and the mobilization of hundreds of workers. Brotzman said the crest at that city of 35,000 people may be 45 feet, eight feet above the flood stage, early on Thursday.

NORTH HASTINGS MILL HAS BIG CUT

Hubbel And Son Have Nearly 100 Men At Work And 125,000 Logs On Hand

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, April 27—Messrs. U. A. Hubbel & Son, largest lumber manufacturers of North Hastings, have commenced sawing operations on one of the biggest cuts the firm has yet attempted to manufacture. The cut includes approximately 125,000 logs of hard and soft timber, which will saw out approximately seven million feet of lumber, it is estimated. Nearly one hundred men are at present employed in and out of the mill. It is expected that work will continue through the summer until fall.

Announcement has been made that Mr. G. Weir of Bancroft has purchased a site from Harold Wheeler on the Hastings Road about three miles north of the village of Bancroft, and intends to construct a cheese factory. It is expected that building operations will commence at once, and the factory will be ready for operation by May 15th.

Japanese interests will spend $30,000,000 for new machinery and equipment and plant construction in North China.

THE Royal Road TO THE CORONATION

Their Majesties and the Queen Mother show an interest in toys

EACH presentation of the British Industries Fair presents a larger edition of the original. Wembley Exhibition was called the "showcase of the empire" and perhaps this term could even more properly be applied to the gigantic industrial fairs of recent years.

The royal family have been loyal and appreciative patrons of the industrial presentations since their inception and King George and Queen Elizabeth will not let that patronage lapse. Even since their accession, with the great press of work which the King in particular has been called upon to bear, they have made their tour through the Birmingham and White City exhibitions and studied at first hand the products which the empire and the world have for sale.

The Queen Mother accompanied them on the last occasion, a visit not new to her, but one which British industry appreciates. The humblest body of the New York city buyer which American newspapers featured widely a few weeks ago illustrates the non-formality of the visits and the desire of the royal party to see through the same eyes that world visitors use when visiting this factual record of industrial progress. On that occasion the buyer found himself face to face with the royal party, interested as he was in the products of Sheffield's cutlery experts. No official exclusion was practised here, but before very many minutes had passed, the visitor from New York and Britain's royal family had met and exchanged the courtesies of new acquaintanceship.

Royal visits, of course, are not planned for the royal family's interest alone. They are good business; they stimulate public interest and draw sightseers and prospective customers. But that too is part of the burden of royalty.

To-day's picture shows the King and Queen and Queen Mary in the toy section of the British Industries Fair at White City. With two young

Storied Yukon About To Come Under British Columbia's Wing

Arrangements Are All But Completed Between Premier Pattullo And Ottawa

207,000 SQUARE MILES

VICTORIA, April 27.—(CP).—The Yukon, storied land of hope and of disappointment, prosperity and hardship, heroism but seldom cowardice, will come within the boundaries of British Columbia if governmental proposals are accepted by Dominion and Provincial legislative bodies.

Premier T. B. Pattullo announced yesterday agreement had been reached with the Federal Government for acquisition of Yukon Territory by the coast province which anticipated the Territory's great wealth will offset expenditures.

Inclusion of the Yukon's 207,000 square miles would give British Columbia a total area of 373,331 square miles, second only among the provinces to Quebec's 594,534.

In announcing the plan, Mr. Pattullo, who served the Yukon through the hectic years of 1899 to '99 as assistant gold commissioner, said it was believed the Territory's interests would be better served under provincial jurisdiction.

The Terms.

He announced these terms of the proposed agreement:

BRITISH CLOSE IN ON FAKIR OF IPI

Troops Reported Within Five Miles Of Secret Valley Stronghold

SIMLA, India, April 27. — (CP-Havas).—A strong British punitive force, pushing southward through Waziristan, to-day was reported approaching the stronghold of the Fakir of Ipi, "champion of Islam," whose raiders have taken heavy toll of British troops in repeated attacks in the northwest frontier region.

The Fakir's stronghold, recent advices said, was a secret cave between the Kabalsers and Shakty valleys. Latest reports said the Fakir had enlisted rebellious elements in the Sham region and was in the Khaisora valley. The vanguard of the British forces was within five miles of this region.

Thus far the British forces, supported by five companies of light tanks and two squadrons of aircraft, have met comparatively little resistance. Camp Tochi and various strategic points in the Miral region were occupied by the troops. In the course of week-end skirmishes two British soldiers were killed and eight wounded, with the Fakir's raiders suffering considerably heavier casualties.

Thames Rockets Up 28 Feet Over Night Cutting Off Roads

Water And Milk Famine Threatens As Supplies Are Isolated

DROWNING REPORTED

Hundreds Of Thousands Done In Damage—Schools, Factories Shut

LONDON, Ont., April 27.—(CP).—The City of London, in the heart of Western Ontario, struggled today to repel the worst flood in its history after a night of hurried evacuation of 6,000 persons from their homes.

Dikes by the score rose to hold back the swollen waters of the Thames river—both north and south branches, converging here—was estimated in hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Fed by heavy rains the waters reached an all-time record of 28 feet above normal and threatened to wreck city bridges. One man was believed drowned, swept from a boat last night.

Shortage in the city's water supply is inevitable. The city early today was almost cut off by highway, and there was only a skeleton railway service from the east.

Record rains of the past week were blamed for the Thames going on its mad rush. After almost 48 hours of continuous rain and wet snow, during which precipitation measured four inches there was a halt in the downpour. Forecasts for the area indicated occasional rain.

First Drowning

The one drowning was reported when a boat capsized near St. Patrick's School in London west. Two men were dumped into the water. Charles Selby, of Manor Park, was rescued but his companion—known only as "Joe"—was swept out of sight.

Power boats, pressed into service when row boats proved ineffective in the strong current, sought the missing man without success.

Mayor T. P. Kingsmill's warning early last night that homes be evacuated sent thousands hurrying to safety.

In London west the river topped the $10,000 breakwater and police estimated 4,500 in that area were made homeless temporarily at least.

Other hundreds were evacuated in Broughdale, where many costly homes stand. Homes in Chelsea Green, where many working people live, were also evacuated.

Broughdale is just outside the northern city limits. Chelsea Green is in the southeast section of London.

Entire facilities of the Red Cross, supplemented by municipal, military and other organizations were pressed into service to look after flood refugees. Hundreds of homes were thrown open.

Armouries Opened.

The armories were placed at the disposal of the Red Cross by the Department of National Defence and cots and blankets were brought from the commissariat of Military District No. 1.

Flood waters put the pumping station out of commission. Water supply from artesian wells was put off and the city left dependent upon the Springbank Park reservoir.

While there is sufficient pressure from the reservoir to provide ordinary needs, officials feared they would be unable to cope with fire outbreaks.

The reservoir has a capacity of

FUTURE SLUMP WARNINGS GIVEN

British Statesmen Urge Industries Prepare For Time When Arms Program Finished

By Edwin S. Johnson
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, April 27 (C.P.).—Warnings against the danger of a disastrous economic slump unless a far-sighted policy is adopted by major industries are being sounded daily by British statesmen and business men.

All are agreed on the need of bold measures to guard against disturbances which might arise when the nation's rearmament program has been completed.

Latest to sound a note of caution is Sir Robert Horne, former Chancellor of the Exchequer. Addressing members of the Constitutional Club, he denied returning prosperity was entirely due to the arms program, but agreed it was essential to adopt some form of a "shock absorber" to take care of the inevitable inquestion.

"I feel that plans must be made for that event. In the meantime it would seem obvious to all of us that every process of general work which can be delayed should be given the go-by till the time when people will demand them at the end of the re-armament program," said Sir Robert.

The country was enjoying a record of manufacturing products, he said, industries had revived to such an extent that retail sales were higher than ever before, and all classes of the community were living in conditions of greater prosperity and more people were employed than ever before.

Home-Building And Construction Jobs In B.C. To Cost $12,000,000

PRIVATE CAPITAL

VANCOUVER, April 27 (CP) — Private construction showed government-financed projects from the foreground of British Columbia's building picture today as warmer weather found civic and municipal offices issuing hundreds of permits for homes, stores, schools, hotels and factories.

For the first time since the depression put its damper on industrial expansion, government expenditure was forced into second place by private enterprise, building executives said. Higher prices for manufactured goods increased production, bigger payrolls and the federal government's Home Improvement Loan scheme helped speed the clatter of builder's tools.

A province-wide survey of building and construction jobs costing more than $5,000—on which work had begun or for which contracts had been let—showed more than $8,000,000 private capital would be expended, mostly this year, while federal and provincial administrations had contracted for about $4,000,000.

In addition, proposed projects through the province, which seemed likely to start this year, total roughly $8,000,000. Principal jobs in this list include an assembly plant for Ford Motor Company of Canada, costing $600,000 at Burnaby, suburb of Vancouver; an addition to Victoria's post office, $250,000; a federal building costing $150,000, and a pulp mill estimated to cost $5,000,000, both in Prince Rupert; a hospital extension in Vancouver, $460,000, and a $500,000 dock extension at New Westminster.

A $20,000,000 pulp mill proposed by interests represented in Vancouver by J. P. Meehan and Company, is indefinitely delayed while the company seeks a suitable site.

Carpenters, painters, plasterers, plumbers and electricians put their tools in order to handle a record number of small jobs, from building new homes to putting the finishing touches on bare yard fences.

Steel work progressed on the new provincial government - backed bridge across the Fraser River at New Westminster, and work will be started shortly on the $6,000,000 First Narrows bridge over the entrance to Vancouver's harbor.

Electrical workers had two big projects in the offing, both for the British Columbia Electric Railway Company. Permits for construction of an $64,500 substation building in Vancouver were issued recently and equipment valued at about $900,000 will be installed. At Ruskin, B.C., in the Fraser Valley, the company will increase by 47,000 horsepower the capacity of one of its Stave River plants. The changes at Ruskin will cost roughly $1,500,000.

Federal government works will provide much employment, with more than $1,000,000 expenditure already contracted. Vancouver's biggest Dominion jobs will be reconstruction of warehouses at the National Harbor Board's grain elevator—costing $647,000—and building of hangars, a bulkhead and slipways at the Vancouver base of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

ANCIENT COACHES ARE DUSTED OFF

British Nobility Revive Horse And Carriage Days For The Coronation

LONDON, April 27—(AP)—Horse-and-buggy days are here again for the noblemen of England, who are dragging from forgotten stables famous old coaches to ride in to Westminster Abbey, May 12.

The Earl Marshal, the Duke of Norfolk, will ride in state, and other peers, among them the Duke of Buccleugh, Earl Spencer, the Marquess of Londonderry and the Marquess of Exeter, are going to follow suit.

From dusty old stables and coach-houses, creaky, rattling vehicles, unused for generations, have been hauled out, greased and polished, redecorated and draped for the great May day.

With large spidery wheels, draped coachmen's boxes, family coats-of-arms, emblazoned in panels on the sides, the whole contraption slung on strap springs, these old relics of past glory will wheel notables through the crowded streets of London to the Abbey.

Old family coaches may be used, but no "rubbernecks" wagons. London Traffic Commissioner Gleeson Robinson has banned rubbernecks tours in London during Coronation week. Tourist agencies are up in arms. They say they will lose £500,000 worth of business. Visitors will be furious, they say.

Commissioner Robinson says the matter is closed. Tourists will have to walk or ride the buses or in private cars.

Luxury Liner Atlantic Lost Off N.S. Coast 64 Years Ago

Five Hundred And Sixty-Three Lives Lost In Mars Head Tragedy

LIFEBOATS DESTROYED

HALIFAX, April 27.—(CP)—Sixty-four years ago this month, Nova Scotia saw one of the worst steamship wrecks in its history when the luxury liner Atlantic piled up on Mars Head, 30 miles from the entrance to Halifax harbor, with the loss of 563 lives.

The story of the Atlantic was a tragic one, for the very nature of the wreck made death strike hardest at those unable to do anything to save themselves. Of the more than 40 women and children aboard, only one young boy lived to tell of his experience.

The Atlantic left Liverpool March 20, 1873 for New York, with 953 persons; 34 cabin passengers, 776 steerage passengers and a crew of 143. Heavy weather delayed the ship on her westward crossing until, after 19 days at sea, she was still three days' journey from New York with what her officers considered an insufficient coal supply.

The ship had taken the northern trans-atlantic route and was off the coast of Nova Scotia when her coal supply was said to be running low. Captain and officers agreed the best thing to be done was to put about and run for Halifax to refuel, and on March 31 the vessel turned for the Canadian port.

At midnight it was believed the ship was about 46 miles off Sambro Light near the entrance to Halifax harbor, but at 3.15 in the morning she ran aground 20 miles west and south of her supposed position.

Disaster came swiftly to the proud Atlantic. A startled lookout saw white water, screamed "breakers or ice ahead"; a second officer's hand flashed down to the telegraph signal to ring for full speed astern—but too late. The Atlantic crashed upon the rocks going 12 knots an hour, almost her capacity speed.

In a few seconds, pounding waves had smashed all the port lifeboats; the ship gave a sickening lurch that made useless the boats on the starboard side, and that lurch spelled death for more than 500 persons.

Lifeboats Destroyed.

For the heeling over of a beaten ship did more than make unusable the starboard lifeboats. Down in the depths of the vessel, it twisted bulkhead and framework, trapping the steerage passengers in their quarters. Only those who had managed to get on deck before the fatal lurch had any chance of being saved.

The death toll would have been higher had it not been for the heroism of third officer C. L. Brady and first officer O. Firth. Brady battled his way through pounding breakers to the flat rock 40 yards ahead of the ship, carrying a lifeline, while Firth remained in the rigging of the ship at the other end of the line. Over that single strand passed most of those saved.

But it was men who passed over the lifeline. Women and children were hopelessly trapped below. Those who managed to get on deck were the crew and the cabin passengers, all men. Only a few of the steerage passengers could escape from their tomb to be rescued.

One woman and a boy managed to make their way into the rigging, the only part of the ship afloat when dawn broke. The boy was swept off a short time later, but managed to swim to a small boat that had put out from shore; the woman died in the arms of chief officer Firth after he had held her all night, grasping the rigging with one hand and the unconscious woman with the other.

About 200 people passed over that fragile line from ship to rock; a few others were taken off by boats that battled their way through angry seas from shore.

Six Slot Machines Net London $3,000

London, Ont., April 27 (C. P.)

FOUR more slot machine licenses at $500 each have been sold by the police license office. This brings the total of licensed machines in London to six and the revenue to the city to $3,000.

When the bylaw was passed setting the licenses at $500 for each machine, officials thought that few would pay the fee. However, they have been surprised by the response. With $3,000 collected within a few weeks, officials think the slot machines might bring in a steady income to the city each year.

SPLENDOR MARKED IN ABBEY EVENTS DURING 50 YEARS

Victorian Jubilee And Two Previous Crownings In Last Half Century

MONUMENTS REMOVED

LONDON, April 27.—(CP)—The commanding place in English history of Westminster Abbey, scene of next month's Coronation of King George and Queen Elizabeth, is well known, but it is doubtful if ever its long span of years has seen such a parade of splendor as in the past half century.

It is just 50 years ago this summer that the Abbey resounded with notes of praise and thanksgiving for Queen Victoria's jubilee. The good Queen had reigned a half century. Before that, it was many years since the Abbey had held a royal festival of marked importance, for the Queen during her long widowhood rarely resided in London except for a few days at a time, and weddings of members of the royal family during her reign were solemnized at Windsor or at the Chapel Royal in St. James's.

On Jubilee Day (June 20, 1887) the Queen, surrounded by her sons and daughters and grandchildren, once more sat in the historic chair of King Edward, and with Lord Salisbury, the prime minister of that era, William Ewart Gladstone, leader of the Liberal opposition, and representatives of all estates in the realm, returned thanks for the blessings of a reign of 50 years.

Ten years after there was the Queen's Diamond Jubilee, but the Abbey was not the centre of attraction on that occasion, the thanksgiving taking the form of an open-air service outside St. Paul's Cathedral. The Queen's carriage, surrounded by a cavalcade drawn from every quarter of the Empire, was placed before the great west front, offering a spectacle of a character even London has never seen before or since.

The Abbey has seen two coronations since then, King Edward VII in 1902 and King George V in 1911. It has also been the church of marriage for most of the members of the royal family of the later generations and as in former centuries it has continued as the last resting place of many to whom the nation wished to give the highest honors.

During the last few years the Dean of Westminster, Rev. Dr. Foxley Norris has been diligent in trying to clear the Abbey of certain monuments to persons who have been found to have no enduring place in history, what ever their eminence at the time of death.

Many of these have now been removed to the cloisters, and the space saved will naturally be of the greatest value during the forthcoming Coronation ceremonies.

Germans are being urged to eat more cabbages, as there are still nearly 50,000 tons left over from last year's harvest.

CROWNING GIVES CANADIAN WOMEN PLACE IN ABBEY

Ceremony Will Reflect Progress Of Gentler Sex In Affairs Of Empire

MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT

LONDON, April 27—(CP)—Beautifully-gowned women may be outnumbered by brilliantly-uniformed men in the great congregation in Westminster Abbey on Coronation Day. But among those in the scintillating crimson, scarlet and blue, will be women whose presence emphasizes recent historical development and the changing status of women in a changing world.

Canadian, Australian and South African-born women who have married into the peerage, will sit with those whose lineage dates back to the Norman conquest. Among peeresses of Canadian birth are the Countess of Minto and Countess of Bessborough, daughters of G. W. Cook of Montreal; Lady Harding, formerly Margot Fleming, of Ottawa; the Marchioness of Donegal, who was Violet Twining, of Halifax; Lady de Blaquiere, the French-Canadian; Lady Congleton, sister of the present Lord Strathcona and the two Lady Shaughnessys.

Members of Parliament

For the first time in British history women may attend the Coronation as members of parliament. A cross-section of all parties, Viscountess Astor, Eleanor Rathbone, Megan Lloyd George, Irene Ward, Florence Horsbrugh, Ellen Wilkinson and Mrs. H. B. Tate, as elected representatives of the people, may claim their privilege of seeing the King receive his crown. Incidentally, he will be crowned in the chair which the suffragettes tried to destroy with a bomb shortly after the last Coronation, in 1911.

Two women appear on the long list of representatives of British possessions and foreign countries and they, too, may be said to represent the romance of history and progress.

The Most Noble, Mary Sciberras D'Amico Inguarnes, Baroness of Diar-el-Bniet, Bukana and Castel Cicciano, is the senior member of the Maltese nobility and of the three Maltese representatives. About 70 years of age, she is 20th baroness of this title created in 1350. Small in stature and a famous hostess, she entertained King Edward VII when he visited Malta. Her title comes from the Garden of Diar-el-Bniet given her ancestor by Louis of Arragon. Serene King of Sicily in 1350. The Barony of Castel Cicciano was gained by profitable mediaeval marriages.

Another woman representative, the Ranee of Sarawak, was born in England of English parents and now is spending her life in London while her son reigns as Rajah over his domain, half the island of Borneo.

The title has a strange history. Early in the 19th century, the native Rajah of Sarawak found his people were getting too much for him, so he called on an Englishman to help him out. In gratitude he left the Englishman the kingdom when he died.

The late Charles Brooke, second Rajah of Sarawak, was the nephew and heir of the adventurous Englishman. The present Ranee is his wife, who writes, is musical and lives in London. Her son, now Rajah who succeeded in 1917, is famous for fighting head-hunters.

Elderly Invalid Is Found In Home Of Flood Area—Written Last Note

LONDON, Ont., April 27.—(CP)—Mrs. J. Hudson, elderly invalid, was recuperating at the home of friends in this flood-stricken city today after she had given up hope of escaping alive from the sickroom where she lay helpless as the waters of the Thames River swept through and about her Adelaide street residence.

High above her head, as high as her failing arm could reach, a note was pinned to the wall of Mrs. Hudson's bedroom when rescuers reached the house last midnight. The note, police said, told of her helplessness as the waters mounted ever higher and expressed her last wishes. It was, she believed, her dying statement.

Willing hands carried the woman to the power boat in which police and firemen had arrived in the nick of time. She was left at the home of friends, little the worse for her harrowing experience.

Mrs. Hudson lives with her son. He set out for aid when it was seen the flood was encroaching on the first floor of the house, fighting his way through the swirling waters to a neighbor's home. So fast was the rise of the water neighbors were unable to reach the woman. Police were called and the thrilling descue followed.

The Competition Expands

Several months ago the Examiner was attracted by the length of time people had continued to live in the same house. It began when we saw a story telling that Mrs. Harry Chapman of Mitchell, in Perth Co., had lived 72 years on the same street and 55 years in the same house. It was not long until our attention was drawn to a gentleman in Peterborough who had lived 77 years in the same house. Then Karl Monk wrote from Bethany in Durham county telling of Mr. Richard Wilson of Lifford Line who has lived on the same farm for 82 years and in the same house for 78 of those years, having moved there in 1859.

For several weeks this competition appeared to have come to a dead end. But it is renewed today, and the manner of the renewal is interesting in that it shows how such items travel to great distances by appearing in other papers. Elsewhere on this page is a letter from Mrs. H. G. Rice of Fitch Bay, Quebec. She says she noticed the article from the Examiner when it was published in the Edmonton (Alberta) Journal, and she desires to submit the history of Miss Ella Dolloff of Fitch Bay, Que., who was born on October 27, 1855, in the house where she is still living, so when the fall of the year comes that will complete 82 years in the one house. If this search for a record of long residence under one roof is going to become Dominion wide then some interesting information may be brought to the surface. It is worth noticing that with the one exception of the long residence of 77 years in one house in Peterborough, the others have been in towns and rural districts, and probably it is in the latter surroundings that people become settled in early life and remain. So at the moment honors rest with Miss Ella Dolloff of Fitch Bay, Que., who has been living in the same home for a period not far removed from 82 years. So once more we accept that as a record until one of greater length is produced.

Fighting Over Spinach!

From Stockton, California, comes word of a battle outside of a canning factory where a strike has been called. It all happened when a truck came along the highway and prepared to turn in at the factory. Officers used gas bombs and others opened fire with riot guns as the pickets made an attack on the truck. When it was all over it was found that almost fifty persons had been wounded, although none was killed. After this battle it was decided there would be no more attempts made to bring goods or produce to the canning factory.

And then we learn the truck which caused all this trouble was loaded with spinach!

One can well believe there might have been a fight had the truck contained nice oranges or pears or berries, but spinach!

That stuff seems to get all the publicity. The story of that fight which started over a truck laden with spinach has gone all over the continent. It may have made its way to troubled Europe, and the worried folk there may well wonder if wars are going to be carried on over a truck load of spinach—well, when will there ever be a chance for the dove of peace to make a three point landing.

Wherein We Refuse

W. Laffan, treasurer of the New Education Fellowship of London, Eng., was the speaker at a Fellowship meeting in Toronto, and he talked plainly of experiences which had been his during the time he attended McGill University. He said he found the lectures boring, dull and rotten, although he believed they had been fixed since his day. He had expected to find real life in Canada, but instead he found the worst kind of snobbery. It was a more assertive form of snobbery than he had encountered in England. He found he could not get a job in this country.

Turning from that Mr. Laffan said he was certain Canadians must be willing to assume a greater share of taxation. In England, he explained, the income tax ranged from 25 cents to 60 cents on the dollar. We care very little how much Mr. Laffan whacks our snobbery; he can whack it out of existence and cause no hard feelings, nor can we find anything unusual in the fact that he could not find himself a job when he was prepared and willing to take it. Others have had exactly the same experience.

But we find it difficult to become in any degree enthusiastic over Mr. Laffan's claim that we should approach the point where we would pay taxation at the rate of from 25 cents to 60 cents out of each dollar of income. We have to support many governments in this country, and we have to support many councils and commissions and committees and each and all of them call for the expenditure of money. We pay sales tax, and indirectly we pay for tariffs and excise tariffs and dumping duties and all manner of things. It is quite possible that a far greater share of our earned dollars goes into taxation than most people imagine. So it is we find it impossible to grow enthusiastic, even at the urging of Mr. Laffan from London Eng., about getting in the frame of mind where we would rejoice over increased levies. It may sound stubborn, but we won't do it.

The Greatest of All Books

Just now it is the Upper Canada Bible Society which is making its annual appeal for funds. Back of that is the British and Foreign Bible Socity, the largest and most progressive agency in the world for the publishing and distributing of the Bible.

Miles Coverdale is credited with completing the first translation of the Bible in English, and that was in 1535. Tindale followed shortly after, then Matthew's Bible in 1537; then Taverner's, the Great Bible, the Geneva Bible, the Bishop's Bible, all of them being ahead of the Authorized Version of 1611. But with all this translation there were but a few copies of each produced. In 1936 the circulation had reached 11,686,131 copies.

The real work of the British and Foreign Bible Society is shown in the number of languages in which the Bible is now made available, and that total is 700. Two hundred thousand natives of Abyssinia speak Gudellia, so St. Matthew's Gospel was translated for them. It is not likely the average citizen would recognize any of the languages in which the Bible in whole or in part has been furnished to people in some strange countries. Here are just a few of the recent editions:

Nuer	Madi	Nandi
Rundi	Mongwandu	Nyaska
Luchazi	Lulmbi	Eggon
Dagbane	Anganiwei	Nkoya

Before a translation is made it means that some missionary has gone to the country and mastered the language of its people. He in turn has translated parts of the New Tesetament into that tongue and the British and Foreign Bible Society has undertaken the publication.

The colporteurs who carry on the work of distribution are under instruction never to engage in controversy. Their business is to dispose of as many Bibles and Testaments as they can, but they prefer to let the books do their own teaching, and for results they depend on the Scriptural injunction "My word shall not return unto Me void." Peterborough and district has always given generous support to this work and the belief is growing that the Bible itself is the greatest preaching and teaching agency in the world.

Need Not Be Worried

Members of the Young Communist organization paraded in front of the office of the Globe and Mail in Toronto carrying with them placards denouncing the course which that paper had followed in dealing with the C.I.O. and the strike at Oshawa.

It has been claimed the C.I.O. has nothing to do with communists, and we doubt very much if there are many communists in the ranks of the auto workers at Oshawa. The question to be answered is this: If the communists have nothing to do with the C.I.O., why should they take the trouble to parade in front of the Toronto newspaper office?

The Globe and Mail has nothing about which to worry on that score. The worst possible thing which can happen to any newspaper is when the people pay no attention to it.

Planting the Elm

To mark the Coronation, London, Ont., has arranged for the planting of a row of trees along one of its boulevards, and the trees selected are North American elms. When these trees reach maturity the parks superintendent anticipates they will each have a spread of 80 feet.

We believe good sense has been shown in the selection of this tree for boulevard purposes. It is much superior to many of the trees used in most of our cities. All the cities have too many soft maples, for example. The soft maple will grow quite rapidly, but it will not stand up well against storm and weather. In the time of the sleet storm it will be found the soft maple will crack and break. We have on several occasions inspected districts through which a terrific wind storm has passed and soft maples have suffered more than other trees, many of them having been uprooted.

The elm tree is a hard one to beat for purposes of shade and beauty and that rugged texture defies weather and wind and all else. Some of the giant oaks which we have in Peterborough are handsome, but they are slow of growth and show a tendency to rot in many of the branches. The elm is at the top of the list as a shade tree.

Honoring a Great Cow

Just east of Woodstock there will be erected a memorial to a prize cow. This particular cow was Springbank Snow Countess, the world's greatest lifetime producer of butterfat. A life-size model of this famous Holstein is to be created and mounted on a granite base, so the top will be at least ten feet by way of elevation. There will be a plot arranged in front with grass and shrubs and the place will be lighted by night. Close to No. 2 Highway it will be placed and no doubt many will stop to gaze upon this novel sight. Aaron's golden calf attracted attention in its day, but the metallic Holstein of Oxford we are certain will work no such mischief.

And why should there not be honor paid to a great cow? Take the city of Paris for example. Apart from Napoleon's tomb there are many places there where columns have been erected on the boulevards and on top is the bust of some general or marshal who has been engaged in battle. That form of commemoration is carried on to such an extent it appears to be overdone. In turn one may go and look upon the wonders of Notre Dame and marvel at its architectural beauty, but if the visitor asks the name of the architect we believe such information cannot be furnished. It can be repeated that the building was commenced in 1163, and completed early in the 14th century, and it will be recited it was damaged by the Communards in 1871. Also one may learn it is 390 feet in length and the towers are 226 feet in height, but the name of the man who planned all this must have been mislaid or forgotten. Had he been as great a warrior as he was an engineering draftsman there would have been something erected in his honor.

So it is the world has paid a great deal of honor in statue to warriors and statesmen; even writers and musicians have not been ignored, so it is time something was done about a great cow. The great cow in its own quiet way has done a great deal for her country; the one which has produced more butter fat during a lifetime than any other cow deserves some consideration. We could get along without warriors the world over but we could not do without the cows, especially the great cows. And the truth is that Oxford County would be a dismal place were it not for its large number of great cows.

NOTE AND COMMENT

A Welsh baritone has shattered a wine glass with his voice. Most singers merely succeed in shattering the peace.

Homer Martin says there are 20,000 members of the C.I.O. in Ontario. He omits to say how many joined the organization voluntarily.

In the march back to prosperity Calgary's announcement of a 22.7 per cent increase in unemployment looks like a queer banner to display.

It will have to be admitted that the Oshawa strike was one of the most orderly in history—whether because of the C.I.O. or in spite of it will probably be a matter of opinion.

Government officials have been visiting Havelock to pick out the site for a new postoffice. Just when they will come to Peterborough on a similar mission we are not in a position to state.

The running of the Bilbao Blockade by British food ships show that the British mercantile marine is keeping alive the old traditions of British sailors who have never hesitated to take a chance.

Papers are so full of stories about strikes these days that it is necessary to take a second glance to find out whether or not one is reading the baseball write-ups.

Two brothers in the Cobalt district have discovered a nugget that is expected to yield more than 5000 ounces of silver. So they will have good reason to remember the year King George VI was crowned.

Mr. Aberhart has warned the people of Alberta that if they do not support his government they may have to pay the expenses of an election. Possibly the electors will feel that the expenditure would be well worth while.

We can imagine what would happen to a Canadian who went across the line and before an American audience called upon President Roosevelt to go back to the farm and confine his activities to growing onions.

EVERY YEAR

(By A. R. K.)

¶ It's time to clean the house I hear, that's why John Honker acts so queer; he always goes the same; for when it comes to cleaning time, John has a knot upon his spine, and he gets rather lame.

¶ When I am tracking toward my home, why I hear John begin to groan, his temperature is high; his liver's clogged and very bad, and John is looking old and sad, and he is fit to die.

¶ Another day his heart is fast, and John is certain he can't last, there's fear within his eyes; and people warn him here and there, that he should plan his ways with care, and take no exercise.

¶ And when the rugs are up to beat, John has a spell of inward heat, he has neuritis then; he cannot lift his arms at all, he's worse than what he was last fall, he walks with crippled men.

¶ If John gets just one whiff of paint, he takes to feeling rather faint, his lungs can't stand the stuff; he dare not swing a waxing weight, he chants to it his hymn of hate, and he speaks very gruff.

¶ John always groans this time of year, when cleaning time is drawing near, and sickness is his dish; but one thing you can count on John, he's sure to rally later on—when it comes time to fish.

This Happened In Our Province

RIDGETOWN—"I'm going to leave town for a few days," Jimmie Macdonald stated this evening as he reported to Chief of Police Charles Tye. Jimmie has been receiving threatening letters and Wednesday night was found on a dark street in an unconscious state with a wound on his forehead, but did not know how it happened. Jimmie thinks the affair will blow over in a few days and he will be able to return to Ridgetown peacefully.

Up until noon today Chief Tye, although unable to fathom how Jimmie gained his injury, took the letter writing lightly, but when he found two notes from the "Black Gang" in a letter box of his office door, addressed to him, duly signed by the customary skull and cross bones and "B.G.," threatening him and Jimmie, he decided to take a more active part in the affair.

Prior to Jimmie being found Wednesday night in an unconscious state on a side street just off the main business section, he claims to have received four threatening notes. Two on Sunday night, one dropped out of a car on the main street, four blocks from the business section, and one block away from his home about 7.15 o'clock in the evening, and a second about two hours later in the business section of the town. In both cases, he stated, his attention was attracted to the car by a whistle and then the note was thrown to the road. The cars were different but the notes were about the same.

Travel Advised

"They said to get out of town," Jimmie said.

A third note was handed to him uptown on Monday night by a man about 30 years old whom he said he did not know. It gave him 48 hours to get out of town.

"Where are those notes?" the chief asked him.

"I burned them," Jimmie replied.

The fourth note, Jimmie brought to the chief's office last night about 8 o'clock which a boy that he knew had handed it to him saying, "A man had given him a quarter to deliver it."

Jimmie flatly refused to tell the name of the boy who delivered the last note, stating he did not wish to implicate the boy, who, he said, was about 14 years of age, and did not live in Ridgetown.

Chief Tye gave Jimmie until tonight at 8 o'clock to tell the boy's name, but he refused, and said he was going to leave town as the note demanded. The two notes the chief found in his door were apparently put in at different times. What would appear as the first read as follows:

"To Tye—

"We, the 'Black Gang,' of Ridgetown. We'll give you 48 hours to get Macdonald out of town and if he ain't out we will find a way of doing it. This is your last chance."

And it was signed by the skull and cross bones and "B.G."

The second note:

"Dear Tye—

"We are giving you 24 hours to put J. E. Macdonald out of town."

And again appeared the same signature.

COURTESY PAYS.

(Kitchener Record)

THE Ontario department of highways last year conducted a publicity campaign based on the theme, "Try Courtesy." The idea was good because many accidents happen through lack of consideration for the rights and safety of others on the road. If all drivers could be persuaded to exercise "care, courtesy and common sense" at all times there would be comparatively few serious mishaps and motoring would be more of a pleasure.

One of the greatest menaces on the road is the "cut-in" driver. He acts as though he hadn't a second to lose. Ten chances to one when he does get to his destination he wastes minutes and perhaps hours. We have all seen this type of driver. He weaves in and out of the line of traffic. He shoots ahead of this car and that one, often without warning. There is no courtesy in such a dangerous practice. This type of driver on our roads is a menace. He endangers his own life and the lives of countless others. Only by making an example of him shall we have comparative safety on our highways.

No doubt the motorist who crawls along and admires the scenery is a source of annoyance to those who are on a long trip. He often tempts the careful drivers to "shoot ahead." However, there are many places on the road where a creeping car may be passed in safety. All one needs to do is exercise a little patience. A few minutes spent in waiting for a safe place to pass the car ahead may mean the difference between life and death. Isn't that worth a short delay?

BINGO MOVES WEST.

(Vancouver Province)

THE city police warn the citizens of Vancouver that they must not play Bingo, and that they will be subject to the penalties of the gambling laws if they do.

Bingo, it appears, has lately been something of a craze in the East, and has arrived in Vancouver and must be frowned upon by authority. It is alleged that there have been Bingo parties at church socials, and that money has been raised by means of Bingo for charitable and other purposes.

But Bingo, of course, in case our police department does not know, has been a game of chance at the annual exhibition at Hastings Park for years. People who have indulged the Heady excitements of Bingo under such auspices will rather wonder now it has so suddenly become a moral scourge in our unsuspecting midst.

Letters To The Editor

Correspondents Discuss Various Topics.

ALMOST 82 YEARS

Editor Examiner,

Sir: The enclosed I clipped from the Edmonton Journal. (The article referred to the length of time people had resided in one house.)

I happen to know a lady who can break the record referred to in this article and have asked her permission to send it to your paper, which she granted.

Miss Ella Dolloff, of Fitch Bay, Que., was born Oct. 27th, 1855, in a house which was built by her father (a frame structure) in 1849 or 1850. Her father married in 1854 and took his bride to this home where they both lived throughout the remainder of their lives.

It is, is the one and only home of Miss Dolloff during her sojourn in this world.

Despite the fact that she is not as young as she used to be she is still active, a great reader and possesses a keen intellect. Fitch Bay and the surrounding community are the richer for having one with such a beautiful Christian character and splendid personality live in their midst for so many long years.

Yours truly,
MRS. H. G. RICE.
Fitch Bay, Que., April 24.

CRITICAL

Editor Examiner,

Sir: Now and again a report of some meeting of public interest appears in your good paper which creates a smile; I refer to one now which appeared in last Saturday's edition, giving an account of the meeting of the Board of Health wherein Alderman McIntyre took Dr. Fraser to task for appointing an outside man as acting Sanitary Inspector.

Now one would imagine Alderman McIntyre thought men qualified to perform the duties of Sanitary Inspector efficiently grew on berry bushes. Alderman McIntyre in my mind enjoys talking to the gallery. But in this case he has stumbled all over himself, because the very fact of his admitting that the temporary Sanitary Inspector had brought in a good report bringing out certain suggestions which heretofore had been omitted goes to show Dr. Fraser's good judgement in his choice of a man, and it did not take long for Mayor Macdonald and Alderman James Dutton to express their appreciation of the fact.

Alderman McIntyre may be a good carpenter, but when it comes to directing the affairs of the Board of Health and the duties of the M.O.H. he does not appear to know what it is all about. Thanking you, Mr. Editor.

Yours truly,
GOOD HEALTH.
Peterborough, April 26.

BOOTLEGGING

Editor Examiner.

Sir: I would respectfully ask the Mayor and Mr. Gordon how they are getting on with the probe into illegal selling of liquor in Peterborough. If we wait for a time of political disturbance to thresh this matter out, it will not be done satisfactorily. Let us go into it now, for it is a very important matter. You will observe that I am not talking of "bootleggers." I am referring to bootlegging which is a very different matter. There may be plenty of would-be bootleggers but do they bootleg? That is the question. I heard of a case the other day where fifteen alleged bootleggers were appealed to but only one would respond. Is illegal selling of all kinds rife or is it not?—that is the question. There will always be some infractions of every law, but is illegal selling actually permitted by those employed to suppress it? I do not believe it is, but let us have it settled by a judge in full canonicals and power with the police assisting.

CITIZEN.
Peterborough, April 26.

RE PROTESTS

Sir: Don't you think it is about time some one brought this to your notice. When we go to a show in the evening we are lined up in file like a bunch of sheep by a city policeman. Finally we get in but find the show has been going on for some time but we have to pay the full rate just the same which is not the way it should be. But when you think of the way they are closing up things with the talk of closing hotels at 10 they are going to make long boot men out of all of us.

60 YEARS RATEPAYER.

HARD TASK

Editor Examiner.

Sir: I notice a lot of trouble makers are having a lot to say about Deveno and his dogs. I think if they would mind their own business they would have a steady job for life.

FRIEND OF DOGS.

Will Relief Be Permanent?

(From the Brockville Recorder and Times.)

THE Works Progress Administration of the United States has made known its settled conclusion that, even at the peak of prosperity, there will always be at least 4,000,000 unemployed persons in that country and that its Federal government will be required to spend from $1,500,000,000 to $2,000,000,000 each year to provide them with purchasing-power so that business and industrial stagnation may be prevented. There is also belief that President Roosevelt has adopted this view as a permanent policy of his administration. At any rate, he has accepted the estimate of $1,500,000,000 as being necessary to carry on relief activities during the next fiscal year, while reducing other expenditures in order to make this possible.

It must be remembered that in Canada, as elsewhere, there has always been unemployment, even during the best of times. This has been particularly true of the winter months when various industrial and other operations are temporarily suspended and when a comparatively large number of individuals find themselves out of employment. Even during the "boom" period which preceded the depression there were very few communities in Canada which did not have a winter relief problem on their hands. Charitable organizations joined with civic authorities in furnishing these individuals with a bare subsistence, along with food and sometimes clothing. And there is every indication that, no matter how conditions may improve, they will be required to do likewise during succeeding winters in the event of governments withdrawing the financial support which they have given so liberally during the years of the slump.

Unemployment relief is represented as having become a permanent problem. But it has always been with us. There are always people insufficiently provident to retain enough of their summer earnings to tide them over the winter just as there are always many others who, because of age, physical infirmities or want of good management, find themselves in need of assistance when the snow begins to fall. The problem has been intensified through the county shiftings of many individuals having been educated in the struggle of the past few years and through many of them having become almost completely impoverished. These will have to be cared for in some manner for years to come and if governments decline to bear this continued burden, it will have to be borne by private individuals acting in association with municipal organizations unless there is to be a great deal of hardship and suffering.

This is not to say that people who are able to work yet refuse to accept employment when it is offered to them should be encouraged in such an attitude of mind to feel that, no matter how little they may exert themselves, they and their dependents will be looked after. There is grave danger of such a feeling gaining ground. People who have been accustomed to receive their regular relief hand-outs when employment was not available for them sometimes consider that, when it is available, they should shirk it in the knowledge that they and those depending upon them will be provided for. If we are to consent to unemployment relief as a permanent policy, there must be every certainty that those receiving it are fully entitled to it. The alternative is to breed a generation of shirkers and loafers who will become a burden to their fellow-citizens for years to come.

OLD IRON'S MONEY.

(St. Thomas Times-Journal)

JUNK, in the form of old iron, has become a valuable metal these days. Everywhere people are scraping together all the old metal they can find and assembling it in some to be transported to markets, for they call get a lot of money for it. The reason, of course, is that the remaining nations are scouring the world for iron with which to make steel for shells, guns and warships. The Japanese began it about three years ago when they bought as many old ships as they could and broke them up for their value as metal. Since then, half a dozen other nations have joined in.

THEY LIKE BIG BEN.

(St. Thomas Times-Journal)

AN interesting fact revealed by the British Broadcasting Corporation is that it receives about 1,000 letters a week from overseas listeners in all parts of the Empire and in foreign countries applauding Big Ben.

Big Ben is the sonorous bell that strikes the hours of the clock on the tower of the Houses of Parliament. At the beginning of each Empire broadcast the program starts with the chiming of the bells of Westminster. Sometimes the engineer in charge will switch over to broadcast the new hour if there are a few seconds to spare, and sometimes again as the clock, but the usual closing signal is the National Anthem, followed forth with tremendous volume by a Guards' band from a gramophone record. If for some reason the usual Big Ben is omitted there is a flood of letters from disappointed "exiles" who, although they may have heard it thousands of times, want Big Ben, which gives them a greater thrill than anything that goes over the air, reaching out to the remotest parts of Empire.

COMING INTO HIS OWN.

(By J. F. MacDougall, in the Sault Ste Marie Star)

THE expert bushman, once unchallenged monarch of the northland's industrial life, is coming into his own again.

Next winter will probably see more men at work in the Algoma bush than in a good many years. Last winter 3,100 or more Algoma bushmen had jobs. Signs are not wanting that 500 to 1,000 more will be needed in the next cutting season.

The J. J. McFaeden Company at Blind River has already planned to put at least 200 men in the woods in August or September for a six or seven months cut. That is 500 more men than the same company employed last winter.

The new Huron Forest Products Limited will have man in the bush next winter to cut jackpine.

There are indications other companies will increase their woods crews.

It looks like an old time year in the bush with a job for every man who can swing an axe or handle a saw.

TOO WISE FOR THAT.

(Niagara Falls Review)

MR. D. A. Croll, has, so far, refused offers to lead a labor party or to become a prominent figure in a third party and he is wise in declining to be a "leader" and will probably continue to be a Liberal. The former minister is a good politician and it does not require much study of Canadian political history to realize how short-lived has been the experience of any third party in Canada. He probably considers the invitation an honor but is too shrewd to accept it.

Bilbao's Basque Defence Tottering

BILBAO, Northern Spain. With the Insurgent Army, April 27.—(A). — Bilbao tottered to-day under the impact of an insurgent army that crushed its outer defences and shoved the Basque soldiery back toward the Biscayan capital in a disorganized rout.

There was widespread evidence of rampant disorder in the Basque ranks—even a hint of mutiny—as they retreated along the mountainous roads ahead of Gen. Emilio Mola.

Insurgents said 30 women and children, abandoned by the Basque militiamen as they evacuated Eibar without firing a shot declared the fleeing soldiers shouted:

"We're going to Bilbao to cut off the head of Aguirre, who betrayed us!" (Aguirre is president of the semi-autonomous Basque state which is allied with the Madrid-Valencia government in the civil war.)

Eibar was evacuated Sunday night and the insurgent force marched in yesterday to find flaming, widespread ruins.

Nature Study Lesson Terminates As Lobster Goes To Boiling Pot

A Halifax lobster made a trip to Prince of Wales School recently, but many of the pupils were unable to get a glimpse of the crustacean, as the pupil had to have it home in time for her mother to prepare it for dinner.

A local woman had four nice lobsters sent from her native city in the Maritimes. Three of them were eaten, but the twelve-year-old daughter pleaded with her mother that she might take the remaining lobster to school and explain its anatomy to her teacher and schoolmates. The mother granted the request.

Pupils and teachers alike were delighted as the girl displayed the lobster (and was his face red), and explained in detail how the queer-looking ocean denizen lived and used its claws to hang on to its food. One teacher suggested it would be nice if the lobster was left at school so that other classes could view it in the afternoon, but the owner promptly answered, "Oh, no. I couldn't do that. This is mummy's dinner." And so the lobster, with his education incomplete, was carried homeward, to the boiling pot, and went the way of all delectable tit-bits.

LEAVE FOOD SHIPS ALONE IS BRITAIN'S ADVICE TO FRANCO

Recognize Only 3-Mile Limit Not 6 Miles The Rebel Claim

SEND NEW PROTEST

By George Hambleton
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, April 27 (C. P. Cable). Sir Henry Chilton, British Ambassador at Hendaye on the Franco-Spanish frontier, received telegraphic instructions this morning to make a formal protest to the Spanish insurgent authorities at Salamanca against interference with three British foodships when they were about to enter Bilbao Harbor last Friday.

The actual wording of the protest was left to Sir Henry but the position of the British government was clear: Britain will not tolerate interference with British shipping engaged in legitimate business on the high seas. If necessary British warships will use force.

The British protest is a sequel to the Salamanca "blockade" by British foodships. While they were still outside the territorial waters, a Spanish insurgent cruiser fired across the bows of the British merchantmen.

Britain's giant battle cruiser Hood, about three miles away, signalled a protest to the Spanish cruiser and cleared for action. The Spanish cruiser steamed away. The British ships entered Bilbao.

Claim 6-mile Limit

The insurgent claim that Spanish territorial waters extended six miles from the coast and that the British ships already were in territorial waters when stopped is rejected by the British government. Britain traditionally holds to the three-mile limit for territorial waters. Outside that limit lie the high seas when stopped. Protection given them by the Hood was in accordance with the governments' declared policy not to tolerate interference on the high seas. Foodstuffs carried by the British ships did not violate the non-intervening agreement.

General Franco is reported to be drafting a protest to Britain that the Hood, by enabling the British ships to run the blockade, violated International law.

Britain has not received the Franco protest. It is pointed out, however, neither the Spanish government nor the insurgents, unless belligerency is recognized, have any authority to interfere with shipping on the high seas. Britain has not recognized a state of belligerency. Furthermore, the Bilbao "blockade," whatever its effectiveness may be in fact, is not recognized by the British government as having any status in law.

DAMS GO OUT AT TILLSONBURG

greasing. This became the danger-ous to-day as flood waters rose to the level of the Red Cross offices. They found scores of refugees on their hands to-day, after one night's lodgings had been provided in private homes.

West London started to emerge from the flood first and dirty, muddy slime covered streets at the edge of the flood, where the highest waters had gone back.

Then, while the city works department dumped loads of old bricks, and anything else that could be found, to protect bridge abutments and earth walls, the south branch suddenly passed its peak. Within half an hour, it had dropped six inches. As the water receded in West London, a few living on the fringe of the flood made their way back to hastily abandoned houses, in search of extra clothing, and warm blankets. Motor boats scooted between the houses still surrounded by deep water, removing similar necessities.

Weakened Bridges

Weakened bridge abutments at half a dozen points in the city caused alarm in the city engineer's department, but that danger was regarded as largely past, as the water continued to drop. Nevertheless, guards were kept posted, and the Oxford street bridge was the only one in the city open to traffic. It served only a small section of houses in the higher north part of west London.

Throughout the night, the Richmond Street was kept open, as the sole artery into south London. Then while cars and trucks lined up for five blocks, City Engineer William Veitch decided the bridge was no longer safe for travel.

Situation Eased.

The lower level of the north branch eased the situation west of the city where the two branches meet, Buchanan said.

"We have been able to open the water pumping station at Springbank, west of the city, where the water was just up to the pumps, and we expect to have the east pumping station open by 1 o'clock," Mr. Buchanan, manager of Utilities Commission, said.

"The opening of these two pumping stations will somewhat ease the gravity of the situation which appeared very serious this morning with all four water pumping stations out of commission," he said. "We can beat this thing yet if all citizens co-operate by not using any more water than absolutely necessary.

"It will be two weeks before we are able to get the Ridout Street pumping station in operation, the water poured in and all motors and equipment are completely submerged. All this will have to be dried out and that takes time.

"All artesian wells have been flooded and the water supplied the city is contaminated," said Buchanan. "We're giving it pretty strong doses of chlorine, and it won't taste very good, but that's just that much better because then people won't drink it without boiling it."

"Industries co-operated by practically all closing down after the Hydro sub-station at Ridout and Horton Streets went out, cutting our available horse-power by nearly one-third," he said.

Tour of Section.

A tour by boat of the west London section, home of 6,000 persons affected, showed curious incidents in the flood. Foodstuffs floated out of stores filled with water to within a few inches of the ceiling. A truck loaded with beer had stalled as it came out of a gasoline service station. An auto-trailer loaded with six new motor cars had been stalled at Wharncliffe road and two cars had toppled off the top of the truck. High water marks showed the flood had receded in that area by three feet during the day.

A freckle-faced blonde boy of nine called out to the newspapermen in the boat about his two dogs. "We took them up to the second floor but we had to leave them," he called. "They wouldn't take them into the boat."

The lad gave explicit directions as to where his house was located and it was found the family had been rescued through a hole chopped in the roof, that one dog had been rescued and the other was still missing. The boy alternately smiled and cried, torn between pleasure that one dog was saved and sorrow that the other seemed lost.

Bridges Are Closed.

Engineer Veitch and Assistant Engineer Garrett directed efforts to save the city's bridges. All are closed to traffic, including seven on the south branch and three on the north branch of the Thames River which converges at the western end of London where most of the flood damage was caused. The Richmond street bridge leading north out of the city was opened earlier, but police officials reported at 9.35 a.m. (E.S.T.) the city engineer's department that abutments at one end were crumbling and the bridge was closed to traffic.

A main Hydro sub-station went out of operation early today at Ridout and Horton streets. "We are short 10,000 horsepower on our normal demand," Buchanan said. "Our ordinary demands are 23,000 horsepower. We have asked all industries to close and are carrying the remainder as best we can and asking the people to conserve Hydro power." Street car service was stopped but efforts were being made to supply Hydro to business and residential sections.

Warning Issued.

Fire Chief Charles Scott issued a warning to residents of London to be "extremely careful" to avoid all fire hazards during flood conditions here.

"We have a pumper by which we can increase water pressure to fight any ordinary fire, but there might not be sufficient pressure even then to fight a big fire," said Chief Scott. "Of course in any event we would be pulling water out of the present drinking supply which can't be increased so people should be very careful."

Chief Scott told the Canadian Press the flooded river would be of little assistance in fighting a fire near it. "We could pump water out of the river but the danger would be in becoming mired trying to get close enough to it," he said. "We might pump from a bridge if it were close at hand but I doubt if any of them are strong enough to stand it."

Red Cross Depot.

About 100 children were included among nearly 300 flood refugees accommodated at the Armouries by the Red Cross Society acting under the direction of Captain D. B. Weldon, M.C., president of the London branch. Some of the children played at the Armouries, but most of them were taken over to the Young Men's Christian Association after breakfast and given full use of the gymnasium there. None went to school.

The Red Cross planned to meet to consider proposals for aiding in the re-establishment of the flood victims, most of whom were exiled from their homes without warning and without opportunity to save any furnishing.

"Our appeal for funds has so far brought us about $4,000 in cash and bundles of clothing and bedding," said Captain Weldon.

"We hope to obtain sufficient money to buy bed clothing, mattresses, and other needs for these people, most of whose furnishings have been ruined by the flood waters sweeping through the homes."

When serious flood conditions threatened yesterday, arrangements were made by downtown business firms for the housing of employees in unaffected areas of the city and there was little more than normal absence, several employers reported.

The Bell Telephone office yesterday made arrangements to place girls from West London flood areas in the private homes of girls in other sections of the city. Girls in South London homes were sent there in taxis at the company's expense and reported for work to-day before the bridge leading to that section of the city was barricaded because of a crack in the abutment. The company last night transferred a number of girls to the gas company and the Public Utilities to handle all-night emergency calls and said some of their employees had been working 15 and 30 hours during the flood period.

TORONTO MARKET STAYS UNSETTLED

Golds Were Off In Early Stage But Improved Slightly Later

TORONTO, April 27 (CP). — The Toronto market floundered about to-day, showing little change in either direction. Trade was light in the early stage but the tone improved slightly later, while Base Metals moved within a narrow range and Industrials were irregularly lower. Western oils again displayed a mildly bullish tone, with volume quite heavy in a half dozen cases. Over the board narrow losses showed a margin over gains late in the proceedings.

Food shares held up and the implements and utilities clung to the up-side. Fractional gains were posted for Canada Packers, Canners B, International Milling Pfd., Loblaw A and National Grocers, and in the utilities the close was up for Bell Telephone, Union Gas and Seaforth. Massey-Harris Common and Brantford Cordage advanced fractions.

Mild weakness ruled among the senior oils, including British American, Imperial and McColl Pfd., and in the Western juniors the close was up for Calgary-Edmonton, Dalhousie, Oscalta, Vulcan, East Crest and United. Royalite was quiet and slightly lower.

Changes were narrow in the golds Dome firmed about ¼.

Fruit Recipes Not Necessary But Some People Are Pampered

Peel, Chop Or Shred Usually Best Way To Serve Fresh Fruit

A FEW RECIPES

By MARY MOORE

TO do anything to fresh fruit besides peel or pare or chop or shred, and occasionally add a little cream or sugar, in my mind is superfluous. I want all my fruit "as is."

But, mournful to relate, there are many appetites that have to be pampered with compotes of fruit, fruit pies, fancy meringues, puddings with fruit, else those folks would not eat fruit at all. I must admit, though, that I have only heard of one person that did not like orange juice, and that was because she had been forced to take it with her cod liver oil one winter during a long convalescence.

Well, I grudgingly give in to those pampered appetites, for I would rather you would have fruit the way you demand it than not at all, although if you were my child you would be subjected to the sure-fire treatment of "eat what is served, you or go hungry." (Tough, huh?)

Fruit compotes are so popular in France that there are few French homes in which a compote of some kind of fruit is absent from the table.

I seldom think of serving plums as a sole dessert item but changed my mind after eating "compote of plums (Lombard), as prepared by the French chef in one of our finest hotels in Canada. A compote makes a grand job of sweet cherries, or sour apples, or pineapple, too.

Compote of Sour Apples or Fresh Pineapple

To make any compote of fruit you start with a sugar syrup. Three-quarters cup sugar to 1¼ cups of water will be enough for an average family—bring this to boiling point.

If you choose apples, pare them thinly and cut in halves and remove core. Drop into boiling syrup (adding only enough that they are in one layer at a time) and let simmer gently until bottom side is tender and transparent, then gently turn over and do other side. When done skim out and place on dishes in which they are to be served. When all of the fruit is cooked add juice of 1 lemon and finely grated rind to the syrup, cook 3 more minutes, then chill. When ready to serve put one tablespoon of the syrup over each serving, and top with thick or whipped unsweetened cream.

If you wish to do pineapple, peel, remove eyes, slice in ½-inch slices, remove core, and simmer as you would the apples—do not expect pineapple to become so soft—finish as for compote of apples.

For compote of Lombard plums (and you have to feel and scrape skin to prevent it splitting uncontrollably—use less lemon juice as plums are very tart themselves.

Not many years ago my brother lived with us and we used to enjoy many a feddy way of eating. We decided one winter to always have two different fruits for breakfast, whole milk and coffee, if we wanted it. Now without any repetitions I was hard put sometimes to find 14 different fruits to serve each week.

Banana Compote

Once when our banana supply was not ripening up fast enough I had to use them underripe, so decided to make them into a compote—it really was quite a success. Use the same method as for sour apples—the bananas really need plenty of lemon.

For two seasons this dish has disappeared from my menus—the first is because an Aunt of mine, who is loads of fun, but an artist at pulling her finger on the point—called them "Bobbled Bananas"—much emphasis on the "Bs"; the second is, because I always have two supplies of bananas, one ready to eat, the other ripening.

Peach Conde with Peach Sauce

Can be used with fresh or canned peaches.

Two cups milk, ¼ cup farina, ¼ cup sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, whites 2 eggs, 2 canned peaches (12 halves) juice from canned peaches (if fresh peaches are used you will need ½ cup water and 2-3 cup sugar to make the syrup). Scald the milk and add the farina gradually, while stirring constantly. When mixture thickens, add sugar and salt, and cook in double boiler 20 minutes; then add the stiffly beaten whites. Turn into slightly buttered shallow pan and keep in warm place until serving time. When ready to serve cut farina into squares, put a whole peach on each square for a serving and pour over all.

Peach Sauce

Dilute one-half tablespoon cornstarch with 1 tablespoon cold water. Add to peach syrup, bring to boiling point, let boil 3 minutes. Then pour slowly while beating over the yolks of 2 eggs which have been beaten until thick and lemon colored. Add 2 teaspoons lemon juice and a few grains salt.

Pineapple and Cocoanut Supreme

Cut one well ripened pineapple into ½-inch slices, cross-wise. Peel and core. Sprinkle well with powdered sugar. Let stand 1 hour. Punch holes in eyes of fresh cocoanut. Drain milk out into saucepan—if you have ½ cup add 1 cup sugar to it and let boil gently until thick—in the meantime crack, peel and grate the cocoanut, then pour the hot cocoanut syrup over it. Chill; serve ice cold, surrounding the pineapple slices with the cocoanut, decorated with fresh berries or maraschino cherries (a truly company dessert, most delicious and always a favorite.)

Gingered Figs

To be appreciated these must be served with a sharp flavored cheese and wafer crackers.

Wash one pound dried figs and remove stems. Add cold water to cover and juice and rind of ½ lemon and 1 large piece of ginger root and soak overnight. In morning stew gently until figs are puffed and soft. Carefully remove figs to glass dish. Measure syrup and add half as much sugar, simmer until thick and add 1 more tablespoon lemon juice. Serve very cold over fruit.

Orange Trifle

Two tablespoons granulated gelatine, ½ cup cold water, ½ cup boiling water, 1 cup sugar, 1 cup orange juice (not strained), grated rind 1 orange, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, ½ pint cream. Soak gelatine in cold water and dissolve in boiling water, then add sugar and stir until dissolved, add orange and lemon juices, grated rind and chill until consistency of honey, then whip and add whipped cream and chill. For special occasions mould may be lined with lady fingers or strips of sponge cake before trifle is added. Turn out and garnish with orange sections and cherries.

Tested Favorite Recipes

By MARY MOORE.

Did you know that Mrs. Pepys—yeah, verily, Samuel Pepys wife—kept a diary? Here had to do with food and housekeeping, though.

Under one Friday she gives a method for preparing red cabbage—it ought to be welcome, for there are plenty to be had right now and certainly very few ways of preparing it that I have heard of.

FRIDAY—For sending to Mistress Basset, as a way of using up red cabbages or other than by pickling them I write out this following recipe for a red cabbage and apple dish to be cooked in a casserole: For it wash well a medium-sized red cabbage, cut it into quarters and remove outer leaves and the stalk; chop it finely. Peel, core, and slice 4 green cooking apples. Butter an earthenware casserole with a well-fitting lid; put a good layer of red cabbage at the bottom, sprinkling it with salt and pepper. Next put in a good layer of the apple slices and sprinkle these with sugar; fill up the casserole, thus until it is nearly full. Now pour over the contents 3 tablespoons vinegar mixed with the same quantity water, and cover with a few rashers bacon, or slices of pickled pork. Put on lid, and cook gently in moderate oven for about 3 hours. This I think will be found a tasty as well as unusual dish."

Thank you, Mrs. Pepys.

Enquiry Column

Conducted by
Mrs. MARY MOORE

Question—Will you please send me a recipe for Welsh currant bread? I had one once out of your page but I have lost it and although I have made it so many times I cannot think of it all. Thanking you, E.E.

Answer—My book of National recipes does not contain one for Welsh Currant Bread, nor can I locate one in any of my recipe books containing breads only. But I do have several for plain Currant Bread. I have selected two to give you, and in the event they are not what you want maybe some of our readers will be kind enough to send in a recipe for Welsh Currant Bread if they have it.

Currant Bread.

One cake Fleischmann's yeast, 1 cup lukewarm water, 1 cup milk scalded and cooled, 1 tablespoon sugar, 6 cups sifted flour, 4 tablespoons shortening, ¾ cup sugar, 1 cup washed and dried currants (rabins or raisins and nuts may be used in place of currants), 1 teaspoon salt. Dissolve the yeast and 1 tablespoon sugar in lukewarm liquid, add 2 cups flour, the shortening and sugar well creamed and beat until smooth. Cover and stand aside to rise in warm place until light, about 1½ hours.

When risen add currants, well floured, the remainder of the flour or enough to make a moderately soft dough, and the salt.

Knead lightly, and place in well greased bowl, cover and let rise again until double in bulk—about another 1½ hours. Mould into loaves, fill well greased pans half full, cover and let rise until light—about 1 hour. Glaze with egg diluted with water and bake at 375 deg. Fahr. for about 40 minutes.

Currant Bread
(Baking Powder)

One cup currants (or dates, prunes or raisins), 2½ cups Graham flour or 1 cup flour and 1½ cups Graham, ¼ cup sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1 cup milk, 1 tablespoon shortening. Wash currants and dry them. Mix together the dry ingredients, add milk, and beat well; add currants and melted shortening. Put in greased pan and let stand 20 minutes in warm place. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 1 hour.

We hope you will find one of these useful and shall be glad to help you again. If readers send in recipes for Welsh Currant Bread we will publish them immediately.

Question — I wish to thank you kindly for your letter of the 24 ultimo, regarding wedding invitations. You helped me a lot and they have all been mailed with the weight off my mind.

Again thanks and I will recommend your column to friends. D.B.

Answer—So glad I was of practical help—do let us help you again.

"Stone Blue" Suit

well known movie actress, is wearing a suit in a new and flattering shade called "stone blue". Her hat and other accessories are in a deeper shade of blue.

Question—I read your page every week and I enjoy it so much, and must say I have never had a failure from it.

I am not a young homemaker but I often think of what a boon your page is for brides.

In the issue of March 23 I saw a recipe for Peach Brandy which I since have tried with success. It turned out grand, only for one thing—it seems a little cloudy since bottling, etc. Can you tell me what is wrong or will it clear as it ages? Again wishing your page the best of luck—M.O.B.

ANSWER: Thanks so much for your benign letter.

Regarding the Peach Brandy; are your bottles lying on their sides? If so, the cloudiness will settle down more quickly; then when they are ready to use—say 10 months or a year after bottling—stand a bottle right way up about a week before using to allow sediment to go to bottom. But keep most of the bottles lying on their sides until nearly ready to use. I am sure this will remedy your trouble. Do come again if we can be of practical assistance.

QUESTION: In the paper last week some of your readers asked for a recipe for Yum Yums. I have a recipe for Yum Yum Gems which I enclose herewith, hoping it is suitable.

I have taken many grand recipes and hints from your pages. Have you a recipe for kidney soup? My mother used to serve us children with it, for lunch with a spoonful of mashed potatoes in the middle of the plate and it was grand.

Knowing that you have little ones of your own could you give me a sample day's menu for a child of nineteen months? My other child is almost ten years old and feedings seem to be altogether different now. Thanking you for all your help.—Jean M.

Yum Yum Gems
(submitted by Jean M.)

One-half cup Crisco, 1 cup brown sugar, 1 egg, 2 cups flour, 1 teaspoon soda, ½ cup walnut meats chopped, 1 cup sour milk, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon each cinnamon, nutmeg, cloves, 1 cup raisins. Blend crisco, sugar and egg at one time. Add sour milk. Stir in sifted ingredients and add raisins and nuts. Pour into greased cup cake tins and bake in moderate oven (350 deg. Fahr.) for 15 to 20 minutes.

ICING—Three-quarters cup granulated sugar, 3 tablespoons hot water, ½ teaspoon cream of tarter or baking powder, 1 teaspoon vanillia, 1 egg white. Place all ingredients except vanille in top of double boiler. Beat until thick; remove from heat and continue beating until cool enough to spread. Add vanilla.

ANSWER: Thank you so much for this fourth variation of Yum Yums.

Your request for Kidney Soup makes me think it must be very good although I cannot remember having heard of it before. Anyone who is fond of kidney (and we certainly are when they are fricasseed) will find it delicious.

Kidney Soup

Three pork or 1 beef kidney, 1 cracked soup bone, 2 stalks celery, 1 onion, 1 tablespoon parsley, 2 teaspoons salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 3 table spoons butter. Saute the cleaned kidney and chopped onion in the butter until kidneys are seared very well, and onion is transparent. Cover with 2 quarts of boiling water and add the soup bone, and salt and pepper and simmer gently, covered for 2 hours. Lift out kidneys and run them through the food chopper. Return them to soup kettle, and celery and parsley, skim off any fat you can, bring to boiling point again for 5 minutes. Add more salt if needed. Unpolished rice may be added when the ground kidney is put back in stock, but of course will require about 25 minutes more cooking.

Sample Daily Menus For 19-Months Baby

Breakfast—½ to 6 oz. orange juice, grapefruit juice, pineapple juice, tomato juice—15 minutes before giving cereal. Cereal—Rolled oats, cream of wheat, cornmeal, well cooked cracked wheat or rye—with Grapefruit or chopped prunes, apple-sauce, shredded fresh pineapple, orange pulp, peaches canned or fresh, pears canned or fresh; well ripened banana whenever baby will take it.

Supper—Vegetable soup, finely chopped fresh tomato, or if family are having baked potato baby can have some; if soup is not served, sauteed scraped beef in butter—about 1 tablespoon is good; finely chopped vegetable as this meal if it is for the family dinner and suitable for baby—not cabbage or cauliflower. 6-8 oz. milk. Stewed or fresh, strained or finely chopped fruit or ripe banana.

The idea is to major on fresh fruits and vegetables, giving the baby 1 egg per day, and I carbohydrate, and see that he has at least 20 oz. of whole milk. Give plenty of dilute juices or water between meals. A little rhubarb occasionally can be given a baby of this age if he needs it for constipation.

If this is not detailed enough I shall be glad to write an article on the subject if you would like it.

KNOX DAUGHTERS MOTHERS BANQUET

Annual Mother And Daughter Banquet Of C.G.I.T. Group Held

Mothers and daughters have come into prominence in the various organizations of the United church, as it nears "Mother's Day."

On Monday night the C.G.I.T. group was banqueted in Knox United church S.S. hall in a really royal manner, with Coronation colours and flags galore as decorations. Three long tables laden with the delicious repast, insured the success of this part of the program, while the bevy of middy-clad C.G.I.T. girls was an inspiration in their songs, toasts and speaking.

A merry sing-song led by Misses Grace Stewart and Jean Ralston, brought the company of mothers and daughters into a happy, social frame of mind.

Miss Eunice Thexton, in her role as chairman and toast master, carried out an unusually interesting program, which she prefaced with a few remarks regarding the purpose of the C.G.I.T. and cordially welcomed all the guests.

The toast list was interspersed with an excellent musical program and opened with the customary toast to the King, to which "The National Anthem" was heartily sung.

Elva Darling showed the reverent attitude held for the church by her group, in her sincere toast, to which Rev. Dr. McLean responded, commending the work this branch of the church is accomplishing and paid high tribute to "our church" in general and to Knox church in particular.

Toast to Mothers.

In a loving tribute to the mothers Dorothy Battle proposed the toast in their honor, to which Mrs. J. Lancashire made fitting response.

"To our daughters" was the toast by Mrs. Stewart in glowing words of appreciation, while in reply her own daughter, Grace Stewart, expressed on behalf of the girls, their love and gratitude.

As one of the guests present, Rev. F. W. Craik spoke of the excellent work of the C.G.I.T. and of the wonderful plans laid out for them by the late pastor, Rev. Mr. McCormack. He gave them a word of challenge to "carry on" in his memory.

Musical Program.

The musical program included a group of vocal solos by little Betty Mather, who was accompanied at the piano by Adele Fitzgerald. These two charming little performers shared with each other the continued applause of the audience.

"Over Hill and Dale" and "King of the Forest" formed the group of delightful piano duets contributed by Misses Lenore Skitch and Helen Miller.

Another very pleasing number was the violin solo, "Adoration" by Miss Annabelle Heid, with Miss Musa Cox as accompanist. In vocal duet, Merle Sproule and Velma Stewart gave two much enjoyed numbers, "You Can't Play in Our Yard" and "Juanita." They were accompanied by Miss Gertrude Lancashire.

Miss Marion Coon, the guest of honour, who has become a great favorite as speaker for girls' meetings gave one of her interesting addresses on life and customs in China, stressing particularly home conditions as they came under her observation in everyday life as their missionary.

Mrs. Huffman, C.G.I.T. leader, on behalf of her group, made two presentations, one in appreciation, to Miss Coon and the other to one of her own C.G.I.T. workers, Miss Marjorie Lewis, in recognition of service.

Greetings were brought to the girls and their guests by the church officials, Mr. Morrison as senior elder and Mr. Gillies as general superintendent of the Sunday school, who spoke of the fine work being done by Mrs. Huffman and her group, and its value and influence to both the church and the school.

The girls' sing-song with kazoos led by Mrs. Huffman, proved an enjoyable diversion to the more serious side of the program.

A sincere vote of thanks was tendered the speaker, the soloist and all who contributed to the program, by Marjorie Lewis, who also included the boys of the A.S.K. class, who so capably served for the banquet.

"Taps," the regular C.G.I.T. closing exercise, brought to a successful conclusion this annual mother and daughter meet.

Coronation Evening Coat

Coronation evening coat in English cloth of gold woven on background of Crimson.

By LISBETH.

We may try to be hardboiled about all the pomp and ceremony of the Coronation; but underneath we're not. We are as thrilled as we can be, all of us, and want to read every word printed about it.

The clothes to be worn—those are what ar intriguing us women. A Coronation evening coat in English cloth of gold, woven on a background of Coronation crimson. The design of the fabric embraces emblems of the British Isles—roses, shamrocks, thistles, and leeks. This coat is by Reville, dressmaker to Dowager-Queen Mary.

A fascinating court dress, especially designed for the Coronation and completed for the Marchioness of Milford-Haven, is of gold lame, with embroidered belt and train, and the traditional three Prince of Wales feathers in the hair and feather fan.

The Duchess of Kent and the Duchess of Gloucester, sisters-in-law of the King, will be brilliant figures at the Coronation in Westminster Abbey. The former will be gowned in gold brocade with embroidery in gold and silver paillettes and glittering red cabuchon diamante in a feather design covering it, from Molyneux.

The Duchess of Gloucester is wearing ivory duchess satin lavishly embroidered in a fern pattern of pearls and gold. It has small net sleeves, which are also embroidered and is by Norman Hartnell.

The little princesses, Elisabeth and Margaret Rose, will wear white lace dresses for the ceremony, under purple robes, it is said.

At the Theatres

AT THE REGENT "GREEN LIGHT"

There is a "different" atmosphere to this picture. It is dramatically impressive in sections and is one of those "lesson" productions that happen every now and then to make a variation in the run of the mill output of the Hollywood entertainment factories.

If you liked the book of the same name, you will like the picture also. The story is followed very well, with the exception of Sonya, who was one of the important characters in the written form, but who isn't really needed in the pictured version.

Like "Magnificent Obsession," it is the transference to the silver sheet of an idea, and a very abstract idea at that. In the "Green Light," Dean Harcourt (Sir Cedric Hardwicke) believes that we are all a part of a "great parade" and that the individual matters little when compared to the onward and upward progress of the great human family.

Errol Flynn, that rakish personality of "Captain Blood" is the somewhat reserved and quietened young doctor, Newell Paige, who, through quixotic motives, takes on himself the blame for a major accident in a medical operation. He, as well as others in the story, has a chance to prove out the truth of the Dean's theory. Oddly enough, this central theme is not brought out with the insistence of the central motivating idea in the "Magnificent Obsession." It was observed in the book by too many words, and in the picture, it is rendered vague by the emotional appeal of the people who are trying it out.

Anita Louise is the pretty heroine, Phyllis Dexter, and Margaret Lindsay is the nurse, Frances Ogilvie, who loves Paige, who, in turn, loves Phyllis.

The big scenes revolve around the efforts of Paige to destroy the dreaded parasite that causes the "black death" in a certain section of Montana. He becomes a "human guinea pig" and wins out.

It is a compelling picturization of a story that everyone is talking about.—C.L.M.

WEDDINGS

CATHCART—BONNER.

A quiet wedding was solemnized on Monday (the birthday of the bride), at the parsonage of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, by the Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr, when Birdie Mae Bonner, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Bonner of Wallace Point, was united in marriage to Lawrence Elmer Cathcart, second son of R. Cathcart and the late Mrs. Cathcart, of Kendal, Ontario.

Witnesses to the ceremony were Miss Elizabeth Walker, organist at St. Paul's, and Miss Pearl Skinner. Mr. and Mrs. Cathcart left on the afternoon train for a short honeymoon trip.

Just Between Us Women

A Daily Chat With Examiner Neighbors, Conducted by Roberta.

WHEN I began to think, that it is very true which is commonly said, that the one-half of the world knoweth not how the other half lives.—Rabelais.

The world is a comedy to those who think, a tragedy to those who feel.—Horace Walpole.

Dear Friends:

We all have a tendency to measure the world by our own yardstick, and wonder why they do this or that, when if only they stopped to think, they could all do as we do. But how could they when their circumstance is not and never will be, like ours?

And more than that, everyone of us have a different nature, so that even twins, when they show some of the same traits, seem extraordinary. I have known people who lived next door to others who were starving, and they never even suspected it. Truly we do not know how the other half lives.

In a large family, all have different likes and dislikes, different appetites, other desires. How much more then, if they are born under different climates, with customs and religion and foods alien from ours, can we ever hope to understand how they live.

And I do not think that God ever meant that we should be too much alike, for what would we gain when we travelled? What pleasure would we derive if when we got to some distant port, we found exactly the same thing there that we had left behind.

I hope the Editor will pardon me if I refer to an editorial he had in the Examiner on Thursday, April 15th, entitled, "In search of Peace." If you haven't read it, hunt it up, for it is a classic. (And I am not trying to curry favor with him either in telling you this, but just passing on something real good to all of you.)

How can we, who live in peaceful surroundings, know the horror that is going on in the different parts of the world where wars and dictators and revolutions are going on? We can't do it, for how can you understand what you have never experienced?

I used to think why didn't the poor fools leave these places and save their lives even if they did lose their property, until a friend of mine told me some of the horrors she had gone through trying for months to get away from a certain place, until her hair went white and her health gave out so that she will never be a strong woman again, even altho' she did get free.

We read about them, but they are far away, and we cannot see what they are going through, we cannot know their despair at knowing they must stay where they are, because those in power will not let them get away, and have confiscated their money and property.

In our own lives, those who take things lightly can see the humour of our own tragedies, but those who feel go through a living hell. If only someone would teach us to take things more lightly, how much happier we all would be.

But if it takes those with imagination to accomplish things, the same imagination can work havoc because they can visualize and actually feel what the other fellow is going through. My doctor used to tell me I suffered more than my family when anyone of them was sick, so that when they were getting better, I was all in.

I do not read murder stories, nor hangings or electrocutions, because I go through this suffering with the condemned or the victim, and it does neither of us any good. And yet, to be of any real use, we must try to put ourselves in the other fellow's place, before we can help him intelligently. We must feel if he is downtrod, how we would like it, if he is underpaid, or bullied what we would want to do. More later.

Your Friend,
ROBERTA.

CHARLES S. HAIG TO REMAIN HEAD OF SCHOOL STAFF

Rumors Regarding Dismissal As Public School Principal Branded Untrue

AT CAMPBELLFORD

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, April 27. — Rumours regarding the dismissal and resignation of Principal Charles S. Haig of the Campbellford Public School were branded as absolutely false and without foundation in fact at the monthly meeting of the School Board held in the Public Library on Monday evening. Chairman of the Board, W. Roy Loucks stated to the board that considerable damage had also been done both to the board and to the principal by these insidious rumors which had no foundation as the Board had at no time suggested that the principal resign.

It was believed that the rumors which had been rampant since the Easter holidays were started following a Board meeting at which two parents of children attending the school had made complaints regarding treatment they alleged had been afforded their children. Principal Haig addressed the Board saying that he regretted that illness had kept him from the previous meeting on March 29 when charges were made of his catching a child by the throat and causing it to bleed. Saying that the boys had been told not to congregate in the wash rooms of the basement at recess, he explained that on the day the alleged offense was committed he caught a group of boys in the wash room, and as he attempted to restrain them from beating a hasty exit at his approach, by holding out his arms, it was possible as several of the boys were pushed against him, the young boy who was injured was scratched in the throat by the nails of his outstretched hand. This explained the principal was the only way he could explain the injuries occasioned by the boy.

IMPROVED ATTENDANCE

The inspector's semi-annual report of the Public School was read and showed that the attendance although an improvement over former years was still below that of other urban schools which employed a school nurse. The report also stated that 50 of the 113 class rooms in the inspectorate were receiving regular instruction in music with the Campbellford School being in the minority list. The establishment of facilities for teaching manual training would be a great benefit for the boys from second form upwards the report continued. The Board went on record as expressing complete satisfaction with the inspector's report. It was decided on motion of F. C. Bonnycastle and C. W. Pallier to interview the teachers to find which, if any, would be willing to take a summer course to qualify for teaching music.

BUILDING PROBLEM

The problem of acquiring the old high school building by the public school board was again considered. The building which is at present owned by the High School Board is rented to the Public School at an annual rental of $1.00, however, the proposal to install a centralized heating unit which will ultimately have to be done for both the Public School and the old High School presents a difficulty to the Board since the ownership of the building will have to be ascertained before any alterations to the building are considered. It was decided to authorize the secretary to have the deeds searched in order that the board might know how to proceed in gaining control of the building for the public school. Following the passing of the accounts the meeting was adjourned.

The government charged, meanwhile, that neutral warships patrolling Spain's Mediterranean coast—specifically, those of Germany — had failed to carry out provisions of the international agreement to isolate the civil war.

Fame to 1898

The Yukon achieved world-wide fame and, at the same time, separation from the Northwest Territories for administrative purposes with the gold rush that followed discovery of the yellow metal in the bed of Klondike River in 1896.

Gold-stakers thronged to the creeks from many lands. A city of 40,000 souls sprang up on the banks of the Yukon River and there, in Dawson City, began the boisterous days of gold-induced madness made famous by the pen of Robert W. Service.

The tents and ramshackle structures have given way to a modern city of scarcely 800 persons. A scattering of sour-dough prospectors still comb the hills and outlying creeks in search of minerals but generally the pick and cradle have been [illegible] the modern machinery of dredges.

The territory's local government is composed of a Comptroller and an elective legislative council of three members with three-year terms of office.

Speaker Blames Car Builders For The Many Highway Deaths

Should Put Speed Governors On All Cars, Mayor Long Tells Rotarians

'PASSING THE BUCK'

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, April 27. — "Passing the Buck" formed the subject of a rather unusual address delivered before Rotarians at their weekly luncheon held in the St. Lawrence Hotel here on Monday by Mayor F. F. Long. Introducing his subject the Mayor related the Biblical narrative of the man who killed his brother and in reply to questions regarding his brother's whereabouts replied, "I know not. Am I my brother's keeper?"

"Cain's home life was not what it should have been," said the Mayor. "He was the first human to be given an example of 'passing the buck,' although the Bible does not refer to the matter in just that way. When Adam was questioned regarding the eating of the forbidden fruit he replied, 'The woman tempted me and I did eat,' while Eve passed the blame off on a snake.' Thus has passing the buck passed down through posterity."

Blame Where It Belongs.

"Why not place the blame for tragedy where it belongs?" asked the speaker, referring to the ever-high infant mortality rate due to children playing with matches, falling into basins of boiling water, getting hold of bottles of poisonous medicine all due to the carelessness of someone else. Business for the undertaker is also aided by those careless souls who insist on contacting electrical circuits while having their morning ablutions, as well as by those departed souls who neglected to have the furnace repaired and are either fortunate enough to awaken in time to summon aid or are unfortunate.

"Why not place the blame where it belongs?" continued the Mayor as he launched into a tirade against the increasing number of deaths from automobile accidents. "There is at all times a safe speed, depending on the circumstances, and when this is exceeded death threatens."

As long as cars are built that will travel at tremendous speeds someone will want to step on the gas with utter disregard for their own and everyone else's safety. The speaker suggested that speed governors on all makes of cars and trucks might be a means of saving people from their own folly. It is the car manufacturer who is passing the buck here putting a death-dealing weapon in the hands of irresponsible persons. Governments are still passing the buck in the matter of level crossing tragedies. When a locomotive disputes the right-of-way with an automobile, it is passengers of the lighter vehicle for whom the inquest is held. There would be no excuse for the increasing number of accidents caused by glaring headlights if the government would enforce regulation of the proper kind of lights. The speaker voiced the opinion that a small spotlight with a range up to 500 yards might be used in conjunction with a new type of non-glare light in order to pick up signs and warnings posted on the road-side. "The majority of drivers rarely use their dimmers, so why not have headlights that are fool-proof?"

"Who is responsible for the often hungry children raised in the squalor and poverty of our slums? It is the government of every province, township and municipality as well as every prosperous lodge, club and organization who share in this duty to help these people who all too frequently end up in jail, insane asylum or the gallows. All these are passing the buck." "I feel that we do not fully realize what the other fellow is suffering," the speaker concluded, saying that poverty was the parent and the slums the kindergarten of vice.

"The answer to the question, 'Am I my brother's keeper?' is 'Yes'." H. N. Carr, M.L.A., moved the thanks of the club to Mayor Long for his very interesting address.

FLOOD WATERS DITCH EXPRESS CLAIM 4 LIVES

cars were derailed as the tracks depressed.

Main Line Tied Up Day

The main line would be open again for train operation late today and trains between Toronto and London were operated in the interval via Paris Junction and Stratford. The washout was 140 feet long by 12 feet deep, requiring 2,000 yards of filling.

Isbister had lived in Sarnia 30 years. He had more than 40 years service with the C.N.R., having started at 19. He was an engineer 25 years and is survived by his widow, Edith; two sons, Douglas of Queens University, and Leslie, London, and a brother, David Isbister, Elbow, Sask.

Aiken had spent all his life in Sarnia, most of it in the railway's service. He is survived by his widow, Rita, who came here upon receiving news of the tragedy; two children, Laverne and Douglas; a brother, Dr. L. R. Aiken, Courtright; three sisters, Mrs. A. G. Gilbert, Sarnia; Mrs. George Chesser, Petrolia; and Mrs. Wesley Morley, Alisa Craig; and his mother of Sarnia.

Efforts were being made to locate the body of the transient, but doubts were expressed the unknown victim would ever be identified.

The C.N.R. wreck might easily have had a counterpart on the Canadian Pacific Railway as a similar washout occurred at the 12th line north of the city where 300 yards of track was bitten away by the hungry Thames.

THAMES ROCKETS UP FOR 28 FEET

30,000,000 gallons and early to-day it was estimated only 10,000,000 gallons—two days' consumption — remained.

Dr. C. A. Harris, medical officer of health, issued an "imperative" warning against drinking water without first boiling it.

Mayor Kingsmill appealed to factories to remain closed to-day in order to conserve water supplies.

While it was feared farmers would be unable to reach the city, precipitating a milk shortage, dairy officials said their greatest present problem was to maintain house-to-house delivery. It was believed farmers using horse and wagon would be able to travel roads closed to motor traffic.

Only Two Roads Open.

No 2 highway to Lambeth and No. 4 to St. Thomas, which remained open after all others were closed, were flooded during the night.

In the city Wharncliffe road bridge was reported buckling before dawn, and York, Dundas and Adelaide street bridges were subjected to a pounding by the rushing, swollen waters.

Traffic east of London was possible only by a checkered course over soggy side roads leading to a gravel road and thence to Ingersoll.

The only railway artery open to the east for a time was the Canadian National line to Toronto by way of Stratford. Later the Canadian Pacific main line was reopened after a washout near Woodstock had been rebuilt.

On the C.N.R. line west only one track was used over the Cove bridge and a speed limit of 10 miles an hour put into effect.

Rescue work from the Wharncliffe road bridge head was suspended near midnight when the current of the rapidly rising waters became too strong for rescuers using rowboats. Two boatloads of 18 persons reached the bridge just before a halt to operations was called.

Relief headquarters at the Riverview school closed soon after midnight. Alderman Frank Gray and a staff of rescue workers drawn from the medical profession, St. John Ambulance Corps and the Salvation Army labored at this point.

CAMPBELLFORD, April 27. — High School Cadets were commended for their work at the annual inspection held in the school grounds on Monday. Captain L. H. Guarded so carefully...the Dionne Quins use only PALMOLIVE the soap made with Olive Oil!

FIVE LITTLE sleepy-heads, on their way to the Land of Nod! Rosy-cheeked, so sweet and clean . . . fresh from their bath with gentle Palmolive Soap!

And if you could see the smooth, satiny skin of those lovely Dionne Quins . . . then you would realize how wise Dr. Dafoe was when he decided that Palmolive, made with Olive Oil, should be used exclusively for bathing them.

WHY PALMOLIVE WAS CHOSEN!

Because the Quins were born prematurely, they have always had unusually sensitive skin. That is why, for sometime after their birth, they were bathed only with Olive Oil. Dr. Dafoe knew that nothing is so soothing for delicate skin as gentle Olive Oil.

Then, when the time came for soap and water baths, how important it was to choose a soap made from the gentlest, most soothing ingredients! And that is why Dr. Dafoe chose Palmolive, made with Olive Oil, to be used exclusively for bathing the Quins' tender skin!

WHAT A LESSON FOR EVERY WOMAN!

Mother! Why should you risk bathing your precious baby, or any of your children, with any soap less gentle, less soothing than the one chosen for the little Dionnes?

And you too, Lovely Lady . . . you who want to keep your complexion soft, smooth, alluring through the years! Why not give your skin the matchless beauty care that only Palmolive's secret blend of Olive and Palm Oils can give? Why not use this safe, gentle, pure Palmolive Soap for your own face and bath!

TO KEEP YOUR OWN COMPLEXION ALWAYS LOVELY, USE THIS BEAUTY SOAP CHOSEN FOR THE QUINS

Ontario Motorists Urged Drive Carefully, Justify The Boost In Speed Limit

President Of Ontario Motor League Addresses Peterboro' Club

ALEX. SOLLITT PRESIDENT

Drive carefully and justify the boost of the speed limit to 50 miles an hour, Ontario motorists were urged by Lumsden Cummings, president of the Ontario Motor League, in an address to the annual banquet of the Peterborough Automobile Club at the Empress Hotel last evening.

"If there is any increase in highway accidents this year, the public will attribute it to the increased speed limit whether the increase is to blame or not," Mr. Cummings said. "We as individual members of the League must conduct ourselves in such a way that others of the motoring public will follow our examples and avoid as many accidents as possible."

Wise Move

Commending the Legislature's step in moving the limit up from 35 miles an hour, Mr. Cummings said the League, in advocating the measure, had long felt it unwise to retain a law which did not have the sympathy of the motoring majority. The League believes the new speed law whose enforcement will be found practised will be found to the better interests of motoring safety and general respect for the law, he stated.

"I don't suppose there is anyone in this room who does not break the 35 miles an hour limit when he goes out on the road," he declared.

Election of Alex Sollitt as new president of the club was one of the highlights of the full program enjoyed by ninety members and guests. He succeeds to the post James Juby, three years in the presidential chair.

Executive

Other officers elected were J. A. McKone, vice-president; J. J. Dorris, secretary-treasurer and directors, W. E. Franks, J. H. Jamison, B. W. Harvey, Vic. Hamilton, D. J. Fitzgerald, H. O. Walker and Mr. Juby.

Present in addition to Mr. Cummings were W. G. Robertson of Toronto, general manager of the League; C. W. Kirkpatrick and W. A. Laidlaw of the Hamilton Automobile Club; C. F. Selby of Toronto, in charge of the League emergency services; T. A. Quay of Toronto, in charge of the League membership; and Jack Meiley, W. J. Clarke and J. F. Daniels.

Lobbying at Queen's Park in the interests of the motoring public was cited by Mr. Cummings as one of the most important services offered by the League. He said Highway Department ministers of the past and the present minister, Hon. T. F. McQuesten, have accorded the League generous hearings on all questions.

Lobby Work

"When the League speaks to the Department of Highways it speaks with one voice and that voice is you," he declared. "I am able to say the Department has always given our advice very favorable and generous attention."

Mr. Cummings was introduced by Mr. Robertson as the descendant of one of Canada's leading lumber families and a veteran of the Royal Flying Corps in the Great War.

Speaking on the League's activities in services of its members individually, Mr. Robertson said the public idea of the junctions of the League is rather vague. The League undertakes to give many helpful services not available to the general public he said.

Wide Service

He explained the League's information service was one of its most important functions. Touring data, letters of introduction to allied organizations in foreign countries and distribution of road books are typical of the services in this department, he said. Not long ago an inquiry concerning Canadian roads from a resident of China was handled, he stated.

The League's emergency road services are used 30,000 times annually he continued. On an average of 2,000 times a year, he said, League members run out of gas. He pointed to the emergency road service as one of the most important of functions.

New Service

Outlining other services such as legal assistance in cases of traffic infraction, he said a new service was added this year without increase of the $10 fee. This service, now in effect, provides personal accident insurance with a $1,000 death benefit and a number of lesser benefits, he explained.

Reporting on his stewardship during the past year, retiring president Juby said the club had carried out fully its regular functions. He made special mention of the tourist information bureau maintained last year, of many road signs erected, of service to members in connection with traffic infractions, and of many instances of emergency assistance given.

Treasurer James Dorris reported a satisfactory financial year with a balance on hand amounting to $510.

Three persons were killed when the Chicago-to-Montreal flyer, crack Inter-city Limited on the Canadian National Railway, line, struck a washout two miles east of Ingersoll, Ont., and was partially derailed. The engine, baggage car and one day coach plowed into a ten foot gap in the roadbed and sank in several feet of water. The fireman, Norman Aiken, Sarnia, and the engineer, Malcolm Isbister, Toronto, were instantly killed. The washout was caused by swirling waters of Thames River, swelled to all time high by continuous rain. CAMPAIGN STARTS FOR BIBLE SOCIETY

Canvassers Are Addressed By Rev. S. G. Pinnock Of Toronto

The Bible has now been translated into more than 700 different tongues but the work is still far from complete and many languages of the world are still without a translation of the Scriptures, Rev. S. G. Pinnock of Toronto, told women of Peterborough churches who gathered at the Y.M.C.A. to inaugurate the Bible Society campaign last night. The work of missionaries through the world would be impossible without the aid of the British and Foreign Bible Society of which the Upper Canada Bible Society is a branch, he declared.

The Society depends largely on the total of small contributions gathered throughout the country for its support, Rev. Pinnock said. Occasionally large contributions are received as in the case of a $15,000 check tendered recently by a Hamilton business man, he stated.

Vice-president William S. Hill presided at the meeting. The canvassers were given their official collectors books and maps of the districts which they will cover in the next two weeks.

THE STARS SAY . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Wednesday, April 28

While this may be a day for increase of fortune, with advanced values in real possession, or enhanced financial standing through legacies or insurance policies, yet there also are signs of adverse planetary conditions. A bereavement or death of an elder may account for the inheritance, but such finances or property may be imperilled by a tendency to rash, impulsive, extravagant or tempestuous behavior. Disharmony and quarrels seem to figure in this. Be prudent in personal relations.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of sound prosperity and increased possessions, coming through inheritance, insurance or deed of trust, attendant upon the death of an elder. These windfalls should be conservatively managed, lest reckless, impulsive, extravagant or indulgent conduct create regrettable or hazardous situations. Quarrels and jealousy figure, calling for restraint and prudence in the purely private relations.

A child born on this day may be brave, energetic, fond of hazards and adventurous, and, at the same time, it may be rash, tempestuous, quarrelsome and given to regrettable actions caused by temper and jealousies. It should be given early training and discipline in this respect.

CHARLTON'S RISE IN SOCCER WORLD A HISTORIC FEAT

London Squad Moved From Third To First Division In Record Spurt

WILL TOUR CANADA

LONDON, April 27.—(CP)—When Charlton Athletic Football Club plays in Canada and the United States this spring soccer enthusiasts will see a team that has risen from amateur mediocrity to stardom in England's professional ranks in 24 years.

The squad that now ranks as one of the strongest in the English League will play 13 games on its tour. With the opening match at New York May 30, subsequent games are carded for Pittsburgh, June 2; Detroit, June 5; Chicago, June 6; Calgary, June 9; Vancouver, June 12; Victoria, June 14; Saskatoon, June 17; Winnipeg, June 19; Toronto, June 23; Philadelphia, June 26; New York, June 27; Montreal, June 30.

A party of 30, made up of Athletic's No. 1 team, reserves and officials will sail from Southampton, May 19 and after landing at Quebec will entrain at once for New York.

Thirty-four years ago a bunch of youngsters cured a hot tussle with a rival team of "pick-ups" in a London park. "Let's form a club," said one ambitious youth, a butcher's delivery boy. They did. Then followed an unprecedented football evolution that culminated in a record-breaking rise from third to first division in three years.

The club formed as the outcome of the scrub game in 1903 was known as East Street Mission. Playing under different names the club advanced in amateur ranks and in 1908 became known as Charlton Athletic. Going from strength to strength the team had its roster shattered by the war but it was revived in 1919.

Professionalism was adopted in 1921, Charlton becoming a member of the southern section of the third division. For years the outfit played with indifferent success but won promotion to the second division in 1928. After five years the Londoners were relegated to their former status but the coming of Jimmy Seed, famous international, as manager in 1934, resulted in a transformation.

Advance Fast

Under Seed's guidance, Charlton advanced into the second division in 1935 and made football history by winning promotion to the major league the following year. During the past winter, their first season in the big circuit, Charlton's plucky representatives have challenged strenuously for the championship, only faltering during the last month of the campaign.

The club that had 17 spectators at its first match in 1903, recently performed before a record crowd of 80,000 in its modern stadium. Its annual revenue amounts to about $350,000, expenses swallowing up $175,000. Players' salaries average about $2,000 a season, in sharp contrast to figures written after names on baseball and hockey rosters in Canada and the United States.

Seed will be in charge of the team on tour. He is looking forward to a reunion with his brother, John, at Three Rivers, Que. They last saw each other 18 years ago.

The players making the trip will be:

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

CARRYING our collapsible periscope aloft to what the younger set of the carriage trade refer to as "Lovers' Lane" on Armour Hill, we took a long-distance squint at the C.O.B.L. set-up the other day. There was a fog over Kingston—or maybe it was a smoke screen thrown up by Joe Daley—and naught could be discerned there for the time being. We ran the probable Napanee '37 lineup yesterday, while th Peter' picture is slowly taking form and will be projected on The Examiner screen shortly. Down Trenton Airport way naught could be seen but lacrosse sticks. Not a sign of life, either, in Belleville—looked like the Deserted Village. Which left nothing to view but the layout in Oshawa. And now, with the strike more or less settled, athletics will soon be bestirring in the town of General Motors.

* * * * * *

A guy named Art Legge will manage the GM-men this semester, and a new bunch of General Motors' officials will handle the executive end. Such stalwarts as George Ansley, Fud Lane and Sammy Lowe apparently will take no active interest in the club this year. The company will not even sponsor a junior squad—which is a shame—after winning Provincial honors last year. The ball club will be run much more economically this season. Well, all this may make it not so enjoyable for the players but the team, which won the C.O.B.L. and Ontario flags in '36, will be just about as strong as ever. They should still be the club to beat for the 1937 Central League title. Or so it seems at this early date.

* * * * * *

YE GM-men lost their two 1936 catchers and one heaver, Jack Turner. However, they have imported a good Oshawa receiver named Bennett and may also get Dick Mitchell, the Cobourg catcher who worked out with the Toronto Leafs. As for pitching, Turner only went so-so and will not be missed by them too much. They still have their ace flinger, Lefty Biddle, though we feel he will not be quite the mystery to rival hitters in this loop the coming season that he was his first year in C.O.B.L. company. The Oshawa team also have Dose Ogden and Lefty Willis, and they'll probably take up one or two of their good ex-junior moundsmen.

* * * * * *

ON the infield, Oshawa will have Wallace on first, Jubenville on second, Miller or Osborne for short, and May at third. A smart infield. They have their trio of last year's outfield—Mathews, Hurst and Rowden. A mighty smart outfield—but, then, they have also Foley of Peterborough. Since Rowden and Mathews are .400 hitters and Hurst, a speedy gardener, is only a fair clouter, it looks like the ex-Petes' star hitter and centre-fielder will put Hurst on the bench. This is the way the whole picture appeared through our periscope atop Armour Hill. It looks like a strong Oshawa squad again with good pitching, fielding and hitting. The fact that there were several parked cars in "Lovers' Lane" that eve sort of made us hurry our survey somewhat as a periscope in that vicinity at twilight is regarded with grave suspicion!

AT Duffus' last gloaming the lacrossers had a business meeting and reported everything going along okay with the club. Finances are coming pretty fair and work on the new box is progressing. They want the players to help at the field the next three evenings, too. A vote of thanks to the city was passed for a lot of assistance in their project. Manager and coach will be named at next Monday night's meeting. This committee will go to Cobourg on Friday for the group session to draw up the schedule: Bud Fisher, Doug. Miller, Charlie Carson, George Mein and Fred Nelson. The locals want Tuesdays or Fridays for home tilts. Their playing season will probably commence about the first of June.

CHURCH Softball Loop executive met at the "Y" last p.m. to clean up a lot of work. They extended deepest sympathy—and we do, also, to their secretary, Don Charlton, upon the death of his father. It was decided to hold the last day for entries open till May 3rd and then draw up the schedules. The season will start that day with Mark St. Seniors, 1936 champs, playing St. Paul's at Central at six bells, if grounds are available. Sure senior entries include these two teams and Knox, Murray St., George St. with two squads, and All Saints. The latter will have a junior team, and Park St. will sponsor a juvenile entrant. In bantam so far are George St., Park St., Knox, All Saints and St. Luke's. Others are requested to get in touch with one of the executive right away. Prexy Len Agnew's phone number is 2966 J.

ANOTHER softball session last night was the Southend League one when DeLaval, Keene and C.G.E. Armature Dept. were accepted, to make it an eight-team circuit. Others are Nationals, Cogs, Maple Leafs, Cardinals and Orphans. Schedule will be run in two halves with the top three in each half in playoffs. In the schedule, each team plays the other three times except for Keene, which will have one tussle at home and one away with each of the others. Their games in Peterborough count double points. To-morrow eve was set aside to fix up the grounds and each team should have someone on hand to help. Various rules and schedule will be published later. League opens May 17th and final date to sign players is June 14th. This circuit should have a first-route season.

A new local softball league, the Boy Scouts' Loop, will be organized soon and start playing toward the end of May. Open to Boy Scouts and Cubs and entries must be in by May 24th to any of this committee: Chairman W. Anderson, E. Wolff, Bob Baldwin, E. Creighton and S. Leggitt. Elsewhere to-night is an article regarding a short Scouts' softball tourney, starting right away, which will wind up with final play-offs at the Lakefield Jamboree on May 24th. Outside teams will be on deck for this Jamboree, too. In the local tournament, the four sections of Peterborough will have entries, declaring winners in their own series and meeting the other leaders in semi-finals—Schedules have been drawn up.

Central Wins Opener In School Loop 32-7

King Edward dropped a 32-7 School Softball League opening game to Central yesterday on the latter's grounds to start off this loop's schedule. Bashing the ball all over the lot and going wild in the third frame, to tally 13 runs, the uptown crew had no trouble trimming their southend rivals. Hits and errors by the K. E. kids gave Central their runs while the winners played a good defensive game with pitching and fielding. From the second frame on, the losers were helpless, but the victors continued to smear the apple and scored 10 in the sixth. The teams:

Central: Moorhead, 2b; Clark, p; Lomax, c; Ascott, 1b; Lee, lf; Weese, cf; Halcrow, 3b; Millen, ss; Mundell, rf.

Score by innings:

King Edward	0	0	0	2	0	0	0	—	7

Curling Trophies Presented To Lakefield Club Members

Delightful Musical Program One Of Features At Annual 'At Home'

LARGE ATTENDANCE

LAKEFIELD, April 27.—The combined Ladies' and Men's Curling Clubs of Lakefield held their annual 'at home' in the Memorial Hall, Lakefield, on Friday evening, April 23, when they entertained between 80 and 100 persons to a pleasant evening of cards. An important feature of the evening was the presentation of curling trophies won during the past season by members of the two clubs.

The first part of the evening was spent at cards, prizes being won by: Mrs. Wm. Charlton, ladies' high; D. Davis, gentleman's high; Mrs. Geo. Spence, ladies' consolation; Mr. J. R. Hull, gentlemen's consolation. Rev. Malaire was winner of the lucky chair prize.

C. S. Tanner, president of the Lakefield's Men's Club, acted as chairman for the presentation of trophies and prizes. Mrs. George Spence, president of the Ladies' Curling Club, assisted in the distribution of prizes, all of which were beautifully wrapped in a striking crimson and gold colour combination.

Musical Program.

Miss Winnie Payne opened the program with a delightful rendering of the vocal solo, "I Passed By Your Window." She was accompanied on the piano by Mrs. H. E. Moore.

Mrs. Geo. Spence, ladies' president, then made a short address, mentioning the enjoyable time the ladies had during the winter, in spite of bad weather which interfered with the smooth running off of schedules. She thanked the ladies for their co-operation, stating that the Lakefield club, which boasts thirty members, is one of the largest ladies' clubs in Ontario, and mentioned, expressing appreciation on behalf of the club, the new ladies' trophy donated by F. L. Erskine. Mrs. Spence then called on D. H. Charlton, manager of the Lakefield rink. Mrs. T. W. Chaplin read an address to Mr. Charlton, thanking him on behalf of the ladies for his assistance during the past year, and presenting him with a token of their appreciation.

Mr. Charlton replied, thanking the ladies.

The prizes for the ladies' open bonspiel were won by Mrs. MacKerchar, Mrs. D. H. Webster, Mrs. T. W. Chaplin and Miss Elsie Kidd, skip. D. H. Charlton presented the prizes and Miss Kidd spoke on behalf of her rink, saying that it was a pleasure to participate in the bonspiel. She expressed appreciation to Mrs. Spence and the executive for the work they did in keeping the club together despite bad weather conditions.

Bailey Cup Winner.

E. W. Bailey presented the Bailey cup, which was won by Mrs. D. J. Campbell, Miss Winnie Payne and Mrs. T. F. Wannamaker, skip. Miss Winnie Payne received the trophy in the absence of Mrs. Wannamaker.

F. L. Erskine presented the new Erskine trophy, a silver rose bowl which he donated to Ladies' Club to be presented annually to the winners of the ladies' rink. The trophy was won this year by Miss Clarice Kidd's rink, composed of Mrs. E. Moore and Miss Clarice Kidd, skip. Miss Kidd replied, thanking Mr. Erskine for the trophy and her rink for their co-operation. "It is an honour to be the first winners of the Erskine trophy," she said.

Mrs. J. R. Hull sang as solo, "There's a Land." She was accompanied by Mrs. Moore.

Prizes for the opening bonspiel run off by the Men's Club were won as follows:

H. Pemberthy, E. Waldon, J. H. Payne and D. H. Charlton, skip, carried off the first prizes, while Jno. Harvey, D. J. Campbell, C. C. Stenner and E. H. Northey, skip, were runners-up.

Fitzgerald Cup Winner.

J. W. Ridpath presented the Fitzgerald cup, which was won by E. J. Millage, W. W. Yale, R. C. Chittick and E. H. Northey, skip. Mr. Northey responded, expressing appreciation of the faithful co-operation of the members on his rink who, he said, deserved a large part of the credit for this victory.

J. M. Simpson presented the Casement Cup, won by H. Atwood, B. Kidd, R. D. Murduff and E. W. Bailey, skip. Mr. Bailey replied, stating that this was the first year he had acted as skip, except temporarily.

C. B. Tanner presented the E. A. Tanner Cup which was won by E. W. Bailey, W. Spence, B. Kidd and R. D. Murduff, skip. Mr. Murduff spoke briefly, expressing thanks on behalf of his rink.

Rev. Creighton presented the Dawson Cup, which was won by Mrs. D. J. Campbell, Mr. T. W. Chaplin, Mrs. C. H. Hunter and Mr. B. G. Dench, skip, in the mixed competition. Mr. Dench replied in a humorous vein, mentioning that the cup would be passed among the members of his rink during the year so as to show no partiality. He presented it to Mrs. Hunter, his vice-skip, who is entitled, he said, to hold it for the first quarter of the year.

The runners-up in this competition were Mrs. D. H. Charlton, Mr. H. Hamblin, Mrs. F. Wannamaker and F. L. Erskine, skip.

The first and second stone bonspiel was won by E. J. Millage, E. Waldon, D. J. Campbell and Ed. Watson, skip.

After the presentation of prizes, dainty refreshments were served in cafeteria style. The singing of the National Anthem brought the party to a close.

Leaves Sarnia

Rocky Pavlos (above), outstanding halfback for the Sarnia Imperials, who has resigned from his position in the Oil City and returns to his home in Grand Rapids, Mich. Parsaca, a member of the team which took the Canadian senior rugby football title last year, was noted for his forward passing.

NEW GOAL POSTS ARE PRESENTED

Brinton Manager Makes Gift—Clubs Receive Registration Forms

After so many years fostering soccer in the city, the Peterborough and District Football Association, finds itself in a very unfortunate position financially through a poor season of activity during 1936 and unless some slight recognition from the sporting public, many improvements that have been completed every year to make the playing field in proper condition will have to be abandoned.

Goal Posts Presented.

Through the generosity of the manager of the Brinton Carpet works, a set of new goal posts will be used on King Edward Park. A committee of the clubs have made final arrangements to erect the goal posts on Thursday evening, at seven o'clock. All players are requested to keep off the field until the standards are put in position.

All the local clubs paid their entry fee of three dollars to the association and the representatives were handed over fifteen registration forms. The representative of the Canada Packers immediately handed out the forms in the room and left to sign up other players.

No official appointment has been made of the groundsman for the season but will be settled next Monday night.

Bowmanville Enters.

The secretary of Bowmanville has informed the board that they will enter the league but are endeavouring to get Oshawa to declare themselves as associated with the local league.

After a very interesting discussion it was carried on an amendment that any player can sign for outside or local clubs if he so desires.
